NEW COMPANIES FORMED

Dominion Steel and Coal Corp. has formed two new subs diary companies, both to have headquarters in Montreal, President T. J. Emmett said Monday in Toronto. The new companies are Dosco Industries Ltd. and Dosco Steel Ltd. Dosco Industries will manage the parent company's steel fabrication and transportation operations while Dosco Steel will manage steel production and finishing plants.

TWO PROJECTS SET

Construction will begin immediately on two new projects by the Steel Co. of Canada Ltd. the company said Monday in Hamilton. The company plans to build a new mill in Hamilton capable of rolling both wire rods and round bars. It also plans to enlarge its bar mill equipment at the Notre Dame works in Montreal, then move it to the works at Contrecoeur.

STOCKS ACQUIRED

E. B. Eddy, president of Canadian International Paper Co., said Monday in Montreal the company has acquired all the shares of Griswold Corp. (1961) Ltd. of Montreal. The purchase included two wholly-owned subsidiaries of Griswold —Griswold Engineering Ltd. and Griswold Engineering (Western) Ltd.

Court Takes Blackbird Under Wing

CLACTON, England (AP)— "I'm sorry," said a police inspector interrupting a trial, "but will your worships notice the blackbird flying above your worships' heads?"

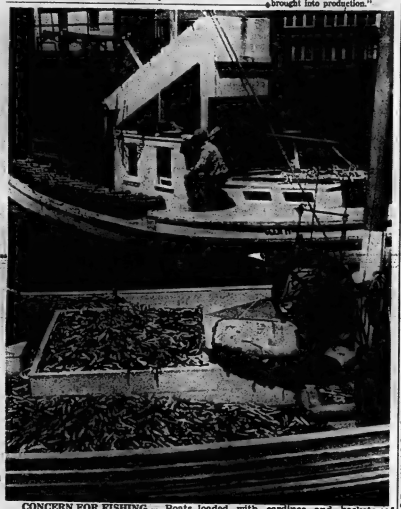
Sure enough, a blackbird was fluttering overhead.

Inspector Norman Adams spoke again:

"Do your worships mind if I open the courtroom window so the bird can continue building its nest?"

The chief magistrate hesitated for a moment and replied:



"No, we don't mind. As long as it doesn't interfere with justice, give the bird every facility to continue building its nest."

Throughout the court's proceedings Monday the blackbird flew in and out of the window bringing straw and other nest-building material with every trip.

The magistrate said later:

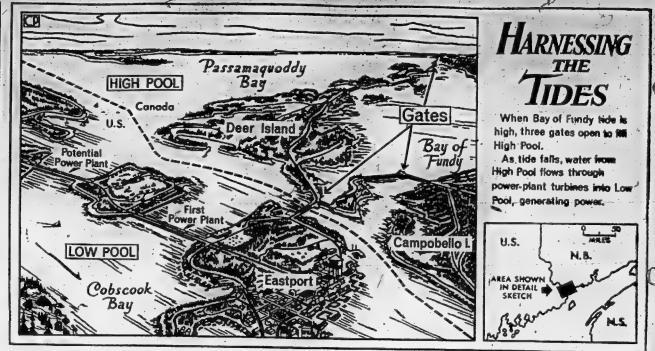
CONCERN FOR FISHING — Boats loaded with sardines and baskets of herring scales lie by the dock in Eastport, Me., on Passamaquoddy Bay. U.S. Interior Secretary Stewart Udall says the International Joint Commission reported in 1961 that the proposed Passamaquoddy power project would have little effect on the important sardine industry. New Brunswick Premier Robichaud has expressed concern that the project might cause major damage to the province's fishing industry. (CP Photo from AP)

The Latest on Passamaquoddy

Optimism Over the Biggest Harness Job in History

By HAROLD MORRISON

WASHINGTON (CP) — Interior Secretary Stewart Udall says he is convinced Canada and the United States will soon be able to start negotiating an agreement to harness the 26-foot Passamaquoddy Bay tides to produce 1,000,000 kilowatts of one-hour-a-day power to benefit the Maritimes and New England states.



And he says he believes that once current problems are cleared away, an agreement on the $1,000,000,000 Passamaquoddy project will be easier to put together than the one the two nations finally completed on harnessing the Columbia River.

"I'm optimistic, but the important thing is to get the fish problem resolved, once and for all" says the rugged 44-year-old outdoorsman who sees world leadership in the harnessing of massive power now shifting from the Soviet Union to North America.

SEES BIGGER THINGS

"In Passamaquoddy we have more than a power project," Udall said in an interview. "We've got the pilot project of a unique experiment—the harnessing of tides in North America.

"If this proves a success, and we believe it will, all the technical data would be turned over to Canada so that even bigger and more profitable tidal areas in the Bay of Fundy may be brought into production."

HARNESSING THE TIDES

MOON POWER MOOTED — The gigantic Passamaquoddy Bay power project being pushed by U.S. Interior Secretary Stewart Udall would harness power from the 26-foot tides in the bay, which runs off the larger Bay of Fundy. Tides, the result of gravitational forces of the sun and moon, predominantly the moon, reach up to 50 feet in the Bay of Fundy, the highest tides in the world. A tidal project is under construction below the Cherbourg Peninsula of France but until now no electric power has ever been produced from the moon-driven tides. The Passamaquoddy project, with 7½ miles of ocean dams forming two pools, would trap the incoming tidewaters and provide a storage pool for the water later to be dropped through turbines into the lower pool formed by adjacent Cobscook Bay. Udall has placed completion date at about 15 years from now. Cost of the project, estimated at $1,000,000,000, would be paid under Udall's plan by the U.S. Power would be sold to Canadian purchasers at cost. (CP Newsmap)

* * *

Udall pursues the Passamaquoddy with vigilance. Since the Canadian constitution vests natural resources in the provinces, he also has been pursuing Premier Louis Robichaud of New Brunswick, feeling that once he has Robichaud's firm support, it would be an easier matter to draw the Canadian government to the negotiating table.

At a meeting with Udall here, Robichaud said in fact that he is ready to endorse the project, but first he wants to be convinced the proposed seven miles of dams and gates won't cause major damage to the New Brunswick fishing industry.

SURPRISED BY ISSUE

"Our people are surprised that this issue should be raised at this time," Udall said. "Our early studies didn't show any major damage to resources. So I am hopeful that the technicians now making another study will soon bring in a satisfactory report, resolving the issue once and for all."

In 1961, the Canada-U.S. International Joint Commission concluded that the project would cause some fractional damage to Passamaquoddy fisheries but would have "very little effect on the important sardine industry and only a minor effect on other fisheries." The U.S. project would include two fishways to allow fish to move freely from the Atlantic Ocean to the bays.

Under the American plan, now endorsed by President Lyndon Johnson, the U.S. would put up all the construction costs, including the gates and dams on the Canadian side of the boundary. At present, the U.S. concept includes offering some of the Passamaquoddy power to New Brunswick and Nova Scotia at cost, though this would be a matter for negotiation.

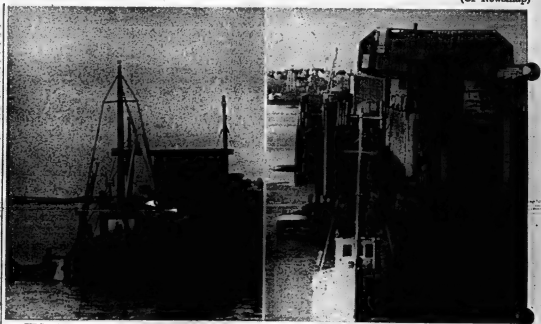
WANTS PACKAGE DEAL



He believes New Brunswick also would benefit from the proposed installation of a 250,000-kilowatt plant and dam at Dickey, Me., on the upper part of the Saint John River. Only about five per cent or 4,500 acres of this dam would spread into New Brunswick territory but by controlling the waters, New Brunswick's power potential on the lower parts of the river can be increased by one-third over the present estimate.

Udall said.

"Our hope is to get congressional authority for the Dickey dam this spring. Since a small part of the proposed reservoir would extend into Canadian territory, we would require a Canadian agreement before we could proceed. We would prefer an executive agreement rather than a treaty, which would have to be submitted to Congress for endorsement.

"We also would like to negotiate the whole Passamaquoddy package at the one time with Canada, instead of tackling it on a piece-by-piece basis. Building the Passamaquoddy will open up a lot of construction work opportunities. Naturally, many Canadian workers would be hired.

"Aside from that, the increased availability of power, the miles of new highway that would link New Brunswick and Maine and the enhanced facilities for recreation and sightseeing would add to the tourist attraction of that area and increase industry opportunities."

UPS AND DOWNS ON PASSAMAQUODDY BAY — The 26-foot tides of Passamaquoddy Bay, which the Canadian and United States governments have long wanted to harness for power, are illustrated in these pictures showing high and low tides at Eastport, Me. U.S. Interior Secretary Stewart Udall says he is convinced the two government will soon be able to start negotiating an agreement to harness the tides. (CP Photo from AP)

Provinces

hinted at possible "double taxation" in Quebec if Ottawa didn't act fast, said Monday this possibility had been avoided. There had been "an immense step forward" in federal recognition of provincial needs. Mr. Lesage presents his annual budget speech next Friday.

In the Commons, Opposition Leader Diefenbaker said Mr. Pearson's decision was "an evolutionary . . . as a shotgun marriage."

Approving the increase in provincial tax powers, Mr. Diefenbaker noted that it will be the third major increase in seven years.

In 1957, the provinces had only 10 per cent of personal income taxes. This was boosted to 13 per cent in 1958, and in 1962 was put on a sliding scale starting at 14 per cent.

Mr. Pearson gave a breakdown of increases next year. Ontario will rise $21,200,000 and Quebec $17,650,000—for exceeding other provinces.

Mr. Pearson announced another plan that will give Quebec extra revenues — probably of even more than 50 per cent of personal income taxes—by opting out of the new federal plan of family allowances for students aged 16 to 17.

WON'T MAKE PAYMENTS

Since Quebec already makes similar payments, Mr. Pearson said that province will receive tax compensations instead. He understood the compensation will amount to about $14,000,000 a year.

He also said Quebec and any other province may opt out of the proposed new federal plan of interest - free loans to university students, receiving compensations if it provides the loans.

In addition, Mr. Pearson said he expects "soon" to enter arrangements with Quebec for the province to opt out of certain fully existing shared - cost programs.

In a letter to provincial premiers last Thursday made public Monday, Mr. Pearson said he was submitting his proposals "in the belief that they will help to unify the country."

In an apparent reference to recent strains on federal-provincial relations, Mr. Pearson told the Commons:

"The government of Quebec . . . has made very clear its deep belief that the wishes of all Canadians can best be fulfilled within a federal structure.

"The government of Quebec has assured us it is resolutely determined that provincial rights should be exercised not to the detriment but to the enhancement of the unity of Canada."

ROBARTS MAKES PROMISE

Premier Bennett of British Columbia said the prime minister "deserves full credit for taking second looks" at both pensions and tax-sharing.

In the Commons, Mr. Diefenbaker, while promising support in principle of the new pension deal, sarcastically criticized the government for having switched pension plans during the last year "with all the strength and unresilience of a reed."

George Nowlan, former Conservative finance minister, said there had been "all error and no trial" in working out the federal plan.

Mr. Pearson replied: "Trial and error and eventual success is better than five years of no action."

The government had put forward its two previous versions of the Canada Pension Plan as the basis for discussions with the provinces. It was not apologizing for making changes—"the fundamentals have never changed."

VOICE SUPPORT

All opposition party spokesmen voiced support—at least in principle—for the new moves on the pension and tax - sharing fronts, though Creditiste spokesman Gilles Gregoire reiterated his party's demand that Quebec should have the whole income tax pot.

The proposed new pension plan is expected to start rolling sometime next year at the earliest.

The first step would be to obtain a constitutional amendment allowing coverage of widows, orphans and disabled contributions under age 65.

The proposed plan would be a uniform one which could be administered by any province on its own—a step Quebec is expected to adopt.

But even if Ottawa administers the program in any province the pension fund remains expected to top $2,000,000,000

'Jest a Second'

—y 10 years — would be fully available for provincial investments.

COVERS MORE PEOPLE

The new plan would cover substantially more people than the former federal plan. It would be compulsory for all employees earning over $600 a year and for all self-employed persons earning over $1,000. The old plan wasn't mandatory for the self-employed.

Contributions would average three per cent—shared 1½ per cent each by employers and employees—on incomes between $600 and $5,000 a year. The self-employed would pay nearly the full three per cent. The former federal plan called for a shared two - per - cent contribution.

But benefits would be higher — 25 per cent of earnings up to $5,000 as against 20 per cent on earnings up to $4,500. Thus the maximum monthly payment would be $104 instead of $75.

The maximum benefit will be reached after 10 years — the same maturity period as under the former federal plan — instead of the 20 years planned under the Quebec scheme.

MAKES ALLOWANCE

The former federal plan allowed benefits to be payable at age 65 only if the pensioner was fully retired. The new plan would allow him to keep working and still draw the pension, though his benefit would be scaled down if earnings after 65 exceeded a certain — unspecified—level.

The new plan, like the former, would provide for an increase in the $5,000 earnings ceiling—and thus an increase in maximum pension—as Canada's average wage level rises in future. It also adopts a feature of the Quebec plan allowing a cost-of-living escalator for benefits

He also testified that answers to two questions in the examination papers were in the handwriting of the school principal. Corrections in two other questions were also in Mr. Tutt senior's handwriting, he said.

Two paragraphs in the paper Mr. Wilcox said, corresponded closely to two paragraphs in the book "Linda Rose Gill, one of the school's top students.

Inspector Laurence R. Gartner of the criminal investigation branch of the provincial police, said he was called to the offices of the department of education in September. He said he was shown examination papers of Donald Bruce Tutt, John Gregg Murray and other students of the Fergus district high school.

The documents, including examination papers and name slips, were turned over by the attorney - general's criminal laboratory Sept. 18, 1963, "as the student Jon Gregg Murray had appealed his mark in English literature."

Insp. Gartner said he subsequently visited Donald Tutt senior on two occasions and was given samples of his handwriting willingly.

The inspector said after the examinations were written, the papers were handed to the teacher in charge and then given to the principal to be placed in the school vault until after the last examination was written.

They were then sent to Toronto, he said. Five persons had access to the vault and Mr. Tutt had told him the vault had been broken into, added Insp. Gartner.

Labor Congress Prepared To Back Union Trustees

By ROBERT RICE

MONTREAL (CP)—The Canadian Labor Congress is prepared to stand behind the government's marine union trustees in their campaign to root out labor lawlessness on the Great Lakes waterfront.

This was made clear in a statement Monday to the 1,600 delegates gathered here for the CLC convention that the executive council of the CLC, the 21-member policy body of the congress.

The congress stand comes up for debate Thursday, but all indication point to overwhelming approval by the convention.

In session, the CLC has decided to allow the marine union trustee time in which to consider their plans for restoring democracy to the Seafarers' International Union of Canada before finally assuring labor stability in the Great Lakes shipping industry.

CLC president Claude Jodoin told the convention that the "shortcomings" of a peace pact signed by Hal Banks and Paul Hall, North American president of the SIU, are recognized by the congress.

CITES SHORTCOMINGS

Later in an interview, he said the congress wants to see the retention in office by the trustees of certain officials of the seafarers union denounced by a federal inquiry as lawless, obedient underlings of deposed SIU president Hal Banks.

In his statement to the convention, Mr. Jodoin said the executive council believes the trustees are "sincerely endeavoring to work out a course of action designed to bring industrial peace and democratic unionism to the maritime industry in Canada."

He said this belief was based on the terms of the trustees' peace pact with the SIU and on assurances from the trustees that they "fully intend to carry out their mandate under the trusteeship legislation."

The trustees' deal with Mr. Hall had been sharply attacked by opposition spokesmen in Parliament and by spokesmen for two of the unions under the trusteeship — the Canadian Brotherhood of Railway, Transport and General Workers, and the National Association of Marine Engineers.

CRITICISM MUTED

Their criticism has become muted in the wake of general support for the actions of the trustees so far, and by their promises of further reforms within the SIU.

Mr. Jodoin divorced the CLC completely from the trustees' arrangement with the SIU. A plan aimed at restoring constitutional control of the SIU to the membership and at ending harassment of Canadian ships in United States lakeports.

"The congress wishes it to be clearly understood that it was not a party to this agreement, nor is the congress bound in any way by its provisions."

At the same time, he set out the conditions under which the CLC will someday consider an application by the SIU for readmittance to the central labor body, from which it had been expelled four years ago for raiding.

MUST MEET STANDARDS

To rejoin, he said, the SIU must meet the standards of ethical conduct, sound leadership, democratic administration and all other constitutional requirements of the CLC.

Once the SIU is back in the CLC, he added, consideration will be given to the trustees' plan to merge unions in the marine industry into two separate bodies—one for seamen and one for engineers and officers.

But this proposed integration of unions will not take place without the free will and consent of the members of all unions concerned, he said.

Mr. Jodoin said the CLC executive council is maintaining close contact with the trustees and is keeping them posted on the congress views "on all aspects of the situation."

Mr. Jodoin's policy statement was endorsed by William J. Smith, national president of the Canadian Railway, Transport and General Workers, and after a three - hour caucus of CBRT members—left the decision whether to criticize the trustees' position up to individual members.

A divergence of views, even among top CBRT officers, was evident but no vote was held. Indications are that some CBRT members will speak out at the CLC convention against the trustees' actions, but the union itself will not mount a campaign against the CLC's plan for a wait-and-see attitude.

Mr. Churchill (PC—Winnipeg South Centre) said uncertainty and confusion have shrouded DVA policy for three months. He called on the government to make a clear, definite policy statement.

His own party's stand in office and in opposition had been quite clear and consistent—it was, "Hands off the veterans hospitals."

There were 150,000 disabled veterans on pension and 80,000 more were entitled to free treatment in DVA hospitals. The number would increase as more and more veterans reached old age.

APPROVE RULE CHANGES

Mr. Churchill introduced his non-confidence motion after the Commons unanimously approved changes in its rules of procedure for a trial period of six weeks, starting immediately.

The main innovation provides for regular 90-minute debates after the normal adjournment hour of 10 p.m. EST on Monday, Tuesday and Thursday. But if opposition MPs request them, they will be allowed to bring up three separate grievance or argumentative questions every time there is such an "adjournment debate" on current issues. Ministers will be asked to reply briefly for the government.

The other rule changes provide for tighter restrictions on oral questions with the aim of abbreviating the daily question period, and limiting to 5½ hours debates on motions for the publication of government documents. These debates can drag on indefinitely under the old rules.

In the veterans hospitals debate, Mr. Herridge said he agreed in principle with the Conservative non - confidence motion, but gave no indication how his party will vote tonight.

He said vacant wings in DVA hospitals might be leased to local authorities for use for civilian patients in view of widespread hospital bed shortages. But DVA hospitals should on no account pass out of federal control.

Dr. Guy Marcoux (SC—Quebec-Montmorency) and Creditiste leader Real Caouette both endorsed the transfer of DVA hospitals. Mr. Caouette said it was a good policy and Dr. Marcoux saw nothing wrong with the idea.

Highway Toll Down in Ratio To Miles Driven

TORONTO (CP)—Although 38 more persons died on Ontario roads last year than in 1962, the death rate decreased in proportion to the total mileage of vehicles, the statistical report of the department of transport showed Monday.

The report said 1,431 persons were killed in Ontario traffic accidents in 1963—an increase of 2.7 per cent over 1962. However, the department estimated that seven persons were killed for every 100,000,000 miles travelled in 1963 compared with 7.3 the previous year.

The transport department said drivers travelled 20,000,000,000 miles, almost 2,000,000,000 miles more than in 1962. The estimate was based on gasoline sales.

Ten communities with populations of more than 10,000 — Chatham, Cobourg, Kenora, Owen Sound, Pembroke, Preston, Port Colborne, Richmond Hill, Riverside and Timmins—had no traffic fatalities during 1963.

Will Hold Inquest Into Man's Death

KINGSTON (CP) — Coroner Dr. D. W. Boucher said Monday he will hold an inquest into the shotgun death of James Sherman, 27, of Kingston. He said the inquest will probably be held next week.

Sherman died about three a.m. Monday, about two hours after being admitted to hospital with a shotgun wound in the stomach.

Police said Sherman suffered the wound while riding in the back seat of his car, which was being driven by Lawrence Kearns of Kingston.

Kearns told police he heard the gun go off in the back seat of the car. He turned to see Sherman slump in the back seat. He then took the man to hospital.

"This must be the most expensive long-service award in history," said the Canadian appreciatively.

Once Blind, Enjoys Year Of Sightseeing

MIAMI, Fla. (AP) — Miss Bessie Sikes, blinded by an attack of meningitis at the age of nine months, has had a whole year of sightseeing.

"I've seen magnificent things, beautiful things—sunrises and stars and all the pretty flowers," she said. "I've seen so many things and places, and so many people."

It was April 21, 1963—a Sunday morning — when Miss Sikes' left eye smarted. She rubbed it and suddenly she could see—the pattern in the kitchen linoleum, the furniture, her mother's picture on the wall.

"What happened was that the cataract (an opaque lens) became dislodged and fell inside the eye," her doctor said.

This opened the pupil and allowed light to enter." Miss Sikes is in her 50's.

Miss Mary Lashley, 78, of Covington, Ky., sent $100 with instructions that Miss Sikes use it to see some of the things she wanted to see. Miss Sikes took a five-week bus trip.

Ann Landers

Ann's Teetotalling Advice Ruins Party for Pair

DEAR ANN LANDERS — I have been reading your drivel for years and am becoming increasingly bored with your maniacal assaults on social drinkers. Please find another, less tiresome, crusade. My guess is that you are a secret drinker or your husband is a lush.

ANN LANDERS

Did it ever occur to you that some people enjoy a little drink? It helps them unwind after a difficult day of tension and pressure. Just to prove the extent to which you have ruined our society, last night we went to a party, all set to have a great evening. The hostess announced that they were not serving any liquor. "It's an experiment," she said, "a la Ann Landers to see if people really need liquor to have a good time."

After an hour my husband was so bored he almost jumped out of his skin. We went home — and had a drink. Thank you for ruining what could have been a great evening. — HIM AND HER.

DEAR H. AND H. — No doubt when you two become sufficiently lubricated you are transformed into brilliant and witty conversationalists.

Why not try an experiment of your own. One night while your husband "unwinds," you stay with ginger ale — and listen to him. The next night you unwind, give him the ginger ale and let him listen to you. It could put both of you on the wagon for life.

* * *

DEAR ANN LANDERS — My husband has put it to me and now I am putting it to you.

Next month he is going to a convention in Atlantic City and taking his secretary along. Before you come to any hasty conclusions I'd like to assure you that everything is on the up and up.

His secretary has a face that could stop the town clock. There is absolutely nothing between them. She worked for the former owner and knows the business better than my husband. (He bought the company two years ago). She also knows a great many people in this business by their first name, and she can be very helpful.

Now, the question: My husband says if they travel as Mr. and Mrs. they can use the airline "family plan" and save some money.

If you were me would you say yes or no? — CAN'T D. CIDE.

DEAR CIDE — Miss Clock-Stopper should travel under her own name and your husband should not try to cheat the airline out of a few dollars by resorting to this cheap gimmick. (This goes for the hotel, too, kiddo, in case he has any other bright money-saving devices up his sleeve.)

DEAR ANN LANDERS — Please help me. I am 13 years old and very unhappy. My mother lets me do whatever I want and it is a terrible thing to know that nobody is ever going to say "no" to you. If I told my mother I was going to kill myself she would say, "If that's what you want to do, Honey, go ahead."

My best friend Beverly has a mother who says, "You can't do it and I don't want to hear any more." Then it's all settled.

Sometimes I ask my mother for permission to do things I don't want to do at all. If she would just say "No," it would help me out a lot. I am not a very good writer, but I hope you understand what I am trying to say. Thank you. — NEVER SAID NO TO.

DEAR NEVER — I understand full and well what you are trying to say, because I've been saying the same thing myself for a long time — hoping to get the message across to mothers just like yours.

Your letter said it better than I could. Show it to your mother and tell her I suggested you do so.

Commander of Van Doos Shot at by Turkish-Cypriot

By GERARD ALARIE

NICOSIA (CP) — A Turkish-Cypriot fired a single shot Monday at a helicopter carrying Lt.-Col. Andrew Woodstock of Sarnia, who protested to a Turkish - Cypriot military leader but indicated to reporters the incident did not cause him undue concern for his personal safety.

"Those fighting here don't hit anything they aim at on the ground," said the commander of the 1st Battalion of Canada's Royal 22nd Regiment. "How are they going to hit anything in the air?"

He protested to the Turkish-Cypriot military commander of the Kyrenia region north of Nicosia and was told the sniper would be thoroughly questioned. Col. Woodcock said the helicopter was clearly marked with United Nations identification.

The sniper shot at the helicopter while it was over St. Hilarion Castle, a Turkish - Cypriot fortress, from a range of about 300 yards. The helicopter was on a reconnaissance flight.

Col. Woodcock told reporters: "This incident demonstrates once again that all these Cypriots, Turks and Greeks, who carry loaded arms have no sense of discipline. They can open fire at anything."

SAW 15-YEAR-OLD

Saying that many of the Cypriot fighters are not military, he recalled having seen a 12-year-old boy handling a firearm and going to see the boy's leader.

He said he told the leader: "If that youth handles a firearm again, "I am going to give him a good spanking—just as our youngsters at home would get under the same circumstances."

Meanwhile, scattered firing continued between Greek- and Turkish - Cypriots from two peaks in the Kyrenia mountains. The top of one mountain, dubbed Gin Mountain, is occupied by the Greek-Cypriots and the other, called Brandy, by the Turkish - Cypriots.

Two detachments from the Van Doos, who make up most of the United Nations peace keeping force on Cyprus, visited the peaks Monday. A detachment led by 2nd - Lieut. Pierre Gadbois of Montreal visited Gin Mountain where amicable contacts were made with Greek-Cypriot fighters. The detachment that visited Brandy Mountain and the Turkish - Cypriots was led by 2nd - Lieut. Francois Bertrand, also of Montreal.

In the area is a poultry farm which has been targeted by Turkish - Cypriots fire in an attempt to keep Greek - Cypriots from gaining new positions.

Robarts Denies Breakdown In Negotiations With Govt. By Civil Service Association

TORONTO (CP)—Complaints by the civil service association of Ontario about a breakdown in negotiations with the government were denied in the legislature Monday by Premier Robarts.

The premier said he was surprised to learn of the protest lodged by the association "since I am not aware of any such breakdown." Directors of the association met Friday and later issued a statement saying there "was serious unrest" in the civil service.

Mr. Robarts was replying in the house to a question by Donald C. MacDonald the New Democratic Party leader, who asked what action was contemplated by the government in view of the charges.

The civil servants' statement said they were "angry with the breakdown in negotiation procedures, the long delays in resolving salary questions and the general inadequacy of the salary structure."

The government was accused of arbitrary establishing rates of pay and working conditions without negotiation.

Mr. Robarts said none of the complaints in statement had been put before the Ontario joint council, comprised of civil service representatives and government officials. The council negotiates civil service demands.

"I have asked for a report and I have been advised that the staff side has no submission before the joint council concerning rates of pay," the premier said. He added that no request for negotiations has been placed before the civil service commission.

Mr. Robarts said the association was "entirely wrong" in suggesting that the government should interfere with the civil service commission.

Harold Bowen, executive secretary of the Civil Service Association, issued a statement later saying a meeting of the joint council Monday had decided to put to arbitration the staff side's demand that the government pay a portion of hospital and medical insurance.

Bowen also said that at the meeting of the council, the government side "continued its unyielding attitude." Mr. Bowen said the association has asked months ago for contributions toward insurance costs.

STOCK MARKET MADNESS affected Belleville yesterday, as well as the rest of the country. Local brokers, lacking automatic tabulation equipment, have no accurate count of the number of stocks traded in the city, but one estimated that the amount was ten times the average. Twenty eight million shares were traded in Toronto yesterday. In the picture, investors jam the office of Barclay and Crawford stockbrokers in Belleville.

Franco's Spain Is Moving Slowly Toward the Light

By ALAN HARVEY
Canadian Press Staff Writer

After 25 sterile, shadowed years, Generalissimo Franco's Spain is moving slowly toward the light.

There is a definite impression that this proud, passionate nation is gradually emerging from its self-imposed isolation. The big question is whether the inexorable pressure of economic events will produce political change without violence.

As Spain this month celebrates the 25th anniversary of the peace that followed the civil war, foreign comment shows a wide measure of agreement that something is brewing south of the Pyrenees. Some sample observations:

The Economist, London—"Spain is showing several signs of pregnancy. The feeling seems to be that a new regime is on the verge of being born."

The Spectator, London—"Spain is, in fact, in the middle of a process of evolution that is taking her away from the totalitarian pattern of society. . . An evolution that has for the moment made itself felt only in economic affairs, but has yet to make much impression on the political structure of the country."

L'Express, Paris—"A decisive change has taken place in Spain in the last three years."

CHANGE ECONOMIC

That change, says Express correspondent Juan Goytisolo, is primarily economic. Drawn by the European Common Market, Spain nevertheless will find that economic transformation will be hard to accomplish without a simultaneous transformation in political and cultural fields.

"History will tell us," adds Guytisolo, "whether the evolution that has started will proceed to its logical conclusion, or will be restricted to mere window-dressing, a modernization of the facade."

After 25 years of Franco, observers agree, there is a change of mood. The old wild romanticism, the potential Iberian anarchy, has given way to a greater prudence. The tentative ou- influx of money-spending tourists, bringing with them a soupcon of the affluent society, (is sociedad opulenta) may be softening the hard challenges of the old Spain.

PROCESS SLOW

A four-year development plan, started in January, has announced its aims a fairer distribution of wealth. Ecclesiastic, an official church publication, criticized the "scandalous" wealth of a small group of privileged people."

Equalization will be a slow process, Spanish poverty is proverbial. The poor, it has been remarked, have so little money that money hardly matters, and find consolation in the Adalusian saying that "sleep is free, and so is song."

The pace of political change remains the biggest question-mark. At 72, Gen. Franco seems a shade more tolerant, despite—or perhaps because of—a reported attack of arteria sclerosis. But there is no sure sign that he will relinquish power voluntarily, and the slow political change will proceed at a snails pace.

Rhodesians Arrest Another Negro Leader

SALISBUR Y(Reuters)—This capital city of Southern Rhodesia was tense today following a new move against Negro nationalists by the all-white minority government of Premier Ian Smith.

The government announced the arrest and restriction of the man who took over as head of the People's Caretaker Council when nationalist leader Joseph Nkomo and his top aides were banished last week.

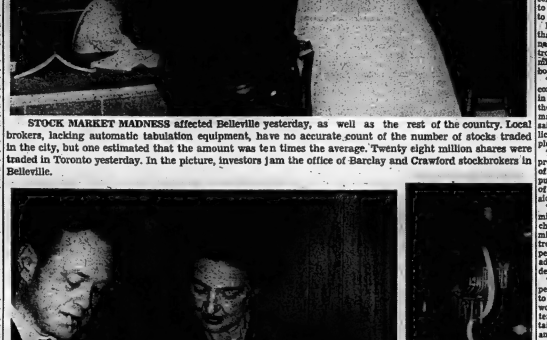
S. M. Marembo was arrested here Saturday, the government announced Monday. This left only three PCC leaders at liberty.

Southern Rhodesia is a self-governing British colony, which was a member of the Central African Federation. Northern and Southern Rhodesia and Nyasaland, until the federation dissolved at the end of 1963.

NEGROES PROTEST

The arrest of Nkomo and three aides and their restriction for a year to a remote area near the Mozambique border caused widespread protests by Negroes. This far more than 500 negroes have been arrested during six days of demonstrations, disturbances and marshals in the streets.

Premier Smith said Monday night he assumed Southern Rhodesia would receive an invitation to the Commonwealth prime ministers conference to be held in London in July.



Meanwhile, the first four former premier Winston Field, after Field was apparently ousted for his attitude towards Britain in talks over independence for Southern Rhodesia.

Nyasaland Premier Dr. Hastings Banda said he would advise the Southern Rhodesian nationalists to form a government in exile if the government itself insisted independent from Britain.

Southern Rhodesia has a population of 220,000 whites and 3,690,000 Negroes.

BEATING VICTIM DIES

CALGARY (CP)—Mrs. Stella Thompson, 74-year-old mother of prominent Calgary oilmen Frank and George McMahon, died Monday from injuries suffered in a beating in her home Ap.il 8. Police said last week her middle-aged housekeeper was in Penoka mental hospital for examination under the Alberta Mental Diseases Act. Her name was not released.

TICKER TAPE TALK dominated the city and the nation yesterday, and the tape machines ran hours behind as the Timpinis copper strike sparked speculation fever. In the picture, Peter Wills and Mrs. James Driscoll read a tape in the office of Walwyn, Stodgell and Co., in Belleville.

Members of Two Brokerage Houses in City Have Had Busiest Days of Careers

It may well have been the most fantastic single day in the history of gambling.

Yet locally the surface, Mammon was not so much a god as a slightly unreliable pet.

At the worst, he threatened those who pawned him too indulgently.

For least, he was a playful thing, whose menace could easily be avoided.

Thus did the Stock Exchange day of April 20th go down for Belleville investors.

In the smashero of all stock trading times no local fortunes were made — nor none lost.

There were whispers yesterday around local brokerage offices of the man who'd made a killing" of $25,000 in the hysteric scramble to find the pot of gold in a township 800 miles north of Belleville.

There were those who said they'd had a "good day" and left the bureaus of hopeful possibilities with sidelong glances from those others waiting a ticker-tape running 30 minutes to an hour behind.

Finally, after the ticker caught up with its own madness and subdued it to statistical facts, the brokerages were empty.

Between closing and opening, they had served an array of customers they may never see again.

A FABULOUS DAY

There was the cynical oldster who compared the ticker-tape to an old-country greyhound race:

"There's nothing but dogs chasing each other."

There was the Greek immigrant restaurant-owner who silently made his appearance, conducted his transactions quickly, watched the — then disappeared. Richer, or poorer, who can know.

There was the woman who approached the manager and pointed at a quotation with one hand and her husband with another, and stated:

"I'm just thinking about that. I want to get rid of it and he won't let me."

From early morning—before the Toronto Stock Exchange opened — they were in the offices and then at once especially as the ticker tripped out its messages.

By noon, the tape was an hour behind in Belleville.

Pete Wills, manager of Walwyn Stodgell and Company Ltd., had a sobering thought as he scanned the coded abbreviations:

"I'm concerned. If it spills over into industrials it could be serious."

Apparently, what he meant was that if stockholders decided to begin splitting their blue-chip holdings and using the money for purchase of penny mining stock the economy might start to ferment under its secure lid.

JUST ANOTHER DAY

It might have at that. And it was a sobering thought. However, the sophistication of that mysterious quantity — the small-time monied investor — apparently was holding its own.

Down at the rival brokerage office of Barclay and Crawford, while the staff tried to combat the historic wave of boom-trading, one of the city's more conservative — and richer — citizens leaned against the counter patiently.

Overhearing a group of younger investors swapping cynicisms about the current fantastic splurge he joined in, mentioning tax concessions and dividends.

AT THE END OF THE DAY tickers dropped tape into baskets, as if they were as tired as their attendants after a frantic day.

At the end of it — still unable to buttonhole a staffer — added: "Well I can see I'm not going to get any information today" — and wheeled out.

As the door swung to, commented on of his late listeners:

"What the hell is he talking about dividends?"

Yet it was a timely reminder that gains were not all at once in mysterious ways, even in finance. For his stock-sobriety — to the point of obtrusiveness — offset the warm foolishness of the woman who called minutes later and asked:

"What's the main one. I want to buy in on it."

Yet overall, it was a most polite occasion in Belleville. Is thousands were made and thousands lost, they were overshadowed by the reality of fortunes already made in the township so far away (its name on Ontario municipal charts is Kidd, by the way), and the possibility of impending fortunes lost on the TSE.

Compared to the fantastic probabilities of the situation it all came off quietly enough in Belleville.

NAMED DIRECTOR

OTTAWA (CP)—Dr. Jack D. Ives, 32, internationally - known Canadian geographer, has been named director of the geographical branch of the department of mines and technical surveys, it was announced Monday. He succeeds Dr. N. L. Nicholson, who resigned recently to join the staff of the University of Western Ontario at London. Dr. Ives previously was assistant to Dr. Nicholson.

Submissions Made for Public Defender System, for English System of Legal Aid

SUDBURY (CP) — Separate cases for the adoption of both a public defender system and the English system of legal aid were advanced in briefs to the Ontario government's joint committee on legal aid Monday.

Carl Walsberg, a Sudbury lawyer, presented a brief in which he contended the public defender system is the best means of assuring that persons with small financial incomes receive legal defence comparable to that received by persons able to pay fees.

Mr. Walsberg emphasized that the public defender system must be under direct control of the government but might come under a special board created for the purpose.

"The public defender would consist of one or more lawyers in an office located at or near the courthouse or place where magistrate's court is held," he said. "The lawyers in the public defender office would be employed on a salary basis."

The Sudbury Bar Association, presenting the only other brief of the day, said it opposed the public defender system in favor of the English system of legal aid.

The association brief, submitted by Michael Meehan, chairman of the legal aid committee, said it would be extremely difficult to obtain competent counsel because of the inadequate salary paid to public defenders.

"It is our belief that the only people who would be attracted to the office of public defender would be recent graduates interested in the position for obtaining experience in courts, and after two or three years of such work would then turn to private practice.

The association brief said the English system allows the applicant for legal aid to choose his own lawyer from a list of those who have volunteered to take their services available, and the government pays about 80 per cent of the normal legal fees.

The brief also suggested that present maximum incomes allowed for legal aid applicants—$2,500 for married couples plus $300 for each dependent, and $1,700 for single persons—would be raised under the new system.

"Our association feels the income limits in order to qualify for legal aid . . . are unrealistic.

"One cannot expect a married man, having two or three dependents to pay the legal fees and disbursements involved in the defence of a serious criminal offence."

The Sudbury Law Association also said the Indian Affairs Department of the Department of Citizenship is in effect, doing nothing about the legal defence of Indians on Manitoulin Island reserves.

These Indians virtually have to be accused of murder before the Indian Affairs Branch provides its charges with legal defence, the brief said.

"The Department of Indian Affairs will pay only for the defence of the Indian in regard to capital offences, and by far the majority of Indians charged with criminal offences are represented through our legal aid or not represented at all," the brief said.

W. B. Common, Ontario's deputy attorney-general, and chairman of the joint committee, expressed surprise during the hearings that the Indian agent on the island did not take a greater interest in the situation.

Mr. Common later told the hearing that he does not believe it is a police duty to tell a suspect he is entitled to counsel.

"Provided he(sic) say suggestion that a law enforcement officer's first duty is to tell a suspect he is entitled to a legal defence," he told the hearing.

His comment arose out of a discussion between Sudbury and district Crown Attorney A. G. Burbidge, and Robert F. Reid, a committee member. Mr. Burbidge said he also agrees that it is not a police responsibility.

Govt. Decides to Continue Financing Canadian Troops In Cyprus After 3 Months

OTTAWA (CP)—The government has decided to continue to finance the Canadian contingent in Cyprus after the first three-month period for the United Nations force there expires June 27, informed sources said Monday.

However, the government has not given up its avowed aim that the UN force in Cyprus must be financed by mandatory responsibility of all UN members.

At the next meeting of the UN General Assembly it will press for retroactive contributions from the UN membership to the force.

This meeting is unlikely to take place until after the United States presidential election in November because many UN members, including Canada, don't want to get involved in the issue of Communist Chinese membership in the UN.

This means, barring an unforeseen quick settlement of the Cyprus problem, that Canada will have paid some $8,000,000 to support its contingent in Cyprus since the UN General Assembly deals with the matter of the force's financing.

3-MONTH AGREEMENT

The force in Cyprus was established because the countries contributing personnel—Canada, Denmark, Sweden, Finland and Ireland—agreed to pay the costs of their own contingents for the first three months. The force became operational March 27.

Nobody here expects the force to be able to leave Cyprus by June 27, and no decision has been made, by Canada at least, to continue its operations. It is expected the government will be prepared to make a decision, as in Egypt.

Canada has already begun to withdraw troops from the UN Congo force which is scheduled to wind up its operations June 30 after four years.

The government has misgivings about withdrawal of the UN force — being carried out for reasons of UN economy—but has been somewhat heartened by an agreed rapprochement between Belgium and The Congo.

SUPPLY LINE CUT

The UN supply pipeline to The Congo has been cut and the decision to withdraw the UN force now could not easily be reversed.

Canadian soldiers in The Congo, mainly signallers, are being gradually withdrawn as the national contingents they serve leave for home.

At the peak, there were 300 Canadian soldiers and air men in The Congo. The figures now are 230 and four, respectively. Canada's signalling probably will be among the last UN troops to leave.

Cyprus, because of the Canadian involvement in Cyprus, it has been decided that Canada will take no credit for production of F-104 low-level jet bombers for Greece and Turkey.

These 120 planes were assembled at Canadair Limited, Montreal, for the Canadian and United States mutual aid programme for NATO allies in Europe. The U.S. put up $150,000,000 and Canada $50,000,000.

Canada now will withdraw discreetly from participation in the program because its NATO partners, Greece and Turkey, are at odds over the Cyprus situation.

MUSEUM GETS SPITFIRE

FORT WILLIAM (CP)—John Patterson of Fort William, a Spitfire fighter pilot he has restored and flown will be donated to the National Air Museum in Ottawa on Air Force Day, June 6. He was a Spitfire pilot in the Second World War. Mr. Patterson said he will fly the Mark IX Spitfire over the museum at Uplands Airport before it is retired. The plane now is at Trenton. Ont.

Key Game? They're All That, Coaches Say ★ ★ ★ ★ ★

Favor Maple Leafs In Tonight's Hassle

By DAVE BYERS

TORONTO (CP)—If you believe the coaches, a lot of anyone's hopes should be torn out of the lexicon of hockey.

The two coaches in the Stanley Cup finals—Punch Imlach of Toronto and Sid Abel of Detroit —says little for odds, home ice factors, turning points or key games.

According to them, tonight's fifth game of the finals is a "key" game, at least no more key than any other.

"They're all key games," says Imlach. "Our first game against Montreal (in the semi-finals) was just as important as this one."

"You only have to win four," says Abel, "any four will do."

Imlach doesn't want to hear about odds calculated by bookmakers or fans, and Abel points out how his team upset the odds, first by finishing fourth and then by eliminating Chicago Black Hawks in the semi-final.

Imlach makes a slight concession to the importance of home ice, especially now with the series tied and two of the possible three remaining games on Toronto ice.

ADMITS HOME ICE EDGE

"I've always said home ice is worth a goal on a couple of penalties, but it's not an end in itself."

Abel, whose team won only seven on the road this season, nonetheless disagrees that home ice is of great importance.

As for turning points, Abel says: "How can you talk about turning points in a series when all four games have gone to the last couple of minutes?"

Imlach once described the turning point of any game as "when they play the national anthem."

The Red Wings flew to Toronto Monday afternoon from Windsor, Ont., after two days of rest at Toledo, Ohio.

The Leafs practised an hour Monday for tonight's game and officials of both clubs reported all players fit and ready. No lineup changes are expected.

Moral support for the Leafs came Monday from two old rivals, both former stars with Montreal Canadiens.

In Newcastle, N.B., Maurice Richard, the great goal scorer in NHL playoff history with 82 goals and 44 assists, predicted a Maple Leaf victory "because they have more depth."

In Toronto, Jacques Plante, six-time winner of the Vezina Trophy as the league's best goaltender, said the Leafs will eliminate Detroit in the finals "on the basis of their record." During the season the Leafs won only three to the Wings and tied three.

FIRST TWO-GOAL WIN

Saturday's 4-2 win by the Leafs at Detroit Olympia was the first time either team had won by more than one goal and the first time the game was not altered or set at the final minute of play. Frank Mahovlich's insurance goal Saturday was scored at a comparatively early time of 18:09 in the third period.

Ten $100,000 Bills

Dempsey Showed Dad $1,000,000

TORONTO (CP)—It sounded a bit funny—Jack Dempsey, who netted but $300,000 of $1,000,000 to $7,000,000, telling kids to stay in school if they wanted to be successful.

He told them how his father, a West Virginia public school teacher, "told me I'd never amount to anything if I didn't get my education.

"The next morning he said: 'Harry—he used to call me Harry—is that real money?' I told him it was. He said: 'Well put it in the bank you young fool!'"

The former heavyweight boxing champion, making a series of school visits to encourage students to stick at their studies, said "If I had my life to live over now, I'd be a fighter, but I'd get my education first."

It was surprised he had done pretty well without much education.

"Not really," he said during visits to six Toronto area high schools.

Before, I made money, a lot of money. But because I didn't have an education I didn't know how to handle it. Why, I had three Rolls-Royces at one time. I didn't even need one but I had three."

TIMES HAVE CHANGED

Things were different when he pilled up his earnings, the former champ said.

"There was no TV money in those days but we were getting in other ways. There was no huge income tax bite like there is today. And everything was cheaper — food, clothing and even Rolls-Royces."

Touching on improvements for boxing, Dempsey suggested a 12-round limit and fights should be televised as a move to help keep small clubs in business as training grounds for young boxers.

He also suggested a change in scoring: "The way it is now a fellow could lose seven rounds and not have a chance to win even if he pounds the other guy all over the lot for the last three rounds."

Dempsey said boxing should be governed by national legislation in the United States or federation to govern the sport. Federal legislation is needed to clean up the fight game. In the last few years, the criminal element openly connected with boxing has been cleaned out. However, gamblers still have their claws grasping for the gambling dollar.

Dempsey said a federal boxing commissioner is a necessity for boxing.

Waterloo Shades Weston 5-4

TORONTO (CP) — Waterloo Siskins took advantage of Toronto Weston penalties in the first period Monday to defeat the Dodgers 5-4 and take a 2-1 lead in their Ontario Hockey Association Junior B best-of-seven finals.

The Siskins, who scored three times in the opening period with the opposition shorthanded, will be at home Wednesday for the fourth game.

Art Bacon fired the winning goal early in the third period and the Siskins held off a determined Dodgers offensive for the remainder of the game. Bacon drew a holding penalty with less than two minutes to go and although Weston pulled netminder Stu Chapman in favor of an extra attacker, the Siskins managed to hold on for the victory.

BOSTON (CP-AP) — Elilu Ilke Aurele Van den Driessche of Belgium won his "easiest ever" marathon Monday and stamped himself one of the top candidates for an Olympic medal.

It was a repeat victory for the Belgian in the annual Patriots Day marathon here. (Patriots Day is a legal holiday peculiar to Massachusetts, and commemorates the midnight ride of Paul Revere in 1775.)

Van den Driessche was always in front and won by 250 yards. His time for the 26 miles, 385 yards was two hours, 19 minutes and 50 seconds. Last year he set the Boston record of 2:18:58, but this weather that he was much kinder than Monday's cold drizzle.

'Wilt' Punch Touches Off Riot

BOSTON (AP) — San Francisco's Wilt Chamberlain floored Boston's Clyde Lovellette with a punch in the nose Monday, but the Celtics floored the Warriors 136-101 and took a two-game lead in the National Basketball Association finals.

The Lovellete - Chamberlain incident, at the foul line in the fourth quarter, touched off a near-riot. Fights had to clear the floor at the Boston Garden.

Sam Jones was the Celtics' high scorer with 21 points. Game scoring honors went to Chamberlain, who had 22 before leaving with about five minutes left in the fourth quarter.

The fourth-quarter squabble came about when the officials called Lovellette four fouling Chamberlain. The two big pivot men had words and scuffling ensued.

RARE, MEDIUM, WELL-DONE

By Geo. H. Carter, Sports Editor

The Bay of Quinte waters in general and the mouth of the Moira River have been selected as the raceways for the annual Belleville District Fish and Game Club's annual Pickerel Derby.

The begins will blow "They're Off" at sharp 12.01 a.m. Friday, May 1st, and the creme fire will sound at nine p.m. Sunday, May 3rd.

The month of the Moira has proven a prolific walleye hunting ground "in or out of season" and the last two years fish area has been freckled with boats and craft of all designs and sizes.

All fish must be weighed in at Bob Bialek's Sports Centre, South Front Street, where bait, also club memberships, will be available.

The prize for the best fish is $10; second $7.00, and third $3.00. Contestants must fill out an entry which must be witnessed.

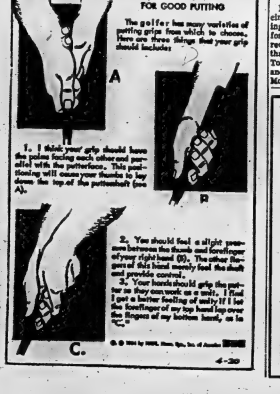
The pickerel season opens in the Bay of Quinte, and Prince Edward County and up to the first dams at rivers flowing into the bay on May 1st. It does not include inland waters of this district where the season opens May 9th.

And while on this fishing seasons business it is noted the bass and muskie season opens in this area on Saturday, June 27th through November 30th.

A not-too-long-ago survey of pickerel in the Bay of Quinte waters revealed that over 92 per cent of the anglers contacted while fishing for walleye were trolling. Depths fished varied from eight to 30 feet and the lures used were predominantly of the spinner type or live bait and spinner combinations.

The mouths of the Trent and Moira Rivers are the most productive while Hay Bay is classified as a great harvest ground.

The survey also revealed that evening fishing was found 12.7 pe.-cent more successful, on the average, than morning fishing and angling before noon netted an average of 22.9 per cent more fish than afternoon efforts.



Total pickerel harvest for the year 1953, according to the survey was estimated at 17,500 fish or 61,248 pounds. Fifty-four per cent of this came from Hay Bay, 37 per cent from the upper section of the bay between Trenton and Napanee. The remainder of the catch was produced by the small bays adjacent to Hay Bay.

Veteran pickerel fishermen tell me this would be about an average yield of Quinte and neighboring waters.

The Belleville Fish and Game Club holds its monthly meeting tonight at Club Canara and again offers an attractive program for members.

There will be films, particularly those on "Ducks" to be shown by Melville Hill, former chief Mohawk Quinte Band of Deseronto.

Bob Bialek will have an exceptionally fine display of tackle on hand that should interest member Walleyes. Don't miss this show. Riverside has a camera exhibit and the "big prize" is a complete trout-fishing outfit.

Lowly Yankees, Dodgers Lose Another

Cellars Have Strange Occupants

By MIKE RATHET
Associated Press Sports Writer

As things stand today, Los Angeles Dodgers are just a shade worse than New York Yankees. But then they've had more than a shade to go on.

The Dodgers maintained their edge yesterday, but not without some difficulty. They collected five hits and scored a run off Bob Sadowski while losing to Milwaukee Braves 7-1 and running their longest losing streak in two years to six games.

The Yankees, meanwhile, tried to catch up but failed. They didn't score but they did stroke nine hits before losing to Boston Red Sox 4-0. They might have had a better chance if the other half of the double header at Boston hadn't been rained out.

The Dodgers' edge, however, arises from the fact they've played more games. Each team has won one game but the Dodgers have registered in six losses to the Yankees' four.

The Dodgers, in the National League scheme of things, trailed New York Mets and four behind leading Philadelphia Phillies and San Francisco Giants. have scored only 14 runs in seven games and three in the last 35 innings. They've collected only 50 hits, for a .212 batting average.

The Yankees, in the American League scheme, are one-half game behind Washington Senators and three behind front-running Baltimore Orioles with a single run in five games. They've collected 41 hits for a .216 batting average.

DRIVES IN FOUR

The biggest hitting show of the day was put on by Joe Hoerner, who drove in four runs with a single and triple in the Colts' 7-1 victory scored St. Louis Cardinals. In the only other game played, Bob Shinall scored on Jim Ray Hart's two eighth-inning runs and a 5-3 triumph over Cincinnati Reds.

Ron Santo of Chicago at Baltimore and Philadelphia at New York Mets —only others scheduled—games also were rained out.

Sadowski had retired 21 Dodgers in a row when they finally scored in the ninth on a single by Tommy Davis and Ron Fairly's double. Oliver got three hits for the Braves, Lee Maye hit a homer and Frank Bolling drove in three runs with two run-scoring singles and a bases-loaded walk. Nick Willhite was the loser.

Bill Monbouquette, who allowed seven hits before leaving after eight innings because of arm trouble, and Dick Radatz combined to shut out the Yankees. Dick Stuart drove in two runs for the Red Sox with a pair of singles and rookie Tony Conigliaro hit his second homer of the season. Rookie Bob Meyer took the loss.

Fox, acquired from Chicago White Sox in an off-season deal, drove in two runs with a bases-loaded single in the Colts' fourrun second inning against Ray Sadecki and belted a two-run triple in a three-run fourth. Dick Farrell limited the Cardinals to four hits but lost his shutout when Ken Boyer homered in the ninth.

Willie Mays, who continued his torrid hitting with a double and two singles, raced home with the tie-breaking run for the Giants in the eighth when Skinner dropped Tim Haller's shoe fly with two out. That made a loser of Bob Purkey. Jack Sanford, who got homer support from Willie McCovey, checked the Reds on seven hits for the victory.

Wallop Northerners 11-4

Marlies Trap Trappers

TORONTO (CP)—For the second time in an off-season duel, Toronto Marlboros and, in turn were slapped hard for their efforts.

The Marlboros, paced by the Gary Dineen-Andre Champagne-Wayne Carleton line, blasted the Trappers 11-4 Monday to take a 2-0 lead in their best-of-seven series.

The set resumes in North Bay Wednesday and Friday. The winner of this series will go against Montreal NDG Monarchs in a best-of-five set for the Eastern Canada Memorial Cup championship.

Trappers opened Sunday's first game by taking a 1-0 lead early in the first period. They were shellacked 13-3, Monday North Bay surprised by holding a 2-1 edge after the first period. From then on it was no contest as Marlboros rapped in six unanswered goals in the second.

Tim Dineen, Champagne and Carleton trio sparked the victory, accounting for six goals and eight assists. Former Olympic star Dineen, a centre, was tops with four goals and two assists. Leftwinger Champagne had a goal and five assists while rightwinger Carleton had a goal and one assist.

Rod Selling, another Olympic star, now the property of New York Rangers of the National Hockey League, chipped in a pair of goals. Barry Watson, who suffered a charley horse when he collided with North Bay's Matt Oreskovich in the third period, also fired two goals. Grant Moore had the other.

Trans-Canada Car Rally

Canadians Hold Lead

By STEPHEN SCOTT

SASKATOON (CP) — Canadians held a solid lead in the toughest-ever 4,000-mile trans-Canada auto rally today as special sections took an ever-increasing toll of cars.

Fifty-two of the 60 cars that left Vancouver Saturday night for a six-day run to Montreal started the 13-hour, 623-mile third leg of the contest from here and Winnipeg. They expected some more.

Behind them they left cars unable to continue, including those of a famous trio of top-ranking Europeans and the defending overall champion team of Dick Doyer and Clay Ohlsen.

Leading with a perfect score was Maurice Carter of Toronto and Ian Worth of Lachute, Que., driving a sponsored Chevy II.

They shared the lead with Bob Harvey and Bob Sullivan of Dearborn, Mich., and Cleveland, Ohio, in a Valiant after Monday's legs.

PLUNGES OFF ROAD

But Harvey was one of several drivers who fell victim to a 14-mile speed test through the Wainwright, Alta., army base. His car plunged off the road and rolled over and he looked to be a fourth-car place with Bill Gilgum's Olivier Gendebien and Mike Kerry of Toronto in a Volvo.

Gendebien was the highest placed European. Anne Hall of Huddersfield, England, in a Volvo was the next highest European with six penalty points and Lucien Bianchi, Belgium, in a stretch of tremendous driving, Miss Hall went through the twisting speed test area with only a handbrake because of mechanical trouble.

Miss Hall, leading contender for the women's championship and still in the running for the over-all championship, is one of the most experienced rallyists in Europe. She compared Monday's leg through the Rocky Mountain foothills and across the Prairies to the roughest in African safari.

Klaus Ross and John Bird of Toronto, in a Volvo factory entry, and John Merriman and Paul Manson of Toronto in a leased privately-entered Chevelle also had perfect days and were tied for second place with only one penalty point.

Lo Lalonde and John Jones in a Chevy II and Fred Hayes and John Wilson in a Falcon, all of Toronto, were in a tie for fourth with two penalty points. Lalonde, former rally winner, picked up a penalty point Monday to fall from his second-place tie Sunday.

Emerson Ranked Tops By Aussies

MELBOURNE, (AP) — Roy Emerson, suspended by the Australian Lawn Tennis Association for playing overseas without permission, was ranked No. 1 by the association Monday.

Four other rebels were listed in the top six positions.

Emerson, No. 1 for the second straight year, and some of the others have been dropped from the Australian Davis Cup team since Emerson won both his singles matches last year when the Australians lost the cup to the United States by a 3-2 score.

Fred Stolle was ranked second, Marty Mulligan third, John Newcombe fourth, Ken Fletcher fifth, Bob Hewitt sixth and Neale Fraser seventh.

Only Newcombe is in the good graces of the association at the moment.

HOUSTON (AP)—Eddie Dyer, 63, who managed the 1946 world champion St. Louis Cardinals, died Monday. He had suffered a stroke Jan. 2, 1963.

After 23 years as a player, manager, and coach, Dyer returned to Houston in 1946 and was successful with business interests that included insurance, oil, and real estate.

Dyer's Cardinals won the world championship by defeating Boston Red Sox the first year he was a major league manager. He quit baseball after the 1948 season when Fred Saigh, then Cardinal owner, offered him only a one-year contract.

A lefthanded pitcher, Dyer jumped from the Rice University campus to the Cardinals in 1925 and blanked Chicago Cubs 2-0, in his first major league starting assignment.

He remained with the Cardinal organization throughout his professional career, becoming a farm team manager after developing a sore arm.

SPANN NABBED IN RAID

HOUSTON (AP) — Warren Spahn, veteran Milwaukee Braves pitcher and former catcher Phil Roof were among 10 persons arrested in an afternoon raid by Texas liquor control board officers early Saturday. Police said Monday all were charged with committing alcoholic beverages after hours and released on $10 bond. Team manager Bobby Bragan said he plans no action against the players, as Milwaukee has no curfew for its players.

Flyers were named to the first CPHL honor roll—Ray Miller's Central All Canon, rightwinger; and John Brenneman, who tied with Billy McCreary, playing coach of the champion Omaha Knights, for the left wing position.

Marcel Pelletier, of St. Paul Rangers was selected as the league's best goaltender. Defence awards went to Bob Woytowich of the rangers and Barclay Plager of the Knights. Scoring awards were made on a points basis by coaches Harry Sinden of Minneapolis, Fred Glover of St. Paul, Gus Kyle of St. Louis, Tony Leswick of Cincinnati and McCreary of Omaha.

Oil Kings Defeat Estevan 5-1

EDMONTON (CP)—Edmonton Oil Kings romped to a 5-1 triumph over Estevan Bruins before 6,500 fans Monday, opening the best-of-seven Western Canada Memorial Cup junior hockey final. Kings, who downed Niagara Falls Flyers to win the Memorial Cup last season, showed potent power play. They scored three goals against busy Estevan netminder Wayne Doll while holding a man advantage.

Bert Marshall, Reg Taschuk, Glen Sather, Doug Fox and Butch Paul scored for Edmonton. Ross Lonsberry spoiled Russ Kirk's shutout bid with the score 4-0 early in the third period.

British Soccer Scandal

3 Deny Bribe Charges

LONDON (AP)—Three soccer players angrily denied charges Monday that they took bribes to fix games as a British professional soccer scandal bubbled to boiling point.

The three are among nine players named in a series of articles in The People, a Sunday newspaper. The players accepted bribes to throw matches and help in big betting coups.

Peter Wragg, acting captain of Fourth Division Bradford City, asked for a meeting with the club's directors and told newsmen:

"Never in my football career have I been involved in anything of this nature. I love the sport and would not think of taking part in such activities.

"I want my name cleared and I will take every step within my power to see that it is done."

Wragg was alleged to have taken a bribe while playing for York City in 1961.

Daniels were also made by Bert Linacre, left winger of Lincoln City, and Ron Nicholls, wing half of Third Division Walsall. Linacre said he intended to file a libel suit against The People.

Peter Swan, Sheffield Wednesday centre-half, who has played 19 times for England, has also had threatened to sue the newspaper. He was named in the first article eight days ago.

'Metniks' Happy As Team Wins

They're played five games and already they're won one. This is the fastest-breaking team in Met history.

A happy band of 30,185 Metniks screamed themselves hoarse at Shea Stadium Sunday as their favorites knocked Pittsburgh Pirates out of first place with an astonishing 6-0 victory.

This figure boosted the three - day home attendance to 110,104, nearly three times the number who watched the Mets lose their first three games in the Polo Grounds last year.

Lead Series 3-0

Woodstock Beats Ottawa

OTTAWA (CP) — Before Monday night's game, Ottawa Montagnards had hoped the bigger ice surface here would baffle Woodstock Athletics.

It didn't. And for the third successive game, the Athletics pounded Montagnards toward elimination from the Allan Cup hunt.

Monday night's score was 6-2 —which means that in the three games so far Woodstock has outscored Ottawa 23-5—and the fourth game Wednesday could end the best-of-seven Eastern Canada final series unless there is a fantastic reversal of form.

In the third period Monday, with Athletics in a comfortable lead, they fired 22 shots at Ottawa goaltender Gerry Fleury, bringing the total for the game to 47. Montties managed 28.

After the opening period, when the teams battled to a 1-1 saw-off, there was little doubt about the outcome. The Athletics. far from feeling list in the bigger rink, began burning up the ice in the middle period, and rapped in four goals in the process. While the teams settled for a 1-1 goal swap in the final frame, there was no doubt about the best team on the ice.

SCORE TWO EACH

Al Stitt of Montys and Gord Sampson staged a fine fist-swinging contest in the third before being banished to the over crowded penalty box where the timekeeper had to give up his seat to six visitors. Woodstock playing - coach Ted Power and Ottawa defenceman Ian Anderson also traded blows, and the period was peppered with more minor sins.

If Montties should win Wednesday night, the series would move back to Woodstock for the fifth game.

Despite Notoriously Cold Weather, Skiing in Manitoba Has Increased Past 2 Years

By IRA DEYSDALE

WINNIPEG (CP)—Manitoba, though not the most natural place for skiing, has seen an upsurge in the sport during the last couple of winters.

Despite notoriously cold winter weather, Manitoba's prairie dwellers are seeking out hills and knolls that will serve as ski slopes as they haven't done in years.

Gordon Konantz, president of the Manitoba division of the Canadian Amateu Ski Association, figures the number of active skiers in the province has increased by 700 or 800 in the last two years to around 3,000.

"The Winnipeg Ski Club, formed in the 1920s as the first in Manitoba, maintained a membership of about 200 for several years until last fall when it began increasing to about 450 now.

The provincial government says use of its ski facilities at Falcon Lake, about 90 miles east of here in Whiteshell Provincial Park, has increased by more than 100 per cent over 1963.

Attendance until March 7 this year totalled 9,227 compared with the previous year's total of 4,121.

ENCOURAGE FAMILIES

One slope at Falcon Lake is designated a family-run hill and a government spokesman attributes part of the new boom to that slope's popularity.

For skiers after a bigger challenge, there is Mount Agassiz in Riding Mountain National Park, about 130 miles north-west of Winnipeg. A T-bar lift was put to work there this winter.

Mount Agassiz, the province's biggest ski slope, has a 305-foot vertical drop in a run of about 3,000 feet.

W. E. Organ, Manitoba's director of tourist development, says it is "as good as anything" between the Laurentians and the Rockies.

Konantz refers to the province's club activity as evidence of skiing's growth. The ski association's Manitoba division has seven affiliated clubs, two in Winnipeg besides the Winnipeg Ski Club and others at Flin Flon, Pine Falls, Kenora, Ont., and McCreary — the Riding Mountain club. Clubs are being set up, Konantz says, at Rivers, Dauphin, Thompson and Russell. And not all skiers are club members.

TY BROUGHT SLUMP

Konantz says skiing flourished in Manitoba after the Second World War, then slumped in the 1950s about the time television appeared. Now it appears to be coming back to surpass its earlier popularity.

Growth has been "amazing," Konantz says, despite discouraging factors such as Manitoba's generally short amount of ample snow and the distance to the hills for city dwellers. (Winnipeg's biggest "hills" are river banks and in a few places even these have been developed as ski slopes.)

Mr. Organ, whose department is promoting winter sport, does not agree that features of skiing in Manitoba are unusually discouraging.

He says 150 miles is not considered far to travel for skiing. The heavily developed Riding Mountain run will be good at holding adequate snow because it faces the northeast and is shaded, he adds.

The tourism director grants that Manitoba's winters are cold, but says this is countered by the fact that Manitobans are "a hardy bunch."

In any case, he adds, the skiin, pastime gets a boost in Manitoba from a quirk of human nature which seems to make the hard-to-get attractive.

People who live near ski slopes at their back door often couldn't care less about skiing while plains people seek out a spot to practise the sport.

"That's human nature," he says.

Top British Coach

Joins UBC Sports Staff

LONDON (CP)—Still another top British coach is joining the "Muscle hustle" to Canada.

Lionel Pugh, mentor at Oxford University and former national coach in the Midlands area, leaves in June to become a sports adviser at the University of British Columbia.

Pugh will be billed as "assistant professor in charge of track and field athletics coaching." British reports say, and will draw a salary of about £5,000 ($15,000). This is more than three times what he receives from Britain's Amateur Athletic Association.

The British coach is quoted as saying that Canada is making a "tremendous drive" to become a power in track and field. There was "plenty of money" around to aid the drive.

Just as British scientists are trekking to Canada and the United States in a mass exodus known as the "brain drain," so th coaches from the old country are queuing up to join the muscle hustle or, as some call it, the "train-drain."

Last year it was Geoff Dyson, formerly Britain's top national coach, and Geoff Elliott, the Olympic pole vaulter, who blazed the sporting trail to Canada. Dyson directs Canada's national coaching course at Guelph, and Elliott took over a physical course post at the University of Alberta.

Pugh and Dyson, regarded in Britain as dynamic personalities, are expected to join hands in Canada's national development drive for track and field. Some British track stars, including Peter Radford and John Disley, will go to Guelph this summer to assist in the training course.

Once the Greatest

Lancashire's Cotton Industry Girded for 'Realistic' Survival

By DOUG MARSHALL

PRESTON (CP)—Two signs on the gate of a grim Victorian spinning mill in this English city illustrate the social and economic revolution in Lancashire's cotton industry.

One says: "Operatives needed." The other warns: "Under no circumstances will children under 15 years be allowed to enter the mill."

Less than 40 years ago—before modern factory acts and the First World War—child labor was one of the elements that helped to make cotton one of the greatest industries the world had ever seen.

In those days cotton employed more than 700,000 people and the mills turned out some 7,000,000,000 square yards of cloth a year. Children as young as 12, most of them girls, graduated into the sweltering, lint-filled mills as naturally as today's kids go to high school.

By the time they were 15 the girls were often skilled veterans, minding 60 looms a week tending monotonous spinning machines until their once-nimble fingers grew stiff and callousued to thread the delicate spindles.

WORKERS SCARCE

Now machines do the work of fingers, the girls choose clean office jobs and Preston, which once depended on 20 spinning mills, has difficulty finding enough workers for the three.

Overseas competition and outdated equipment shrank Lancashire cotton to one third of its 1914 capacity and under a massive, government-aided reorganization scheme the present struggle is hurting the economy and has ruined the tourist trade. Big hotels in resorts like Kyrenia and Famagusta stand empty.

TURKISH CONTROL ROAD

A 16-mile road connects Nicosia, the capital, and Kyrenia, on the north coast. But the Turks control this road and won't let a Greek pass on it. As a result, supplies for this port from Nicosia have to go 50 miles by road through the tortuous western end of the Kyrenian range of mountains.

The landlord said: "People from Nicosia don't come here to swim on our beaches any more. They don't drive that road. Business is very bad."

The Turkish Army contingent of 650 men is camped on the road and it will take some moving.

The Turks also control the western side of the Kyrenian pass from St. Hilarion's castle on a mountaintop. The eastern side of the pass is no-man's-land and the Royal 22nd Regiment has to send ominous patrols across the mountain peaks and ridges to keep Greeks and Turks apart.

SOME STUFF

Turks have been cut off in some cases from gallages near the pass and some are said to be starving to death because the Greeks won't allow food supplies to reach them.

Houses have been burned and looted in the village fighting and beautiful olive orchards laid waste.

As in the Mafia in Sicily and the vendettas of Corsica, revenge is elevated to high principle. There is no calling tragic or brave about revenge in Cyprus. It is symbolized by the murder of a lone unarmed shepherd in a remote pasture. It is the kind of thing the Murder Mile all over again but on a bigger scale.

This has introduced another dangerous element in the situation—the cold contempt, and sometimes hatred of the British Tommy for the Greeks.

UN NEEDS BRITISH

The killing of a Cypriot by a British soldier, even in self-defence, might bring back the armed underground campaign of EOKA.

For their part, extremist Greeks usually refer to the British soldiers as "bloody British bastards."

The United Nations force in Cyprus can't do without the British because not enough nations volunteered contingents for the force. The British will make up half of it even when the Swedes, Finns and Irish finally arrive.

The Greeks are using this to a farcheweal for propaganda purposes. They say that if only the British weren't in the force, everything would be peace and light.

But it is not the British who are killing Greeks and Turks. Murder here is intramural.

WROTE OPERA

Giuseppe Verdi was 73 in 1886 when he completed his opera Othello, based on the Shakespearean tragedy.

"I know it's last year's, but I couldn't find a 1964 one with pictures I liked as well."

In Cyprus Everybody Talks About Peace But Nobody Doing Much About It

By DAVE McINTOSH

KYRENIA, Cyprus (CP)—In his cramped, one-room tavern here, the landlord poured a beer and shook his head with dismay.

"Bad, very bad for business," he said of the current situation. "All we want is peace."

In Nicosia April 5 an armed Greek Cypriot was shot dead on the cease-fire line in the inner walled city. In Gestapo-like reprisal, the Greeks coldly murdered two Turks the next evening in a field outside the capital.

Five western villages—even one flame of hte burned even brighter. Men from Greek and Turk villages blazed away at each other in the hills. Only phenomenally bad shooting kept the casualties low.

Greeks and Turks both tell you they don't want to fight, that all they want is peace.

Then why do they murder each other?

MANY ARE THUGS

The Greeks tell you that the Turks, who form a small minority, are in open rebellion and that the "terrorists" must be crushed so that law and order can be restored. They suppose restoration of law and order is being accomplished by the arming of thousands of Greeks who are alleged policemen, militiamen, national guardsmen and what have you. The plain fact is that many of them are thugs and bandits who shoot only in the back and like to loot houses.

The Turks tell you they are only trying to protect their villages, that theirs is only a defensive struggle. But there is no doubt they provoke many of the incidents to try to win world sympathy, the protection of the United Nations and the support of Turkey.

poisonous situation is the Cypriot love of business—and kind of business. The present struggle is hurting the economy and has ruined the tourist trade. Big hotels in resorts like Kyrenia and Famagusta stand empty.

Television Must Establish Characters Quickly—Show

By CYNTHIA LOWRY

NEW YORK (AP) — Television, for the most part limited to half-hour and hour shows, has the perennial problem of establishing characters quickly, effectively and unmistakably.

That's why the medium comes almost after year to use a handful of easily identified status symbols.

For instance, rich people in television land drink a lot of hard liquor. It is there the dancers atop a living room bar. As the characters move down the social scale, drinking becomes progressively more primitive until we find flop house inhabitants drinking directly from the bottle.

Poor people, it can be noted, spend much time in their kitchens, and eat a lot. The men are likely to be in shirt sleeves and the women in practical aprons, and sometimes we see them with their hair in curlers. Rich women always have every strand of complicated hairdos in place.

There are other incidental clues for the initiated. Rich people have emotional troubles; poor people have financial troubles. Almost always, the poor have better characters.

'The Sound of Music' Being Filmed at Westwood Hills

By BOB THOMAS

HOLLYWOOD (AP) — The Westwood Hills are alive with The Sound of Music.

It's news nowadays whenever a studio starts a musical, especially one as auspicious as the final Rodgers-Hammerstein collaboration, which 20th Century-Fox is making. Fifteen years ago, a score of musicals would be shooting at one time. In 1963, only two were made: My Fair Lady and The Unsinkable Molly Brown.

Why the dearth of musicals? The answer seems to lie in the all-important overseas market. With a rare exception like West Side Story, Europeans look with disfavor on the unreality of most Hollywood musicals. A special problem has been the translation of songs.

"We're working on that right now," said Robert Wise, who is producing and directing The Sound of Music.

"We have people in Europe making translations of the lyrics into the various languages of the foreign market—French, Italian, German and Spanish. I don't think that has ever been done while a film was still in production. But I feel it is essential.

MUSIC CUT OUT

"In the past many musicals have been cut overseas by poor translations of the songs. In some cases, like The King and I, most of the original numbers have been cut out for the foreign market, thus eliminating the major reason the film was made."

Wise was directing a cemetery scene with Broadway stars Julie Andrews and Montreal's Christopher Plummer, who are playing the leads created by Mary Martin and Theodore Bickel. The musical sequence before the company left for locations in Salsburg, Austria.

"Actually I have a feel for the musical, even though this is only my second one," he remarked. "When I was a cutter at RKO in the 1930s, I worked on most of the great Astaire-Rogers pictures—Top Hat, Carefree, and the list goes. The Castle. It was good background for what I'm doing now."

OTTAWA (CP)—External Affairs Minister Martin announced Monday that the federal government will pay the transportation of volunteers going to developing countries for Canadian University Service Overseas. He told the National Conference of Canadian Universities and Colleges that CUSO has done useful work in the last few years in providing opportunities for young Canadian graduates to serve in developing countries.

Stratford-on-Gore: Real-Life Drama

ANCOUVER (CP) — The drama at Stratford-on-Gore is real, and the troupe belongs to an exclusive club.

The scene is the five-storey, 20-room Stratford Hotel on Gore Avenue in the heart of Vancouver's skid road. The "resident players" is drawn from the worst skid road drunks.

Lou Libby, a former Moose Jaw, Sask., businessman, who owns the hotel, encounters the real-life drama every day in a unique experiment which city welfare authorities hope will result in food and a place to sleep for the chronic drunks.

The 70 drunks at the hotel each are allocated $65 monthly in assistance by the welfare department. In the past most of them drank their way through it's in as little as 48 hours, then faced month-long starvation unless they stole or begged on the street.

Under the experiment devised by welfare officials, Libby receives all the welfare cheques, totalling about $4,600, and deducts $30 a month in room rent for each tenant.

He doles out the remaining $36 often in meal tickets rather than cash, to keep the drunks from squandering it on liquor, then shaving lotion and finally, hair tonic and canned heat (wood alcohol).

ALCOHOL FIRST

Libby does not fool himself.

"I know they spend part of that money on cheap alcohol. Some spend all of it, I guess. They all think of alcohol before food.

"We can't stop them from sneaking canned heat or other stuff up to their rooms."

Sometimes the experiment works and a man "dries up" and obtains a job. Sometimes, as in the case of Michael Platko, 39, it doesn't.

Platko, an alcoholic on welfare almost half his life, went on a canned heat binge in the hotel. He was found dead in his room the next morning.

Others at the Stratford are under a death sentence, too, say welfare officers. Some will die of liver, kidney or brain damage caused by excessive alcohol.

But the times the plan does work make it worthwhile for Libby. "If I didn't think this plan was doing some good I'd go crazy."

The worst drunks are given meal tickets only, no cash. If they improve, they are given $25 a day, and finally a lump sum of $9 a week, in the morning lineup before a wicket at Libby's office.

"The Stratford plan has given us a chance to control the way these men spend the public's money," says one social worker. "It has also given the men a chance to control themselves."

HOTEL FOR DRUNKS—Lou Libby, a former Moose Jaw, Sask., businessman, houses 70 drunks at his Stratford Hotel on Vancouver's Skid Road as part of an experiment by city welfare authorities. Under the experiment Libby receives all the welfare cheques of his patrons and deducts a month in room rent and doles out the remaining often in meal tickets rather than cash to keep them from spending it on liquor. Five of Her 14 Husbands Broke Her Nose

By HAL BOYLE

Six of every 100 persons are lefthanded.

Now hear this! . . . Your ears may not be at fault, if you're suffering from progressive loss of hearing. . . . Often infected teeth are to blame.

Hint to housewives: Do fresh paint odors bother you? . . . You can get rid of them by putting into the room a large pan of water containing a tablespoon of ammonia. (Then you only have the problem of getting rid of the ammonia fumes.)

How many tennis fans know that Egyptians were batting balls across nets 300 years before the Christian era began?

Domestic bliss: Beverly Nina Avery of Los Angeles, while obtaining in 1957 her 16th divorce from her 14th husband (she had some rematches) claimed that five of her spouses had broken her nose.

Quotable notables: "Life is 10 per cent what you make it and 90 per cent how you take it."—Irving Berlin.

If you collect bus transfers, you're a peridromophist—that's what you are.

Men like to look up to women. . . . This may explain why Gen Tom Thumb, history's most famous dwarf, married a girl 32 inches tall, an inch higher than himself.

. . . Their union was blessed with a dwarf son who became known as Commodore Nutt.

Great bequest: Emperor Montezuma of the Aztecs gave to his Spanish conqueror Cortes something more valuable than the gold he sought—the secret of chocolate. . . . From Spain the love of chocolate spread throughout the world.

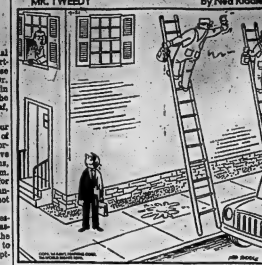
Folklore: A child will grow up to be vain if it sees itself in a mirror before it is a year old . . . Any person with a second toe longer than his big toe is born to be a ruler. . . . And, if this person is a wife, she will boss her husband.

GROWS ALL SIZES

Bamboo, a grass, ranges in size anywhere from a few inches tall to 120 feet high and 12 inches in diameter.

Do We Shun Deaf Citizens?

VANCOUVER (CP) — Social acceptance is the most important thing in the world for those who cannot hear, says Dr. Pierre Gorman, a specialist in psychological problems at the Royal Institute for the Deaf, London.



Here recently on a world tour to meet workers in the field of speech and hearing, Dr. Gorman said many people give money to deaf organizations, then wash their hands of them. Deaf persons aspiring for jobs are given all sorts of fantastic reasons why they cannot be hired, he added.

"Money donations are necessary to provide schools and assistance for deaf people, but the most important thing today is to give them equal social acceptance."

Most people expected the deaf to do only certain types of work, such as leather or woodwork.

"But it needs only a small adjustment on the part of his workmates for a deaf person to cope with most careers. For instance, a deaf bookkeeper can work just as well as an ordinary person with the same qualifications, provided one other member of the staff will answer the telephone."

HARDY PLANT

Automation Helps Heart Patients

VICTORIA (CP) — Automation is moving to the heart patient's bedside.

Cardiac cases in Royal Jubilee Hospital here soon won't have to reach for a buzzer to summon a nurse.

A machine will do it automatically.

A project under way will wire heart patients to a new $3,400 monitor being installed in the intensive care unit at the hospital. The system is already in use in some other Canadian hospitals.

Nurses will see at a glance the heartbeat, pulse and blood pressure of all patients connected to the system without having to make a bedside check.

Should a patient's condition deteriorate, the machine — sensitive to response outside normal limits—will ring a bell to call immediate aid to the bedside.

The Brand New CHEVY-VAN
WITH MORE GO-POWER, MORE STOPPING-POWER THAN ANY OTHER DELIVERY VAN IN ITS CLASS!

Chevy-Van by Chevrolet: A Low-Cost, Light-Duty Truck, Designed and Built to Carry Maximum Loads at Minimum Cost Through the Heaviest Big-City Traffic.

Read the facts about this brand-new addition to the Chevrolet Truck line.

New Chevy-Van's got the Power You Need.
Chevrolet engineers gave the Chevy-Van plenty of power to cope with fast-moving traffic. Standard engine is the 90-hp High Torque 153 Four. Optional at extra cost is the 120-hp High Torque 194 Six. Both are built for economy, dependability and smooth running, with 3 main bearings in the 153 Four and 7 main bearings in the 194 Six. They'll deliver the power you want at minimum cost with either the 3-speed Synchro-Mesh or optional Powerglide automatic transmission.

New Chevy-Van's got the Stopping-Power Required in Heavy Traffic.
For today's traffic you need more than just adequate brakes. That's why the new Chevy-Van is equipped with fully self-adjusting hydraulic brakes with plenty of lining area — plenty of stopping-power! Ribbed brake drums give more effective cooling and greater rigidity. That means greater resistance to fading — longer lining life. In addition, Chevy-Van's ideal body-payload weight distribution means that there's no nose-diving under hard braking. Loaded or empty, Chevy-Van's got the stopping-power you've been looking for in a light-duty delivery van.

New Chevy-Van's got the Payload Space You Want.
With a maximum GVW rating of 5000 lbs, the Chevy-Van can carry a full 2000 pounds of payload in its 211 cubic foot cargo compartment. Clear load space is 7½ feet long with an additional 4 feet of load space along the right side of the engine. Curb-side doors (optional at extra cost) open to over 4 feet in both width and height, making loading or delivery safe and convenient. All doors have locks, and feature Chevrolet's convenient single-key locking system.

New Chevy-Van's got the Loading Ease You Like!
Chevy-Van's double rear doors open mighty wide — giving easy access to the perfectly flat ribbed steel floor. Thresholds not even a raised sill to get in the way. Add that to its 22 inch floor height, and you'll see why Chevy-Van will be a real asset in your delivery operation.

New Chevy-Van's got the Handling Ease You Need.
Total overall length is just 167¾ inches — on a 90 inch wheelbase. With its 32¾ foot turning circle and excellent driver visibility, every driving manoeuvre in a Chevy-Van is sure and simple.

BANGKOK (AP)—Thailand's Anti-Minor Wives Association is waging a two-front war: 1. To legislation against procurers of young girls as mistresses for rich men. 2. At 84, Smithy Plies Trade And Rides Bicycle for Fun

By RUSSEL LLANDSTROM

ROSETO, Pa. (AP) — The doctor sized up the sharp-eyed, muscular man plying his trade at anvil and forge and said: "You've got to admit they don't come like that any more."

He was observing Peter Ronca, who, bearing 84 years up to 24 hours some days at the craft of blacksmithing, rides a bicycle for fun, and boasts a young man's appetite.

Peter Ronca might easily stand for a proud and living symbol of this Lehigh Valley town of about 1,700, nearly all of Italian origin, which is so healthy the experts scarcely can credit it.

In 1962 and again last year medical teams from the University of Oklahoma put Roneca and his fellow Rosetanos under the microscope to try to find out why they ticked so vigorously and so long despite a blithe disregard of so many commonly accepted health rules.

In Roseto, the overweight carry their poundage as Don Quixote wore his armor. Add to the heart of Roseto is the town's reputation, recorded by the University of Oklahoma investigators, of being among the biggest eaters in the land.

The paradox is, however, that the medical teams found the death rate from heart disease here was about one-third of the U.S. average of three out of 1,000 deaths a year. Even that doesn't tell the whole story. From 1936 to 1963 nobody died from heart disease in Roseto.

What's the secret?

LOTS OF THEORIES

There is no shortage of theory: Food and drink, heredity, environment, the gift of laughter, an unruffled way of life.

One of the oldest persons given the tests last year, Ronca was told that his heart and general health seemed as sound as ever.

He was eight years old when his family brought him here from the Italian village of Roseto near Naples. At the age of 10 he went to work in the quarries.

Ronca and his wife, Mary, 77, live on their own, and manage exceedingly well. Married nearly 60 years, they had six children in all, losing three.

He didn't wear glasses until he was nearly 79, and his friends relate, he still can climb a tree and will oblige if need be to silence scorns. Just before his 83rd birthday last June 29 he chopped down a 50-foot tree.

On what does this man feed to remain so hardy?

For one thing, meat two or three times a day. Spaghetti, too, nearly every day, along with lots of vegetables. He likes his wine and beer and is seldom without a pipe or a chew of tobacco.

A couple of years ago he decided to cut down a bit on the food intake. For him then, as for other Rosetanos now, it was commonplace to stow away a snack of sausage, cheese, hard-boiled eggs, anchovies, hot peppers and pickles, radishes, onions and cucumbers, olives and celery, loaves upon loaves of fresh bread, doughnuts and a copious flow of wine.

The medical experts figure all they can do is to go on taking tests and checking backgrounds in the effort to equate the heavy eating and the eating of so much starchy food with the long and happy life of the Rosetanos.

"Does the explanation lie in contentment?" asked one of the survey team. "It may well be so. These people have escaped the rat race that tears so many Americans apart. They don't worry; they accept as case; they are not impressed by show and swank; they refuse to spoil their lives with driving, destroying ambitions."

The Blind Goddess Takes a Kicking

Epitaph to Stephen Ward

By JOSEPH MacSWEEN

LONDON (CP) — The time-hallowed majesty of English justice comes in for serious knocks in the Mr. Justice Ward, a book dealing with the last days of a central figure in last June's Profumo scandals.

Author Izadovic Kennedy contends, in effect, that it was a case of the Establishment closing ranks, breaking the law when Ward was convicted on two of five counts of living on immoral earnings. He was shown to be an immoral man, a scapegoat, but not a criminal, Kennedy writes.

"I and others present at the trial believed, and many lawyers (including one High Court judge I know) also believe that on the evidence before the jury there was—to put it no higher—'reasonable doubt' as to Ward's guilt, and he should have been acquitted."

The reaction of newspapers and magazines has followed political lines to some extent but on balance the critics see value in at least some of the points made by Kennedy.

The author of Ten Rillington Place, which also dealt with justice, Kennedy, 45, is well known in Britain as a television commentator as well as a writer. Husband of ballerina Moira Shearer, he was private secretary to the last governor of Newfoundland.

TOOK OWN LIFE

Ward, 50-year-old osteopath-physiotherapist, died of a drug overdose before the jury returned its verdict—Mr. Justice Archie Marshall never had a chance to pronounce sentence—in a case so sordid that many people would like to see it banished from memory.

Party-girl Christine Keeler, one of the prosecution's chief witnesses, later confessed to perjury in another but related hearing in the complex of scandal that followed the resignation of former war minister John Profumo, one - time friend of Christine.

Kennedy charges that the Ward trial blundered on although it had become known there was a possibility that Miss Keeler was a perjurer. He also charges that the police, in the case of Ward, did not discover a crime and then seek the criminal.

Kennedy makes this analysis:

"Many people have asked who it was who was responsible for Ward's persecution. I think the answer lies not in the specific orders of any one person, but in the spontaneous actions of many.

"When the Establishment closes its ranks, authority takes arms against what it mistakenly believes to be a sea of unpopular opinion. In the judge's own weird jargon) there were 'in this city many witnesses of high social status who could have come and testified support' of Ward's evidence, and did not do; and during the long investigation and trial, each rats did it."

PUBLICITY PREJUDICIAL

One of the focuses of Kennedy's indictment is the procedure of the preliminary hearing in magistrate's court. Wide publicity in a sensational case is likely to prejudice a jury in subsequent trial.

"Preliminary proceedings are prejudicial and they take up a lot of wasted time in the magistrates' courts," says the weekly Spectator in reviewing "the trial." "their replacement by documentary evidence now is an urgent necessity."

The Sunday Telegraph refers to Kennedy as a "self-appointed 12th juryman" and suggests it would be interesting to have a reply from the chairman of the jury. The jury had shown discrimination by convicting Ward on two counts and finding him not guilty on three others.

It was hard not to have "emotional sympathy" for Ward in view of his suicide, the news paper says. "But one tends to forget that he was not sentenced to death; he was found guilty of two misdemeanors for which he might only have been fined."

The delicate point of Mr. Justice Marshall's instructions to the jury is touched upon in the left-wing New Statesman by Malcolm Muggeridge, who says that witnesses who could have shed real light on the case, such as Ward's friend, Lord Astor, were not called.

"According to the judge, the fact that they did not come forward reflected adversely on Ward's position," Muggeridge writes.

RAYS ARGUMENT OBD

"This seemed to me, a non-lawyer, a most extraordinary argument. If (to use the judge's own weird jargon) there were 'in this city many witnesses of high social status who could have come and testified support' of Ward's evidence, and did not, that might just as well be taken as reflecting on their cowardice as on Ward's guilt.

"Nor should this judge be under any misapprehension. The non-appearance of Lord Astor signified, to the vast majority of ordinary citizens, not Ward's guilt, but the preferential treatment accorded to the rich and socially eminent.

"The prevailing assumption was, and remains, that anyone poor and a commoner who had been as intimately associated with Ward would assuredly have been summoned. . . . Mr. Muggeridge endorses Kennedy's advice:

"Let no one pretend that our system of justice is a search for truth. It is nothing of the kind. It is a contest between two sides played according to certain rules, and if the truth happens to emerge as a result of the contest, then that is pure windfall."

Patting Europe in Orbit

The Europeans hope to send their own satellites, space probes and a large orbiting astronomical observatory over the next few years. They also aim to capture some of the scientific, technical and economic benefits nearly monopolized by the United States and Soviet Union.

With less than $500,000,000 over five years, this budget compared with the $2,530,000,000 U.S. space budget for one year alone, they hardly hope to rival the giants. But they are forging ahead with efforts to get Europe into orbit.

The combined effort lets the smaller countries share in developments that would be too costly on an individual basis. For other countries such as France it supplements national programs.

The program is in two stages which maintain a wide administrative separation. They share the same headquarters building but admit to only informal contacts.

SMACKS OF WEAPONRY

The reason is that neutral countries shy away from the direct association with military weaponry.

The satellite-making stage is known as the European Space Research Organization. It is supported by Belgium, Britain, Denmark, France, West Germany, The Netherlands, Spain, Sweden, Switzerland, and, when it ratifies the agreement as expected, Italy.

The rocketry group is known as the European Launcher Development Organization. Its members include Australia, the only non-European participant, plus Belgium, Britain, France, West Germany, The Netherlands and—again on ratification—Italy.

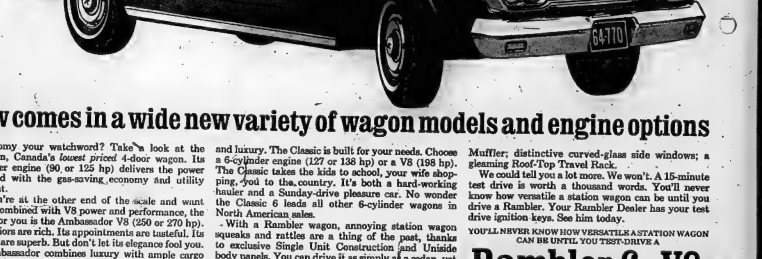
ESRO has a $200,000,000 budget spread over eight years to launch 400 sounding rockets, a small and eight medium satellites and seven space probes. It is dedicated to peaceful purposes only.

Only the rockets are lacking from ESRO plans, and that's where ELDO comes in. Its $196,000,000 five - year budget should yield by 1968 a three-stage rocket capable of putting 1.2 metric tons into a low orbit or smaller loads into higher orbits.

ESRO is counting heavily on the ELDO rocket for advanced projects but in the meantime will use British, French and American rockets for launchings.

Britain will supply the first stage of the rocket, picking up the Blue Streak where it will be abandoned as a British strategic weapon in 1960.

The second stage is being made by France and Germany will build the stubby third stage. Italy will supply test vehicles. Belgium will provide downranges guidance stations, and The Netherlands the long-range telemetry facilities.



If all goes well, the first all-European satellite launcher, Europa I, should blast off in 1968.

BRITAIN AND RUSSIA EXCHANGE SPIES

Unions Restless About U.S. Control

Britain Trades Master Spy For Businessman

Man Who Gave Reds Navy Secrets Released

LONDON (Reuters) — British businessman Greville Wynne, convicted by the Russians as a spy and freed today in an exchange for a Russian master spy held by the British, came home today, pale, drawn, and with a shaved head.

Wynne said his exchange for Russian spy Gordon Lonsdale in Berlin this morning had come as a great surprise.

"I only had the news yesterday when I was sitting in my cell in Moscow. They did not give me any direct indication that I was going to be exchanged. They just said there was a possibility that I was leaving the prison," Wynne said.

"I did not know where I was going or anything about it. It was a complete surprise."

Lonsdale, whose real name was Conor Molody, was a high-ranking officer in the Soviet intelligence service.

WAS IN CANADA

He went from Russia to Canada in 1954 and during the year or so he spent there he took over the identity of the dead Gordon Lonsdale, who had vanished from Canada after a boyhood with his Finnish mother.

In 1955, the new Lonsdale sailed to England via New York to set up his spy ring, and for the next four years was successful in passing to the Russians vital information on British defences.

He was the most damaging of the group of spies brought to trial in March, 1961, and was sentenced to 25 years — a record at that time.

The exchange was made at the Heerstrasse crossing point between the British sector of West Berlin and East Germany at 5:35 a.m. Wynne, 43, arrived at London's Northolt Airport just outside London aboard an RAF plane seven hours later.

He wore a dark, pin-striped suit.

A defence ministry spokesman said Wynne was "very tired."

"He just wants to get home to see his wife and family," the spokesman said.

WIFE WAITS

Wynne's wife, Sheila, 42, who saw him in prison in Russia last month, was waiting for her husband.

Labor Congress Hears Demands For Home Rule

CLC Decides Problem Up to Individual Unions

MONTREAL (CP) — The Canadian Labor Congress Tuesday turned down proposals aimed at encouraging greater autonomy for Canadian locals of international unions.

The autonomy demands were voiced in eight resolutions placed before the 1,500 delegates at the CLC convention here—all seeking home rule for Canadian unionists in unions based in the United States.

All were rejected by a vote of about three to one on the grounds that the CLC cannot force its affiliated international unions to give greater power to their Canadian branches. This could only be achieved by the individual unions through constitutional amendments.

Ed Finn, Ottawa, public relations director of the Canadian Brotherhood of Railway, Transport and General Workers, a national union, said the most outspoken supporters of greater independence are Canadian locals of international unions.

DISLIKE RESTRAINTS

He said the nationalist feeling arises from growing dissatisfaction with restraints imposed on Canadian locals by some international unions through constitutions and policies designed almost exclusively by American.

James Perna of Hamilton, a representative of the United Glass and Ceramic Workers of North America, said his union has full autonomy in Canada, yet still appreciates financial and moral assistance from the United States in strike situations.

In another debate, delegates demonstrated strong interest in a resolution aimed at reducing working hours to a maximum of eight hours a day and 40 hours a week.

Twelve men were lined up at floor microphones waiting their turn to speak when adjournment for a stag debate before the resolution came to a vote.

Don McNabb of Sudbury, United Steelworkers of America delegate, said the 40-hour week

Forces In High State Of Alert

By DAVE McINTOSH

OTTAWA (CP)—If there has been a relaxation in the push and pull of the cold war—and the external affairs department says there has been—the defence department apparently hasn't taken any formal note of it.

Authorities disclosed Tuesday that Canada's field forces are on at least as high a state of alert as they were during the 1961 Berlin crisis.

In October, 1961, at the height of the Berlin scare, the Canadian Army brigade in Europe numbered 6,100. At the end of March, 1964, its strength was 6,200. In the meantime, the United States has recalled 41,000 reinforcing troops from Europe.

NAVY STRENGTH UP

In the fall of 1961, fleet personnel strength was brought up to 90 per cent of wartime complement from 80. Officials said the percentage still remains at 90 though over - all naval strength has been reduced by 1,000 men to 20,700 as an economy measure.

RCA FAir Defence Command went into an increased state of readiness in late 1961 and early 1962.

One-third of the command's 60 CF-101B Voodoo jet interceptors were on 15-minute alert at all times. Previously, some planes on readiness call were permitted as much as an hour

White Tams' Request for More Wins Sympathy, No Money

TORONTO (CP) — A provincial government official told members of the Union of Electors Tuesday that they could not get what they wanted without the coming of victory.

"I sympathize with your request for more money or anything you body wants more," Noble Drew, acting director of general welfare assistance, told members of the group, known as the White Tams when they appeared at Queen's Park.

Today's Chuckle

It takes a baby about two years to learn to talk and about 60 years to learn to keep his mouth shut.

THE WEATHER

Synopsis: Drenching rains and thunder rolled across the lower lakes Tuesday night in advance of warmer air which moved into southwestern Ontario. A few showers remain this morning but some clearing is anticipated. Most localities will be considerably warmer than Tuesday. The storm brought wet snow and chilly rains into northwestern Ontario.

Maurice Brisson of Spanish Ont., and four others have been charged with stealing the car with a flag stating "death to taxes."

Mr. Drew told them they could not receive more welfare than the relief payments they are already getting. He advised them to report to the regional welfare office in Sault Ste. Marie for help in finding work.

The White Tams are predominantly French-Canadians and live mostly in Northern Ontario. They wear white berets, large medals of the Virgin Mary and armbands bearing a skull and crossbones insignia and the words, in French, "Death to taxes."

Brisson, father of 14 who has lived on welfare for three years, has been quoted as saying: "We don't believe in elections or political parties because they divide the people."

The members live on relief and refuse to pay taxes.

Stanley Farquhar, Liberal member for Algoma-Manitoulin, claimed in the legislature last Tuesday that "agitators" were involved in a movement to bleed the government's welfare fund by telling potential recruits to "join our ranks and we'll get you welfare."

Win Vote On DVA Hospitals

By RONALD LEBEL

OTTAWA (CP)—By a vote of 123 to 94, the minority Liberal government, in effect, won Commons approval Tuesday night for its bold policy to turn some or all of the 11 veterans hospitals over to local authorities.

The 106 Liberals present were backed by 10 Creditistes and seven Social Credit MPs as they defeated a Conservative nonconfidence motion deploring the government's plans and its rejection of representations from veterans organizations.

The motion was supported by 82 Conservatives and 12 New Democrats. Their spokesmen attacked the government for spending worry and confusion among disabled and chronically ill veterans.

Today the Commons resumes debate on the redistribution bill. If passed in its present form, the bill will mean that the boundaries of nearly every constituency will be changed by 10 independent commissions—one for each province.

At the normal adjournment hour of 10 p.m. Tuesday, the house went into a 25-minute overtime period. It was the first such special debate since rule changes were approved Monday for a six-week trial.

FEW HARD SHOTS

Three opposition MPs argued that some grievance that had been aired repeatedly before and government spokesmen gave little or no new information in their replies.

Louis - Joseph Pigeon (PC—Jolette — l'Assomption - Montcalm) complained about countries that refuse to contribute to the United Nations to finance the Cyprus peace force. He said Canada should withdraw from the UN unless other countries pay up.

Ernest J. Fairs Minister Martin declined comment.

Robert C. Coates (PC—Cumberland) said the UN Ensign should be retained as the Canadian flag. Jack Davis, parliamentary secretary to Prime Minister Pearson, repeated the government's pledge to recommend by April 15, 1965, the adoption of a flag design.

ASKS HIGHER PENSIONS

Stanley Knowles (NDP—Winnipeg North Centre) called for higher pensions for retired civil servants, with increases in the cost of living. Ben Benson, parliamentary secretary to Finance Minister Sharp, said the pension structure will be reviewed.

Most of the day was devoted to the hospitals issue.

Veterans Minister Teillet defended the government's hospi-

The Two Faces of Labor

SIU Penthouse Far Cry From Old Days

MONTREAL (CP) — In the huge hall of a downtown Montreal hotel trade unionists from the Seaway-built days of labor aired their ideas about overtime, human rights, working conditions.

A few blocks away, in the sixth-floor penthouse office of the Seafarers' International Union of Canada, a panel in the wall silently moved upwards to reveal a TV set and like drapes slid back magically from a vast expanse of sunlight windows.

Both are pictures of organized labor in Canada in 1964.

At the hotel, some 1,200 delegates from about 100 unions were embroiled in policy debates at the 20th constitutional convention of the Canadian Labor Congress. Out of raw resolutions and impassioned speeches, they were fashioning the policies that will guide organized labor for the next two years.

They heard Prime Minister Pearson appeal for labor's support for a program of economic growth aimed at curbing unemployment and providing better care, pensions and other social welfare programs.

They talked about helping Indians and Eskimos find their rightful place in Canadian society.

They argued about international unionism—and decided by a three-to-one vote to keep the problem aside for another two years, rejecting any CLC move to force unions with United States roots to grant greater autonomy to their Canadian locals.

It was the parliament of labor in session.

Down the street near the waterfront, Charles Millard, one-time leader of the Steelworkers union in Canada, was demonstrating the automated devices that SIU President Hal C. Banks had installed in his penthouse office.

Mr. Banks was gone—deposed last month by the trustees.

But the leather-covered walls in the foyer of his executive suite were still there, as was the miniature aquarium in the wall. So was his massive circular desk and his padded chair set higher than all other chairs so that he looked down on his visitors.

Mr. Millard, appointed by the government as one of three trustees to end Great Lakes labor troubles, demonstrated the devices for visiting reporters.

He twisted a knob and the TV set was unveiled behind a sliding wall panel. Another knob was turned and the lights went on in the aquarium. The curtains opened.

In the toilet was a telephone extension. The deep pile of the carpeting felt soft and silent. The modern chairs were low and padded.

By next week, the desk will be gone—possibly the last symbol of a man who was denounced by a federal inquiry as a power-hungry tyrant, a cornered and lawless leader who ran a job-selling racket instead of a union.

The office of Mr. Banks will be turned into a board room for the SIU executive.

Reporters saw the recreation room for off-duty sailors, the free medical clinic and the barbershop.

Some searched the push-button record files for clues to the dreaded do-not-ship list—unsuccessfully.

"You won't find it," said an SIU official. "They were burned last year."

LEADER AFTER STAGING COUP IN LAOS — Gen. Kouprasith Abhay of the Laotian army walks down a Vientiane street after staging a coup this week against neutralist Premier Prince Souvanna Phouma. The latter claimed his coalition government continues to function despite the rightwing coup which unseated him.

Shipowner-Bargaining Team Pleases Maritime Trustees

MONTREAL (CP) — The stage has been set for industry-wide bargaining in the maritime industry with the formation of a bargaining team of shipowners to meet with union leaders. The government's marine union trustees said today.

They made the announcement in a three-page message to the members of the Seafarers' International Union of Canada (Ind), now being distributed to seamen aboard ships and in SIU halls.

The message gives the first full picture of the major plans of reform within the SIU portrayed by a federal inquiry as a lawless, corrupt union.

The trustees hailed the formation of an employers' committee for industry - wide bargaining as a "real step forward."

A source said the committee includes representatives of the Canada Steamship Lines and Upper Lakes Shipping shipping companies, two major Great Lakes firms that had withdrawn from earlier efforts to set up a united front among shipowners.

Indications are the Canadian Maritime Union will continue its separate bargaining with Upper Lakes for its 400 members on Upper Lakes ships. The SIU, meanwhile, is preparing its contract demands to be served on the other major Canadian shipping lines, including CSL.

Formation of a shipowners' committee is expected to produce coordinated bargaining — although the two unions will operate separately during the current contract talks. Industry-wide bargaining could be in effect at the next round—possibly in 1965.

Premier Lloyd Faces First Test at Polls

REGINA (CP)—The political leadership of Premier Woodrow Lloyd gets its first major test today as grain-rich Saskatchewan becomes the 10th province to hold a general election in the last 18 months.

The CCF party, which has governed the province with its own brand of socialism for 20 years, is starting its sixth consecutive mandate. Governments in all other provinces were returned in their elections.

Stall-In At Fair Fizzles

By JAMES DEVLIN

NEW YORK (AP)—A "stall-in" by militant civil rights demonstrators which was intended to block highway traffic failed today and failed to disrupt the opening of the New York World's Fair.

Leaders of the demonstration had promised that hundreds of automobiles would be stalled on approaches to the fair but police found only a small number to tow away.

However, traffic was much lighter than on a normal day, evidently because of advance public threats.

"People apparently have avoided coming into the area," said Traffic Commissioner H. A. Barnes.

The promised "stall-in" by a militant faction of the Congress of Racial Equality did not materialize on the complex maze of highways leading to the fairground in time to block the opening.

HALT INTERFERENCE

A huge force of police—2,000 city patrolmen and 2,000 private guards in and around the grounds, plus countless other's patrolling highways and subway lines—acted effectively to thwart any interference.

However, a delegation of about 120 members, mostly Negro, of the national C.O.R.E. organization entrained at Pennsylvania Station to demonstrate outside certain pavilions, chiefly those of southern states but also including some of industry.

The purpose, according to James Farmer, national director of C.O.R.E., was to "spotlight the issue between the glitter and fantasy of the world's fair and the real world of discrimination."

Rain through the night and morning also contributed to cutting down highway travel and attendance at the fair.

The traffic situation was eased further when a New York Mets baseball game, scheduled for this afternoon in Shea Stadium adjacent to the fairgrounds was called off because of the weather.

VIOLENCE OCCURS

In one, some demonstrators jumped to the tracks in the city's first subway "lie - in." More than 30 were arrested. Three pickets were arrested at another station in a clash with police.

New York Negroes Beat Jews

NEW YORK (AP) —About 50 Negro youths, shouting anti-semitic epithets, attacked a group of Hebrew school pupils in Brooklyn Tuesday, injuring at least 15 of them, police said. Two rabbis who went to the aid of their pupils also were beaten.

Within 1½ hours after the melee broke out, and calm had been restored, 10 Negro youths beat up 10-year-old Samuel Lipschutz outside the school and fled, police said.

The first outbreak occurred during noon recess at the United Lubavitcher Yeshivoth, a Hebrew grammer-high school in the Bedford-Stuyvesant section, a predominantly Negro, neighborhood.

The Negro youths, boys and girls, some carrying sticks, bottles, chains and switch blade knives, began to punch and hit pupils on the school grounds. The pupils, ranging in age from 9 to 12, fought back with their fists, witnesses said.

Rabbi Abraham Baritmsky, 66, took on a boy he supposed to be a leader of the Negro youths. But the youth's fingers were cut by this garbage can lid," the rabbi said.

It ended when Leo Berkman, 43, a city building inspector, stopped his car and made a citizen's arrest of a 15-year-old Negro boy. Berkman said the youth clouted him with a belt buckle when he identified himself. The Negro youths fled upon hearing police sirens.

DOUBLE JAILED

MONTREAL (CP) — Frank Lefievre, 24, was sentenced Tuesday to 18 months in jail on charges of impersonation and fraud arising from his physical resemblance to former transport minister Leon Balcer. He was charged with passing a worthless cheque for $300 after proclaiming he was the man who was being headed transport in Canada.

Foreboding Seems to Be Keynote For Commonwealth Parley in July

LONDON (CP) — A note of foreboding is predominant in the public approach to the Commonwealth prime ministers conference to be held July 8-15.

Prime Minister Sir Alec Douglas - Home announced the date Tuesday but that seems to be almost the only certainty about the conference which the Commonwealth at one of its deepest points of uncertainty.

Crisis can say the uncertainty starts in Britain where a general election is due in the fall. Wilson, Labor party leader, now claiming that Douglas-Home and his Conservative regime have run their rowed time. Wilson won't get a seat at the meeting.

The proved boast that the Commonwealth includes countries from A to Z—Australia to Zanzibar—is somewhat spoiled by indications that leftist Zanzibar, still seething from its revolution, doesn't even want to send a delegate to the conference.

The position of Southern Rhodesia presents at least as tough a problem as Zanzibar. In that central African territory, the struggle between 250,000 whites and 3,000,000 blacks has come to a head and it is not known yet whether the self-governing colony will be sending a representative.

At the moment the 19 eligible to attend are Australia, Canada, Ceylon, Cyprus, Ghana, India, Jamaica, Kenya, Malaysia, New Zealand, Nigeria, Nyasaland, Pakistan, Sierra Leone, Tanganyika, Trinidad, Uganda and the United Kingdom and Zanzibar. "Yasaland becomes independent in July.

The interests of the Commonwealth are so diverse that the political correspondent of the Manchester Guardian is prompted to ask:

In view of the rushing changes of the last several years prime ministers are expected to review — at least privately — whether the Commonwealth really has a common purpose any longer and whether the relationship of members should be made more formal.

As has been the case in the past the Board will buy plaques for the winning COSSA teams this year.

The Board has confirmed the agreement covering hospital visits by members of the Quinte nursing classes and will now go to the hospital board for approval.

The board grounds committee will look into completion of grading at the Moira Secondary School Grounds, while consideration will also be given to purchase of awnings for south windows at Quinte.

Youth Claims Accused Was Truck Driver

A Stanneville youth today claimed police mentioned he won't get a light sentence if he "co-operated" in a cattle rustling investigation.

William Kenneth John, 20, is now on two years' suspended sentence after pleading guilty to theft.

Today he was called as a Crown witness against John Meirin Maracle, Shannonville district farmer, who pleaded not guilty to cattle-theft last year.

John alleged to Douglas Boyle, Maracle's defence counsel, he was told by an OPP officer he would get off "easy" if he helped the investigation into theft of two Holstein cows late last fall from William Latchford.

"What did he mean by 'cooperate'?" asked Mr. Boyle.

"Tell him ..."

"What happened?"

"Yes."

"As a result of what happened you pleaded guilty to the charges?"

"Yes."

"As a result of a conversation you had with police you were under the impression you would be fairly dealt with. Is that correct?"

"Yes sir."

John said he did not know the alleged officer's name. It was not investigating constable Ed McAllister, he emphasized.

Earlier John told the hearing, before Magistrate Wesley Baker, that Maracle was the driver of a truck in which two Holsteins were taken to a Napanee sale barn last October or November.

He named a Vernon Hill as another occupant in the truck but said he did not know Hill's present whereabouts. The cattle were taken from a pasture about a mile west of Shannonville. He presumed they were sold at Napanee.

"No."

"Do you know what happened to the money?"

"No."

Labor Cheers Pearson's Plea For Unity

MONTREAL — Prime Minister Lester Pearson yesterday won the enthusiastic applause of 1,000 delegates to the Canadian Labor Congress convention with a speech that singled out the need for a strong federal government as one of the prime challenges of the time.

The applause of the delegates, representing 1,100,000 members of CLC affiliates, was equally vigorous when the Prime Minister called on the Congress to join a crusade against prejudice, intolerance and dissension being fed by extremists both in Quebec and in English-speaking Canada.

With his stress on government priority for measures to whittle unemployment to an irreducible minimum, and his identification with labor's social welfare goals, the Prime Minister established a firm rapport with the labor delegates.

Bancroft C. C. Protests Closing Of Uranium Mine

BANCROFT, Ont. (CP)—The Bancroft and District Chamber of Commerce has sent a telegram to Prime Minister Pearson protesting the proposed shutdown this summer of Metal Mines Limited's uranium operations here.

The chamber's industrial committee sent the telegram following an emergency meeting, called to discuss the proposed closing. It asked for a meeting with Mr. Pearson.

Company President A. W. Johnson says the plant will close in June when government stockpiling of uranium will be completed.

88.8 Grade 'A' Hogs Marketed

It was announced by the Hastings County Hog Producers' Association, that Dennis Chapman, Madoc, R.R. 3, has marketed 88.8 per cent Grade "A" hogs during the month of March. Mr. Chapman shipped a total of nine hogs and had eight Grade "A" hog carcasses. The hogs were purchased through the Community Sales, but from known sources.

This is the first year for this competition to be held in Hastings County and it is hoped all producers, who market hogs will participate. Each month the grading slips for those hogs marked and forwarded to the Agricultural Representative's Office where the monthly results will be examined.

The other three high monthly competitors were Grant Hubble, Stirling, who marketed 46 thirteen hogs and had 76.9 per cent Grade A's out of five hogs shipped.

RABIES CASES UP

OTTAWA (CP)—Rabies cases among animals in Canada totalled 1,147 for the year ended March 31, says the federal agriculture department. This was an increase of 83 from the previous year but less than half the record 2,550 cases in 1958-59. Wild animals accounted for most cases last year with 295 foxes, 80 animals, 70 dogs and 50 cats. Ontario led with 870 cases to Manitoba's 186, and Quebec's 55.

Stirling Man Admits Living In Same House as Thompson

By STRAUN MATHESON

MONTREAL (CP)—Four witnesses Tuesday brought to 50 those who have testified so far in the Quebec royal commission inquiry into possible legislation leading up to the hanging of Wilbert Coffin in 1956.

The witnesses' laundry' aim is to determine the credibility of Mohawk Indian Francis Thompson, who testified against Coffin in killing three United States hunters in The Gaspe in 1953 and is subsequent retraction.

Two witnesses testified last week he was in Toronto in 1953 and made up the confession to escape jail in Montreal where he was being held on a theft charge. He said he hoped to be deported to Canada where he was sure he could prove he was innocent.

The inquiry was set up following publication of L'Accuse ies Assassins de Coffin (I Accuse the Assassins of Coffin) by Montreal author Gerard Jasmin Bert who maintained Coffin was railroaded to the gallows on a charge of murdering one of the hunters.

CERTAIN OF LINK

The author said he was convinced Thompson was either the real killer, an accomplice, or eye witness or was informed by the real killer.

William Craddock, 29, a farm hand from Stirling, Ont., testified he lived in a Toronto boarding house room with Thompson for a few weeks starting at the end of May, 1953. Under examination, he could not say whether he moved from there on June 30, June 15 or June 6.

The hunters were killed in mid-June.

Walter Valentine Smith, 50, a Toronto truck driver, said he worked with Thompson "at some time" in 1953 and saw him arrive with Craddock to distribute handbills "once or twice."

Thompson had testified he lived with Craddock for a while and distributed handbills. Aim of the testimony is to establish Thompson's credibility.

Mrs. John Rowan, manager of a Milton tourist home, corroborated Thompson's testimony that he had worked there in 1953.

Sydney Sproule, deputy director of the Quebec Provincial Police, returned to the witness stand to testify that a Toronto policeman's investigation showed Mrs. Minnie Dean was dead.

Thompson had testified Mrs. Dean was his landlady in the fall of 1953. He said she read newspaper accounts of the Coffin case to him and his memory of this was his only source for his 1958 confession.

Safety Program Explained to Kiwanis Club

For the past couple of weeks now a new program on child molestation has been presented to the pupils of public schools in the Belleville area under the direction of the safety director of the city's police department headed by staff sergeant, Ralph Blatchford.

Lectures have been given in the schools by teachers and Safety Officer Robert Hall Hall, along with a film to further demonstrate his subject entitled "Always Say No To A Stranger".

Sergeant Blatchford said child molestation was a very serious problem as last year 94 calls were received by his department.

He said the type of people who would molest children are usually physically but mentally. "A can be a man, a woman, a girl or a boy" he added.

Sergeant Blatchford showed three drawings to demonstrate his point; to point out the differences between the physically sick and the mentally sick. The first drawing indicated a person sick in bed, next a person sick with a broken limb and the third drawing of a well dressed man, whom he said was sick, a sickness of the brain.

PAMPHLET PREPARED

A pamphlet has been prepared and distributed to every public school student, bringing out the city for the benefit of the children and their parents.

A prepared film was given by two city employees, who were responsible for the production of the pamphlet "Always Say No To A Stranger," Miss Diana W. Killey and Rocque J. Davis both of the engineering department. Miss Killen was responsible for the artistic phase, while the booklet was laid out by Mr. Davis.

Staff Sergeant Blatchford said he has received many calls since the new program has been put into effect and said he is very pleased that it has gone over with the parents and children with such a success.

The meeting was presided over by Kiwanian Ross White and thanked by Kiwanian Paul Robb. He also formally thanked on behalf of the club by president Robert Freestone.

Guests were introduced by Kiwanian Ken Pinder. Members heard reports on such projects as the membership drive, plans for the 50th anniversary and the inter-club to Belleville, Wichien, scheduled for next Wednesday.

started when somebody, presumably a demonstrator, pulled an emergency cord that brought a train to a jarring halt.

Three white women were among those arrested. The group chanted "Freedom now" and "Just like Birmingham" as they were taken to a police station.

Prince Charles May Have Got Electric Guitar

Who was the guitar for?

However the field was not hard to narrow down.

Prince Charles, the heir to the throne, is of an age (15) with the huge bulk of pop fans who dote on the Beatles and glory in the electronic jangle of their guitars.

At parties with other teenagers, Charles has shown himself a keen performer of the twist, the shake and the bully pully.

In the school band Charles plays a trumpet. His public performances are strictly in the long-hair league though friends say he likes to toot out jazzier numbers in private.

PORT ARTHUR (CP) — Ontario magistrates should be kept off police commissions to preserve their impartiality on the bench, a brief from the 40-member Thunder Bay Law Association stated Tuesday.

Alfred A. Petrone, who presented the brief to the justice committee on legal aid meeting here, said magistrates could not exercise proper objectivity if a policeman they helped hire or promote appeared as a prosecution witness during a case.

The brief also stated that magistrates should not hold court in police stations. "It appears that a magistrate's function is impaired by close proximity to the prosecution."

The association suggested the judiciary, government, police and legal professions should participate in the perfection, not the replacement, of Ontario's present program of free legal aid.

SUGGEST PLEA

Police frequently induce or attempt to pressure an accused person to plead guilty to a lesser offence, the brief said, often on the "stated presumption that the court would treat the offender lightly."

The brief said the accused often faces the "shocking result" that the sentence is not as light as anticipated. Thus, the Police Act is to be amended, it should require police to tell an accused person of his rights and help him to obtain counsel immediately.

Deputy Attorney - General W. B. Common, chairman of the joint committee, reiterated a strong personal objection to police being required to inform accused of their rights. He expressed the same objection at committee hearings in Sudbury Monday.

IN STRAIGHTJACKET

"It would be putting law enforcement in a straightjacket," said Mr. Common. "The police might give the person the wrong advice."

Mr. Petrone suggested persons suspected of impaired driving are not always aware of their rights. Some don't know they are not compelled to take a breath analyzer test.

He brief suggested that signs listing various rights be posted in all police stations or be given to every suspect at the time of arrest.

The brief also dealt with the question of bail, contending that persons charged with impaired or careless driving or other offences of no grave consequence should not be deprived of liberty because they cannot raise bail.

tal policy as a courageous break with tradition designed to ensure that veterans will continue to receive excellent medical treatment—the best in the country.

He said a serious problem had been building up for years in DVA hospitals and standards there would decline in the future unless changes were made. The problem was that 75 per cent of DVA patients were elderly veterans in need of chronic care as opposed to active treatment. This proportion was increasing rapidly.

LACK STAFF

The nature of the case load discouraged recruitment of doctors and nurses, which in turn caused the shutdown of some wards for lack of staff. At the same time many cities had serious shortages of active treatment hospital facilities.

Mr. Tellet said his department was preparing a draft agreement for submission to provincial health departments and local municipal authorities. When the draft was complete, negotiations would begin for the transfer of DVA hospitals to local control.

Transfer of each hospital would be decided on the basis of local conditions and needs. Several conditions would have to be met: provision of alternate chronic care facilities, adequate staff and no admissions to general hospitals and alternate employment for DVA personnel.

The minister said he had been attacked because he dared to speak up to a serious problem.

STATEMENTS CONFLICT

The former Conservative defence minister, Douglas Harkness, said Mr. Tellet and Prime Minister Pearson had made conflicting statements about the hospitals. Confusion, lack of confidence in Mr. Tellet and fear that medical services for veterans would be curtailed were general among veterans.

NDP Leader Douglas scored the government for failing to make clear statement of policy and urged a thorough inquiry by a Commons committee on veterans affairs.

"The minister is charging ahead with a program to dispose of the veterans hospitals without telling us where the patients who are there now will go."

The answer was a federal program to build chronic care institutions across Canada for veterans. This would release DVA hospitals for use as active treatment centres for the whole community.

"We're 20 years behind the times," he said. "Let's get off the pot and move ahead."

The congress decided to seek a change in the Income Tax Act whereby all health care costs, medical hospital, optical, dental and drug—would be deductible from income tax taxation purposes.

The CLC urged its unions to press for a minimum of double time payment for any work done on an overtime basis.

Discussion indicated the latest of the resolution was to discourage overtime and hiring anyone instead of hiring extra workers. Delegates said this practice contributes to unemployment.

Board Changes Approved by Town Council

TRENTON — At a meeting of Trenton council Monday night the following recommendations by the Planning Board were approved by the councillors:

(1) That land, formerly the old canal route, immediately west of McCabe's Island, between Davis St. and Wall St., be changed from industrial zoning to residential.

(2) That lots on the north side of Pacific Ave., formerly Victoria St. west to Trenton Park on Marmora St. to the easterly terminus of the street, be changed from Open Space zoning to residential, RM3 zoning. The change in zoning would permit the erection of multiple housing units. As the area is unserviced, it is the thought of council that the building of such units would be delayed until servicing could be provided. Presumably the board's hoping with septic tank arrangements could be carried out here.

(3) An area on the west side of Dufferin Ave., south of the Canadian Place Road, will be changed from industrial to RM4 residential, and the area south of Dufferin Ave. of the CNR tracks, and bounded on the west by the Stokley Van Camp property, will also be changed from industrial to RM4 residential. If the Ontario Municipal Board approves the suggested changes in the town's official plan.

(4) Bocage St., partially zoned Open Space will become residential also, provided this meets with OMB approval.

Hotel Owner Complains of Binder Used

TRENTON — Mr. Walter Pabst, president of the Royal Hotel, on the corner of Bay and Dundas Sts. East, had this to say in Trenton council Monday night: "Isn't there any other kind of substance you can put on the road outside my commercial property besides the 'road binder' you are now using?" He went on record to say that a rug in his establishment, the cost of which would run into hundreds, was being ruined by the black, murky substance the town gets from Consumers Gas in the area and uses to lay the dust on unpaved streets. The "binder" splashed up against the outside walls of the hotel, also, he said.

Mayor MacDonald told Mr. Pabst that the alternative, oil, would make an even worse mess of his premises, but said that he would see "the guys over there" and ask them to be generous with the binder when they came to the Royal Hotel corner and Councillor J. Gould said that rain seemed to aggravate the situation.

"But would you sooner have dust?" inquired the councillor. "people call us up to give us heck about the dust. It's hard to please everyone."

Mr. Pabst then wanted to know when Bay Street would be paved. He was told that this "was in the books for next year," but action hinged on the monies available to council for necessary sewer installations in the area which must be carried out before a hard top surface is given to the street.

Mr. Pabst also queried the permanency or non-permanency of restrictive parking in the area of his hotel and was told by town engineer Eric Alderson that the No Parking edict on Bay Street was a temporary measure to be used until reconstruction work on Dundas St. E. is completed and Bay Street need no longer be used as a detour around the construction site.

Retarded Children's School Shows Work of Many Hands

TRENTON — In 1959—the autumn of 1959, to be exact—a small, but determined group of people banded together and planned to start a Trenton and District Association for Retarded Children. Some of these were the parents of a retarded child; others were people who felt there was a need for such an organization, and particularly that something should be done about forming a special class for the known retarded children in this area.

In September, 1959, less than ten children started "off to school" in a basement room of St. Peter's school, donated for this use by the Trenton Separate School Board.

The association, as such, received its charter early in 1960, and by that autumn had secured the services of Jay Weaters as teacher.

Outgrowing the basement room, the children were moved to a former gymnasium room at North Trenton School. As their numbers grew, and the association grew, and public interest grew, the association was able to take on the construction of a three-roomed school, on a lot west of Trenton and donated for the purpose by Trenton businessman, Harry Lafferty. It was a courageous step—and a costly one—but such intrepid association members as Mrs. Bobbie Reid, Bart Boers, Robert and Irene Smithrim and many, many others, just wouldn't take "No" for an answer.

The association had already acquired a school bus, and had taken in students from such places as Consecon, Johnstown, Brighton and Frankford. The association became known as the Trenton-Brighton and District Association for Retarded Children, an unwieldy title, but self-explanatory, and necessary, as Brighton people began to take an active interest.

TAKE GREAT INTEREST

The people of the district were beginning to take an all-out interest in the work of the association, and in the children themselves, and this was reflected in the response to fund-raising drives, tag days and the like. Some of the children themselves got out on tag day to help their elders.

Parents of the retarded children in the area, were starting to "crawl out of their shells," and to realize that a retarded child needn't be kept in the background, but could be educated to a degree and be fitted to live in a near-normal and a happy life. Some of them—most of them, in fact — could be trained to the point where they could take up work, perhaps in sheltered workshops, in adult life, and at least partially support themselves.

And the children themselves to blow them — were learning to spell, and read and write and cook and play like "other children." They were taken on trips by Mr. Wauters and by the two other teachers added to the staff or by association members. Some of them went to camp in the summer. All of them were meeting people in the outside world, and instead of knowing the people only in their own immediate circles, were having the fun of playing with the other children at school and enlarging their horizons. Mr. Wauters was taking them shopping and to such places as the post office (where they mailed a letter to themselves, so the mailman could deliver it to them) and the hospital (to see the baby just get well again. They were learning to prepare meals for their teachers in the school and to serve lunch to association members when the monthly meetings were held at the school. They were happy children.

PLAY WITH DOLLS

Now, the children gather around the piano in the school, and sing "Jesus Loves Me," and the bright, happy songs of childhood, while teacher, Pat Morgan, plays for them.

They divide into senior and junior classes; the juniors to match color cards, play with dolls or trains, the seniors to talk of current events" with teacher Irma Plunkett. Mrs. Emily Beaton conducts the junior class.

"Current events" to the children are likely to be such items as "my father has to go to the doctor's to get a needle today," or, "I had toast and jam for breakfast." Sometimes, the item concerns a naughtiness on the part of a classmate. But they're current events. Teacher shows display cards on which are pasted the signs of Spring . . . the birds, which are named, sometimes correctly, sometimes incorrectly, by the children . . . and the flowers, which they all love.

All of them are polite and very, very interested in the camera. "Take my picture, please." Just like any "normal" child.

The people of Trenton, Brighton and the district, who buy tags and make donations to the district school for the retarded, should make a visit there, where the Welcome mat is always out. "Money can't bring happiness," but the money that made the building of this school possible did just that.

Changes Plea After Evidence Of Officer

TRENTON—In Trenton court on Tuesday, Thomas Albert Harvey, charged with dangerous driving, told Magistrate C. Y. Wills he would change his plea from "not guilty" to "guilty" after he had heard a recital of the speeds he had been going before his apprehension by Sgt. Gordon Stromberg.

"I didn't realize I was going that fast," the accused said.

Sgt. Stromberg told of chasing the Harvey car through town from Sidney Street to the outskirts, and beyond to the Glenburnie Motel, with the Harvey vehicle doing progressively better than 80-90-85 and 90 mph. The police cruiser was behind all the way and the Sgt was clocking the speeds. At the Glenburnie, the Sgt. met an oncoming car and almost turned over his vehicle. He then radioed ahead to Brighton OPP and Harvey was picked up on the outskirts of Brighton by Constable John Martin.

Harvey was fined $100 and his licence suspended for three months.

Clifford Richardson of the Frankford area was fined a total of $15 and ordered to pay court costs of $12, when he was found guilty of driving without a licence for the current year; driving 37 mph in a 30-mile zone and failing to have a light on the rear of his vehicle. A further charge of failing to produce evidence of vehicle insurance was dropped when the accused told the court he had bought the car four days prior to his apprehension on the other charges. Insurance transfers must be registered within six days of purchase.

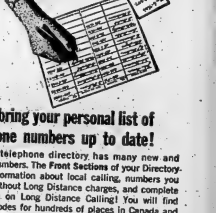
Frederick Peterson found out that an "Act of God," in the case, "an 80 mph wind," didn't constitute an alibi when it comes to paying parking fines. Peterson pleaded the ticket had blown off his car.

"Are you suggesting we place your parking violation ticket in a cellophine wrap so that it won't blow away?" asked the magistrate.

Peterson paid $1 plus $2.50 court costs.

Robert Mathews found out that municipalities are not obliged to place overnight vacation signs on town streets unless the speeds required in certain areas below the 30 mph mark.

Mathews, who had been proceeding westward out of town when he was picked up for speeding, said that there were no signs and he "thought he was in open country." He was fined $10.



A meal at a local restaurant last February 11 cost Phillip Gallup $25. Yesterday, he was found guilty of issuing a NSF cheque for $5 to pay for the meal and fined accordingly. He was placed on a six months' suspended sentence and will sign a bond to keep the peace.

Belts Might Have Saved Lives Says Jury

TRENTON — A five man coroner's jury sitting in Brighton yesterday ruled that seat belts would probably have saved the lives of two brothers in a fatal car accident, near the village.

The jury was enquiring into the death of Carl Free, 30, of Toronto, who died shortly after arriving at the Trenton hospital on the night of March 28, following a one-car accident on Highway 2, just east of Brighton. Free's 21-year-old brother, James, of Trenton, the only other occupant of the car, died at Kingston on March 29, of injuries suffered in the accident. The Free car went out of control and struck a tree. The brothers were thrown from the car on impact.

The jury also recommended that no further witnesses place a device on cars which would cause the vehicles to come to a stop, when a stationary object or another stopped car loomed in front of them. The recommendation came as the result of an enquiry into the circumstances of the death of LAC Murray Christmas, of RCAF 2, Brighton, on March 20. The car driven by Murray was in collision with a car driven by 19-year-old Donald [illegible]-Horn, also of RCAF 2, Brighton. The accident occurred on Highway 2 at the Bercoyen Beach Rd. intersection, five miles west of Trenton.

Productivity Yardstick

Canada's steelworkers are expected to ask for the highest wage in the world.

For years, whenever organized labor complained about the wage differential for comparable jobs in Canada and the U.S., some economists rebuttal has clung to one theme, productivity, productivity, productivity.

Now, according to William Mahoney, national director of the United Steelworkers of America, Canadian steelmen are the most efficient and productive in the world.

So why should they not receive the highest wages?

There are several good reasons, but they have little or nothing to do with the question of a worker's productivity.

The matter of the number of man-hours required to produce a ton of steel is only one factor to be considered.

There is the question of the cost of the machinery used in this work. We do not know, but it would not be surprising if the capital invested was much higher per worker than in the U.S. Because the Canadian steel industry is younger than that across the border, it is likely to be more up-to-date in some facets, a contention which will surprise many but which duplicates a condition which Leon Trotsky detected in Czarist Russia's big factories over four decades ago.

Fortunately union men are smart enough to know that productivity alone is not the reason for the differential between Canada and the U.S. There is a clear hint they are just skirmishing in suggesting that top productivity entities them to top wages. Instead they would be willing to accept a reduction in the price of steel. Mahoney is reported to have contended that a drop in living costs could be as helpful as an increase in wages. Lower steel prices could increase the real wages of every steel-user and could also be utilized to cut the spread in wages between the makers of steel and its fabricators.

This is an attitude which holds great promise. Some may complain that labor's convention comes rather late, that the same viewpoint a couple of decades ago could have helped prevent the present fifty-cent dollar. But such criticism ill befits those who have been crying "productivity, productivity, productivity" all these years, without bothering to couple with this cry the essential reservations without which a basic economic truth is turned into a misleading slogan.

Unsporting

Three Eastern Canada teams have been engaged in a round-robin series to determine which one would enter the semi-finals for the Memorial Cup, emblematic of Canadian junior hockey supremacy.

One of these teams from Summerside, Prince Edward Island, lost its first two games by lop-sided scores, 9-1 and 15-0. It was asked whether it would concede the series, leaving Ottawa Montagnards and Montreal NDG Monarchs to fight it. The Summerside group voted unanimously to continue, but nevertheless the team was dropped from the series.

This speaks volumes of the attitude of those responsible for conducting these hockey playoffs.

Every game has its own code. In some games concessions are commonplace, part of what is considered the sporting thing to do. In golf, putts are sometimes conceded, because it would be insulting an opponent to insist he go through the routine of playing a shot which even a crippled child could make. In first class chess, a player is expected to resign when his position is hopeless. To require a master to go through the time-consuming process of making the inevitable an actuality would be in poor taste. But in most games, and certainly in most bodily-contact sports, the tradition is that the sporting thing is to play on as hard as one can to the bitter end. Hopelessly beaten teams have won high praise for the dogged manner in which they have striven to the final whistle.

Summerside, though, was denied that privilege. The team was forced to quit. What kind of a lesson is this to force down the throats of a junior club?

I think some older labor leaders stay on too long and slow up the labor movement when younger leadership is needed.—President of the United Auto Workers Walter Reuther, after union adopted a compulsory retirement plan for officials.

GLEANINGS From OUR FYLES OF BYGONE YEARS

20 YEARS AGO

April 22nd, 1944.

Temple Lodge A.F. and A.M., No. 668 envisioned initiation of a new candidate with a First World War setting at the Masonic Temple. The Worshipful Master and members of the lodge combined "Veterans' Night" with lodge initiation ritual. The banquet atmosphere, glittering medals of veterans brought a wave of nostalgia to many "old sweats" of the 1914-18 conflict.

They ate "McConachie" victuals 1944 from regulation army mess-tins. The tasty stew in the "dixies" was a far cry from the pungent variety that "Mac" doubled from a can after standing well back and puncturing it with a bayonet. There was the famous "plum-and-apple" jam, its brother in arms, cheese, but tasty bread in thick slabs, and mem-bile "hardtack" of the old days. There was milk from the cow, not in cans, and the tables were bereft of knagery. A steel helmet (circa, 1915)-graced the head table.

A bugle, blown by Arnold Duffy, sounded "mealtimes" and the "troops" lined up in the familiar parade before a table stacked with "rations" and loaded the mess-tins. There was no officers' mess. Colonels and majors fell in with the "rear-rank bucks" if they wanted to eat.

There were the old songs led by Sergeant George Christopher of the Hasty Pees, and the famous "Eli Inspection" recitation given in the incomparable style of George Fountain.

There was a brief address by Major Fred Goforth, M.C., D.D., a company of the Hastings and Prince Edward Regiment and now assistant director of the Royal Canadian Army Education Corps at Ottawa. Major Goforth climaxed the evening with the showing of beautiful slides of Japan and Korea.

The collegiate lawn is wanted as a campus. According to the view of the majority of members of the Board of Education the front lawn at the Collegiate and Vocational School should be a school campus and used for athletics. It should also be made a place upon which walking is permitted and available at all times for the people to enjoy. Collegiate lads instead of a verdant lawn dotted with signs reading "Keep off the grass" will be better way discussed at the regular meeting of the Board last evening when dealing with a written request from Mr. P. C. MacLaurin, the principal, for a supply of fertilizer to be used on some bald spots on the lawn. Most of the members were in favor of allowing the lawn to go without mowing. After attention and permitting the space to be used for athletics was left in abeyance and it is likely that the lawn will be thrown open for the use of the students.

Strictly Personal
Labels Belong On Bottles Not on People

By SYDNEY J. HARRIS

Speaking of the human need to put labels on things, as I was yesterday, reminded me of something a psychiatrist related at a dinner not long ago.

He teaches a class of medical students at a hospital, and remarked that he had a "double job." The first part of the job was to show the students how to make a diagnosis; the second part was to discourage them from regarding the person as a disease.

"Here is what I mean," he said. "It is important that the students learn to diagnose schizophrenia, in its various forms and states, for there to be able to treat the patient and to understand what is going on.

"At the same time," he continued, "once a patient is classified as schizophrenic, many of the doctor tends to treat the label instead of the person. And not only that — the patient himself, once he knows this label has been applied to him, somehow tends more and more to conform to the classic pattern of the schizophrenic."

"I see what you mean about a diagnosis without giving it a name," I said.

"True," he nodded, "but the point I'm making is that giving something a name turns it into an abstraction, and then the name has the abstraction rather than on the living form. Before leprosy was given current times, lepers were confined to leper colonies, because the world did not know any better — ever though we've now learned that leprosy isn't the dread or highly contagious disease at thought it was."

"I can see where a doctor might be tempted to treat a classification instead of a person," I said. "But why should this affect the patient himself? What does it matter if a schizophrenic knows he is one?"

"It does, of course, it doesn't matter," he answered. "No matter when, though it does. If a child is called 'bad' often enough, he acts bad. I don't mean that calling him makes him so — but it weakens his powers of resistance to bad behavior. Or demanding he was a con. "If we call minority groups insulting names long enough, we begin to believe in the truth of these insults — but, more than that, our contempt filters into their system and they get filled with self-contempt, and then surreptitiously begin to justify the initial insult. A label belongs on a bottle, not on a person."

'Cheeky Pup' Is Banned

Milwaukee Journal

When George Wigg, a member of the British parliament, called the secretary of state for air "a cheap stake and a phony" the other day in the House of Commons, some observers expected a challenge to a duel, the language in such a bellowed chamber!

The incident sent a representative of the Sunday Telegraph off to the record books to determine whether the phrases was on the official parliamentary list of "unparliamentary, hooligan and impertinent poppy," behaving like a jackass and "cheeky young pup" were there. But no "cheap stake and phony."

The editor uncovered some interesting other findings, however. British and most of the Commonwealth countries, it seems, maintain long lists of forbidden parliamentary sentiments, phrases and words.

Southern Rhodesia forbids "chicken who was sacked" and "cut down to the economic amount of bumph." Canada bans "pompous British lats" as applied to the defence staff). Australia frowns on "gutless wonders." Trinidad on "You see speaking pilot fish"; South Africa on "I believe him, but thousands wouldn't."

It is out of order in New Zealand for one parliamentary member to say of another that he is grunning like a Cheshire cat or that "his brains could revolve inside a peanut shell for a thousand years without touching the sides."

To Your Good Health
Leaking Heart Does Not Mean Blood Is Escaping

By JOSEPH G. MOLNER, M.D.

Dear Dr. Molner: Years ago I was told I had a leaking heart. Exactly what is this and what can be done about it? — S. R.

Some of the objectives applied to medical conditions sound awful, and are not to be interpreted in the usual sense of the words. Yours is one of them.

We ordinarily think of a "leak" as an escape of the contents — a leaky hot water bottle or garden hose, or a punctured tire.

This is not the case with the heart. The "leak" doesn't mean that blood is escaping from the heart. If you were able to look inside of the heart, the "leak" wouldn't be either seen or felt. It can be heard with a stethoscope, however, in a certain type of murmur.

Remember that the heart is a pump. It is divided into four chambers, and each time the heart muscle contracts, blood is squeezed along from one chamber to the next, through valves which connect the chambers.

These are one-way valves. The blood has to move forward, because it simply cannot go in any one direction. Normally, that is.

But suppose one or more of the valves don't close properly. Then, although most of the blood will still move forward, a little of it can slip backward again. This is the "leak."

Or, of course, there may be openings between the right and interior walls which separate one chamber from another. That would also result in a certain amount of flow in the wrong direction.

The consequences? Well, the heart thus loses some of its efficiency. Whether this is much or little depends on the location and size of the "leak". If it is small, the heart will have to work considerably harder than normal to pump the same amount of blood. If the "leak" is small, the effect on you is minor.

There is no medication to correct such leaks.

However, either type of leak (in a valve or one of the partitions) often can be corrected by surgery, if it is severe enough. That is the "open heart surgery" which we hear so much about.

If a valve has been affected by rheumatic fever (one of the important causes of such damage) prophylactic doses of penicillin or sulfa drugs may be given over a period of years to combat any subsequent streptococcus infections (these are the germs which cause rheumatic fever) and prevent further inflammation and damage to the valves.

And, as with anything else, the familiar ounce of prevention is worth the pound of cure. If, in your case, the leak was from rheumatic fever, your doctor can judge whether these preventive drugs will be a safeguard for you. If something else was the cause (some people are born with these leaks), he likewise can judge the severity and decide whether anything at all needs to be done.

* * *

Dear Dr. Molner: Some doctors have said that I am overweight and others say no. I am 5 feet 10, weigh 210, and take care of the lawn and do other work. I am 52 years old. — B.B.

You are a little overweight, but if you are as active as that at 52, all I can say is that on you it looks good! Don't worry about it so long as you are not continuing to put on weight!

* * *

Dear Dr. Molner: I read recently that cancer cells cannot grow in blood rich in Vitamin E. The author says the reason cancer has become widespread in recent years is that most of our bread and cereals are refined to the point that they contain very little Vitamin E. Is this true? — Mrs. R. K.

Vitamin E, for whatever reason, has been the subject of quite a few other theories — that it promotes fertility, that it is good for the heart, and so on, but I can't find that any of these ever has been scientifically substantiated. Until there is more definite evidence, I would forget about these notions.

* * *

Much heart trouble is preventable. Write to Dr. Molner in care of The Ontario Sun-Times Syndicate, P.O. Box 56, Dundee, Ill., for your copy of his booklet, "How To Take Care Of Your Heart," enclosing a long, self-addressed envelope and 25 cents in coin to cover cost of printing and handling.

Virgin Lands Program Ends

New York Times

What appeared to be the closing chapter of the Soviet Union's great virgin lands experiment has now been written.

A joint statement by the Communist party and the Government marking the 10th anniversary of the program, described the plowing up of 100,000,000 acres of new farmland in Siberia as a "national feat that will live through the ages."

Alluding to a recent furore about in farm policy, the statement said the virgin lands farmers "will understand" the need for now concentrating on intensive use of more fertile land, which is found mainly in European Russia.

The message of congratulations also disclosed the full extent of the disappointing 1963 harvest on the virgin lands last year. The setback forced the Soviet Union, usually a grain exporter, to purchase 11,000,000 metric tons of wheat abroad.

The new figures in the statement showed that the virgin lands have contributed 38 per cent of all marketable grain. This is the share of the total crop that is purchased by Government machinery, apart from direct distribution to city population and grain-deficit areas.

Premier Khrushchev recently said that the virgin lands would gradually be turned back to crops as the crop yields increased in more fertile areas through greater use of chemical fertilizers and irrigation.

However, the party-Government statement, printed in Pravda, the Communist party newspaper, made no mention of such a long-term plan.

The statement reiterated the line that the 6.7-billion ruble (7.4 billion) investment in virgin lands in the last 10 years had been more than covered by the 10 billion rubles in additional grain delivered.

Foreign observers suggested that it might be politically unwise for the Soviet leadership at this time to talk publicly of an ultimate reduction in the cropped area in the virgin lands.

The virgin lands program was pushed through in 1954 by Premier Khrushchev, over the opposition of the so-called antiparty group, as a way of achieving a 30 per cent increase in the grain crop. The program was approached as a calculated risk that would have paid off in Premier Khrushchev's view if there had been two good crops out of five.

However, adverse weather and soil erosion brought about a steady deterioration of the virgin lands crops.

A recent letter in Izvestia, the Government newspaper, indicated that Khrushchev had to talk that Vyacheslav M. Molotov and other members of the anti-party group might have been right in opposing expansion of the acreage under hazardous conditions.

The writer said rumors spurred by crop failure and bread restrictions were stimulating an "unhealthy interest" in Premier Khrushchev's foes, who were dismissed from the leading group in 1957.

The official statement indicated the decision has been correct and linked Premier Khrushchev's name with the entire program.

Noting that an abundant snowfall this winter had provided adequate moisture for planting spring wheat, the message held out prospects for a "good harvest."

"It is very important now not to lose any time," it added. "Sow the best sounded like a sworn song.

Letter to The Editor

Calls Red Ensign A Colonial Flag

Editor,
Ontario Intelligencer.

Speculation across this week that the Prime Minister may present a new flag which contains a cluster of three red maple leaves on a white background to parliament soon.

When asked about it many veterans said they disliked it because they cared nothing about this "bunch" of leaves. Perhaps they should remember that the maple leaf is the official emblem of Canada and in any official Canadian flag it should be displayed in a more prominent place than it is in their proposed flag, the Red Ensign.

They seem to forget that the majority of Canadians do not respect the Red Ensign because it is a colonial flag and certainly not distinctive, for it is the flag of Bermuda, the British Merchant Marine and the Royal Orders of Lighthouse Keepers in England, to name just a few. Also no flag should be adopted just because it was used in World War I, that is the only reason that it was used now because no one wanted to alienate the Province of Quebec by adopting a new flag. In fact the proposed design was proclaimed by King George VI in 1921 and is only now being dusted upon.

Since it was approved by the King there should have been no objections to its adoption and our boys would have fought under a Canadian flag instead of an English flag. There would be less friction between French and English Canada immediately if the proposed C.N.D.I.E. stopped trying to force an emblem which is foreign to the majority of Canadians, on us.

Those who wish to adopt a foreign emblem are far from being patriots but rather are widening the split between the French and the English to a dangerous degree, and add fuel to the French contention that we care nothing for their feelings.

We must give our support to the "one flag" idea for lack of unity and we must show the Legion that we do not agree that the Red Ensign is our flag and we must keep it flying. We must also demand that all Union Jacks disappear in front of our public schools such as Belleville Collegiate for they are flagrant in their pro true Canadian.

We are Canadians, not colonial subjects, and it's about time we told this to those people who may think that we are and want to force a colonial flag on us.

It's time to wake up Canadians and advocate our own flag now.

Peter Cliffe-Phillips,

Belleville.

Nutritional Quacks Busy

Cape Breton Post

U. S. Senators recently were told that hucksters of nutritional quackery fleece elderly people of millions of dollars annually. We may wonder to what extent this may be said of Canada.

The testimony as to this came from Dr. Frederick J. Stare, chairman of the Department of nutrition in Harvard University's School of Public Health, and also from Dr. Dean Cedervall, chairman of Michigan State food and nutrition.

Both appeared at subcommittee in Washington, these two assailed what they called ruinous dissipated by without a peddlers of "food-fad books," and radio and television programs in which actors and others pose as nutrition experts while selling multi-colored vitamin, mineral preparations and so-called "natural foods."

Unfortunately, persons of advancing years are easy victims for the health hucksters with their glossy nutrition advice, and most elderly persons have little money to waste. If the so-called nutritional products don't harm them, neither do they help them.

The testimony of the two doctors brought out the following points: There is no evidence which suggests that older people require greater amounts of any specific nutrient than do younger adults. The American Medical Association has estimated "conservatively" that in nutritional quackery, dooms to $500,000,000 annually.

Harbor Boards Pump Billion Dollars Into Economy Each Year Dinner Meet Told

The operation of publicly owned harbors by the National Harbors Board pumps close to a billion dollars annually into the Canadian economy, members of the district Canadian Industrial Traffic League were told in Belleville yesterday.

Howard Mann, chairman of the National Harbor Board, told members of the Golden Triangle District of the League that his board now employs 2,500 persons at ten ports in Canada and has assets with a cost value of more than $400 million.

In 1963 more than 66 million tons of cargo was handled through Harbor Board ports. The dollar volume for handling of cargo last year at Montreal alone was approximately a quarter of a billion the speaker said.

Board owned port facilities had been extended and modernized to expeditiously handle Canada's foreign trade and sailings are generally available between Canada and the most important trading nations of the world.

VOLUME INDICATION

Mr. Mann said it was gratifying that the Canadian Industrial Traffic League always gave full recognized the importance of Canadian ports and reminded that it was the volume of cargo available, which dictated the frequency of sailings to foreign ports.

"Ships go where the cargo is," he said, "in the last analysis, you, the people, who really control the traffic, determine the frequency of sailings from Canadian ports."

Mr. Mann said the field of industrial transportation was one of constant change and challenge.

To illustrate he noted that less than 20 years ago there were no diesel locomotives, no centralized traffic control or refrigerated highway trucks, and no St. Lawrence Seaway.

"Time honored concepts in transportation are falling by the wayside and new ideas, new ways of doing things, are taking place almost from day to day."

And Mr. Mann expects the pace will continue with technological changes in transportation to continue at a fairly rapid pace for some time to come.

Long accepted packaging techniques were giving way almost weekly to new ways of packaging materials for moving, he said.

Mr. Mann said the Canadian Industrial Traffic League was keeping right abreast of the changes in transport and said that membership in the league repaid its cost many times over.

Herbert Hynes of Brockville, president of the Golden Triangle District of the C.I.T.L. reaching from Belleville to Cornwall and north to Pembroke, presided over the dinner meeting and introduced the speaker. Thanks was expressed by John Hearns.

Other harbor board officials at the meeting were Mr. P. Downey and Charles Hawkins.

Prior to the dinner meeting at the Sirloin Club a tour extended by about 50 persons, Traffic League members were taken on a tour of Corby's Distillery where they were welcomed by plant manager, George MacDonald.

Arrangements for the district meeting were made by Ralph Plampton of Corbyville, Bill Old of Bakelite and J. Hearns of Mead Johnston.

The increased state of readiness—meaning that one-third of the command's air strength can get into the air in 15 minutes—still is in effect, informants said.

The strength of the RCAF air division in Europe has dropped to 5,712 from 6,505 in March, 1962.

But officials said this is accounted for by closure of the base at Grostenquin, France, and movement of the two CF-104 squadrons there to airfields in West Germany because the French government won't permit storage of American nuclear warheads in France.

Closure of Grostenquin eliminated only "housekeeping" personnel.

Toronto Stocks

TORONTO (CP)—The speculative market had quieted down considerably with only 1,486,000 shares traded by 11 a.m. today although the ticker was running 15 minutes late.

Penny stocks generally appeared to be marking time until Texas Gulf Sulphur Co. reports in greater detail at the company's annual meeting in Houston, Tex., Thursday on its zinc - copper silver strike near Timmins. Investors also are awaiting word on a rumored second strike by Texas Gulf in the same area.

PCE Explorations dipped six cents to 71 cents, Belleterre five cents to 58 cents, Glenn Uranium four cents to 36 cents and Central Porcupine 2½ cents to 13 cents. Bankfield rose 3½ cents to 19 cents.

The industrial and Exchange indexes both moved to new highs, showing, one broker said, a basic underlying strength to the market. Industrials usually decline during a speculative boom.

Integrated oils and pipelines were leaders, Imperial Oil, with news of increased earnings, and Texaco both ahead ⅝.

Craigmont Canada and Rio Algom all gained ¼ but International Nickel, which jumped 5⅛ Tuesday, eased ⅛ in senior metals.

On index, the Exchange index advanced .04 to a record 142.27, industrials .03 to a record 132.07, base metals .11 to 66.47, golds were unchanged at 131.35 and western oils eased .24 to 80.43.

The market was generally quieter with a volume of 15,418,000 shares compared with 28,512,000 shares traded Monday and the record 28,704,000-share turnover Friday.

International Nickel stole the spotlight near the close when it jumped to 89¾ before settling back to 88¼ for a gain of 5¼ on 11,580 shares. The company has confirmed it has acquired the mineral rights on 220 square miles of Abitibi property just north of Timmins on a share-for-profit basis.

Abitibi closed unchanged at 15¼ after reaching a high of 15⅝ on 47,360 shares traded.

Oppie losses experienced on the speculative board, traders said penny stocks had stood up well in the sell-off and added it was unlikely there would be any extreme changes at least until the Texas Gulf annual meeting in Houston, Tex., Thursday.

Explorations declined 11 cents to 71 cents, Glenn Uranium 30 cents to 40 cents, Bel-husband at their home in Chelsea, a fashionable section of London, where she said earlier today she was ordering champagne for a celebration.

Heavy security forces were at the airport as Wynne arrived. Scotland Yard reported used Transair flight to fly Lonsdale out of Britain.

Military police and plainclothesmen patrolled the airfield as Wynne walked to the airport lounge.

"It's absolutely wonderful to be back," Wynne murmured as he walked from the plane.

LOSES WEIGHT

He said he had lost a considerable amount of weight but had not had an opportunity to weigh himself. He found the food given to him "very difficult" because he was not accustomed to it.

The foreign office issued a statement saying that the British government recently learned that Wynne's physical condition has "seriously deteriorated."

Wynne had been in Communist hands for two years and five months. He was sentenced in Moscow last May to eight years detention—three in prison and five in a labor camp—as a courier of espionage information.

The American Federal Bureau of Investigation identified Lonsdale as a Moscow-born Russian. It said Lonsdale obtained a Canadian passport and birth certificate in the name of Lonsdale before sailing to Britain in 1955.

The RCMP said the passport was a forgery.

WEDDING

ROSS — JONES

A lovely wedding was solemnized in the Church of St. Michael the Archangel, Belleville on Saturday, April 11, when Anne Olwen Jones, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. H. Glynne Jones of Belleville was united in marriage to Timothy Stewart Ross, son of Mr. and Mrs. Edward Ross of Kingston. The Rev. Father T. Boyle of Belleville officiated before a background of white gladioli, while white satin bows designated the guest pews. Appropriate wedding selections were rendered.

The bride, given in marriage by her father, wore a striking gown of snowdrift peau de soie featuring a scoop neckline on a fitted bodice with long sleeves, contrasted with the opulent sweep of the skirt and chapel train. Touches of beaded Alencon lace added to the overall effect. Her double bouffant silk illusion veil flowed from a matching headdress and she carried a bouquet of brilliant red roses mingled with stephanotis and ivy.

The maid of honor Miss Lois Kyle of Ottawa, the bridesmaids Miss Norma Bishop and Miss Frances Cossey, both of Kingston, as well as the junior bridesmaid, Miss Carolyn Kidd of Rosemere, Quebec were attired in Romance blue satin gowns of rose floor-length sheath style dresses featuring Empire waistlines and removable jackets. These headdresses were matching pillbox hats with bow and matching veils. Each carried a cascade bouquet of white and blue tinted carnations interspersed with ivy. The little flower girl Miss Heather Kidd of Rosemere, Quebec was similarly attired, but in white and carried a basket of white and blue tinted carnations mingled with ivy. Master Charles Ross, Belleville, nephew of the bride was the natty little ring-bearer.

Mr. Cuthbert Hoy of Kingston was groomsman, while Mr. Pat Hutchings and Mr. John Martin of Kingston were the ushers.

A reception for 97 guests was held at Club Canara where the bride's table was most attractive centered with a traditional wedding cake white iced topped with pink roses and misted about the base with white calla. Bouquets of pink carnations added to the nuptial setting. The guests wearing a corsage.

The bride's mother received in embroidered Chantilly lace ensemble, matching beige flower-red hat and a corsage of cream colored roses. She was assisted by the bridegroom's mother who was wearing a silk print dress overskirted with blue chiffon, with matching jacket, and a corsage of cream colored roses.

For the wedding trip to the Chateau Frontenac, Quebec City, Rosemere and Montreal, the bride chose an all wool boucle three-piece suit with chanel jacket and matching blue flowered hat, black accessories and a corsage of pink Sweetheart roses.

Guests were present from Kingston, Brockville, Ottawa, Oshawa, Montreal, Toronto, Oakville, Gananoque, Rosemere (Quebec) and Southampton, England.

Showers honoring the bride were held at the homes of Mrs. Harold Glancey, Belleville, Mrs. Bruce Landon and Miss Florence Howitt of Kingston.

Mr. and Mrs. Ross are residing at 310 Younge Street, Kingston.

Mr. and Mrs. Timothy Stewart Ross of Kingston are pictured cutting the wedding cake following their recent marriage in the Church of St. Michael the Archangel, Belleville. The bride is the former Anne Olwen Jones, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. H. Glynne Jones, Belleville. The bridegroom is the son of Mr. and Mrs. Edward Ross, Kingston.

Gives Reason For Writing Many Novels

TORONTO (CP) — "I always feel uneasy between plots," says Mignon S. Eberhart, by way of explaining why she is such a productive author of mystery novels.

It's a feeling that has seized her between jobs since she began writing shortly after her marriage to a civil engineer 30 years ago.

The result is a string of 40 mystery novels plus a multitude of short stories and novelettes.

Mrs. Eberhart started her first book as she and her husband moved around the United States from one engineering project to another.

"I was brought up on books and on English literature and I had pretty lofty ideas about creative writing. Then suddenly I realized that what I'd written was a murder mystery."

She sent it to a publisher who accepted it. "I got a whacking prize. I started writing short stories for magazines. The money began to come in—and that was at the beginning of the Depression."

ATTENDS DINNER

Mrs. Eberhart, who now lives in Westport, Conn., was in Toronto to address the annual celebrety dinner of the Canadian Women's Press Club.

"Now I keep regular office hours and I do lots of research. I have a bin where I throw things—ideas, scraps of paper, things people say and do—that I think I might sometime use in a story. Sometimes a story happens full-fledged and sometimes it flows like molasses."

She continues to write partly for pleasure and has just finished a story soon to be published in serialized and book form.

At one time she had to train herself to write almost anywhere because she and her husband were moving so often.

So Busy Building House Almost Forgot to Shave For Wedding Back in 1914

Half a century of married life in the home they returned to following their wedding, has been a happy 50 years for Mr. and Mrs. Percy E. Skinner, 89 Lingham Street.

The wedding day back on April 27th, 1914, has fond memories for the 50-years-wed couple.

And for Mr. Skinner it holds memories of both serious and lighter moments.

He was rushed almost to the last moment to put the finishing touches on the new home to which he was to take his bride and just plain forgot to take a shave until he was already dressed for the ceremony. He rushed downtown to his barber for a quick shave and turned up at the preacher's only a few minutes late.

Do you know these baby-feeding hints?

Here are some simple, proven ways to make baby-feeding much happier. They may be new to you.

Before you begin

Before you begin each feeding, stop for a moment. Remind yourself to smile, to talk affectionately, to accept spilling accidents calmly.

Plan to hold your feedings in a room that's quiet and free of interruptions.

Babies are the best judge of their own appetites. So don't force your baby to eat. And never beg, urge, bribe or threaten your baby into eating.

Make eating easy

Make eating easy for your baby. Carefully choose foods that your baby can swallow smoothly and digest quickly.

One good digestibility test for a cereal is the speed with which it blends with milk or formula.

Heinz Baby Cereals, because they are pre-cooked and specially flaked, blend in 7½ seconds. Tough-fibred cereals take longer. Consequently, they are more difficult to digest.

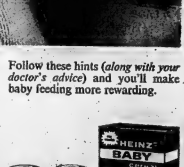
Digestibility should also determine your choice of strained foods.

Heinz Baby Foods do more

At Heinz we do more than pour our strained foods through a sieve. We force them through—in steam. This pulps them to a predictably fine consistency and makes them easy to digest.

Junior Foods, too, should be digestible—even if swallowed whole. Heinz Junior Foods are. Yet they still have a special texture which encourages chewing.

Retain interest



To retain your baby's interest in eating, vary the foods you serve. Serve each food separately and always on gay, bright plates.

There is an even more important reason to vary your baby's diet. One food cannot provide all the nutrients a baby needs.

By varying the kinds of foods you serve you are more certain of giving your baby a wider variety of minerals and vitamins.

Follow these hints (along with your doctor's advice) and you'll make baby feeding more rewarding.

HEINZ BABY FOODS

Speaking Personally

NO BOOKWORMS, PLEASE

Enumeration for librarians is not at the low level it used to be. In fact, qualified librarians' salaries range as high as $14,000 a year. In the Federal Civil Service the starting salary is $4,800 and goes up to $8,250 with higher salaries in administrative posts.

There is little or no unemployment among qualified librarians. It may not be an occupation that leads to riches, but stability of library staffs provides a measure of security.

There is at present a great shortage of professionally trained personnel having the leadership and experience necessary to provide good library service. Several hundred vacancies exist at the present time in Canada and many more will develop when library services are extended.

Every phase of library service is undergoing an upsurge in activity. New specialization such as work with children, research, art, music, and films are coming into being to meet popular demand. New types of libraries are needed to deal with the increased volume of published material.

More reading and study has been stimulated by the expansion of adult education, advancing science and technological development.

So for the young person, boy or girl who is choosing an occupation this field should offer attractive possibilities. For library clerks, short training courses and some experience in library work may be sufficient. But there is no shortage of applicants for junior clerical positions, and competition is quite keen.

Librarianship courses require a B.A. degree from a recognized university. There are two such schools in Ontario where the degree of Bachelor of Library Science may be obtained, one at the University of Toronto, the other at the University of Ottawa. Outside of Ontario there are three, at McGill University; University of Montreal, and University of British Columbia.

How do you know if you would make a good librarian? Well, the Canadian Occupations Monograph published by the Department of Labour at Ottawa, says this is no longer a place for introverts or bookworms. If you are interested in literature, music, drama, or art, have scholastic ability, like the detail and study necessary in cataloguing and research, are intelligent and resourceful, like to meet the public, have a good appearance with neat grooming, a pleasant attitude and (very important) are strong and healthy so you can climb stairs, stoop to reach lower shelves, lift and carry books, do the walking that is required in a library, you are a good candidate for a librarian!

KEEP OFF!

Something that has passed from the changing scene is the placard on the house proclaiming that someone inside has the measles, or scarlet fever, or diphtheria. We were really quarantined in years past with no one allowed in or out of the house. Now it seems children attend school unless they actually have a rash.

It doesn't seem to make much difference as far as spreading the infection goes because I recall that in the spring the placards spread from episodic to epidemic proportions regardless of the fact that we advertised to the whole passing world that we were in quarantine. In fact the rash of placards competed with the rash of the measles. These placards were in different colors depending on the nature of the illness within, red for measles, yellow for diphtheria, and so on, so that the passerby could tell from the color what disease he was avoiding by not entering, even without going close enough to read the sign.

MORE ABOUT ROBINS

My confrere George Carver, sports editor, tells me that at his home a pair of robins which he and Mrs. Carver affectionately call Red and Susie, have returned every year for the past six years to build their nest in the same tree, and in that time the day of their arrival has not varied within two days of April 7 and 8.

Club Holds Supper Meet.

CAMPBELLFORD — The Campbellford Senior Citizens Club held a supper meeting on Wednesday, April 15th with about 60 members present. A guest at the meeting was Mr. Don Maddocks, of Belleville, Regional Recreation Director. Mr. Maddocks congratulated the club and said it was one of the best in the district.

Some discussion took place concerning the annual summer bus trip, the place to be decided by popular vote later. A sewing group was organized with Mrs. G. Fields, as convener, to make articles for a bazaar to be held in the fall. A rummage sale will also be held in the fall.

Mrs. Joe Smith was presented with a gift in recognition of her services as secretary for a number of years. Rev. Dr. Mansell Smith of St. John's United Church spoke briefly.

The Senior Citizens' Glee Club contributed several numbers and an orchestral group of Campbellford young men who call themselves the Night Riders entertained the members of the club to the delight of everyone present. Following the program cards were played.

The next social activity will be a euchre party on April 27th in the club rooms.

SPEAKING OF MANNERS — BY PATRICIA LEWIS

PLANNING A SUCCESSFUL COOK - OUT

Run for the hills, men, the barbecue season has arrived!

This used to be the battle cry several seasons ago when cook-outs were in their infancy and hosts and hostesses had a lot to learn about the art.

Remember the days of the choking fires, the meat that was burned on the outside and raw on the inside, the dive-bombing attacks of any insect within a ten-mile radius that could fly?

No wonder an invitation to a gay little cook-out was received with a groan and a quick reminder that Aunt Minnie was coming that very weekend and, so sorry, we can't make it.

Well, now that hosts and hostesses have gotten the barbecue under control and are more sophisticated about its mechanics, it has become a gracious way to entertain in warm weather.

As with any party, the secret of success lies mainly in the preparation. So here are a few tips on how to arrange a cook-out that's pleasant for hosts and guests alike.

First, take care of the insects and whatever is flying about. About an hour or so before guests arrive, spray the picnic area with an insecticide, preferably one that's non-toxic and doesn't have a long-lasting odor. Repeat several times to make sure the area is safe from attack.

The fire can be started about the same time it takes about an hour for the coals to burn down to the point where they're gray and smoking gently but not actually aflame. Have a spray can of water on tap to cool things off whenever the coals flare up during cooking.

If you're planning to serve vegetables, either cook them in the kitchen stove in a casserole that can be set on a corner of the grill to keep warm, or wrap them, awash in butter or sauce, in foil and let them cook on the grill along with the meat. Rolls can also be heated to perfection this way.

AN ATTRACTIVE SETTING

An attractive setting is also very much a part of the barbecue picture today. A plastic table cloth, in a colorful check or stripe, helps hide the scarred wood of the old table. Instead of paper plates, china or plastic is preferred — not only for appearance, but also because they won't blow away in a gust of wind and you don't cut through them when you cut into your steak. If finger foods such as chicken (you can handle it at a picnic) and corn-on-the-cob are on the menu, napkins should be big and plentiful. One smart hostess I know uses colorful finger-tip terry towels for napkins.

Another goes one step further and serves up damp hand towels after guests are finished eating, so they can really freshen fingers instead of giving them just a lick and a promise.

So you see that the old-fashioned barbecue has taken on new dimensions. Just take time to plan and your cook-out can be as gracious and charming as any indoor party.

Church Groups

MESSENGERS GROUP

RAWDON — The Messenger Group of Mount Pleasant-Rawdon United Church convened in the church hall on Sunday morning with Mrs. Raymond McConnell in charge of the primary study book and Mrs. Frank Spencer outlined the message to the junior group.

Brenda Campbell opened the meeting with the playing of quiet music. In the business period it was decided to order a copy of "The World Friends Magazine" for each family in the community where there are children. The subscriptions will begin in September with Joyce Jeffs in charge of the distribution. The Messengers will use their funds for this project. A donation was made to help cover cost of the films which are ordered through the Rev. W. G. Fletcher.

Janet Escott conducted the devotional on the theme "Helping Others to Know God". Judy McAdam gave the call to worship, with Carolyn Merrick and Mrs. Herbert Smith taking part. Kenneth Sharp and David Jeffs gathered the offering which was dedicated by Dennis Campbell. Gordon Hoard gave his report.

Piano selection were given by Janet Spencer, Carolyn Merrick and Jeannette Hoard and appropriate items were read by Jim Scott and Lorraine Jeffs.

Honor Couple With Shower

The young couple was presented with a china heffel and glassed ornamental bowl. Both Ada and Glen expressed thanks and invited all to visit them at their house in Frankford. Lunch and social time were enjoyed by all.

Wife of CPA President Always Ready for Flight

VANCOUVER (P)—A chunk of snowy-red bunting with flies in an old log cabin in the wilds of northern British Columbia is the most weird greeting Margaret and Grant McConachie have of their first home. It was in 1935.

Today the wife of the president of Canadian Pacific Airlines lives in a well-appointed home in Vancouver's swank Shaughnessy district, keeping pace with her world-travelling husband.

Mrs. McConachie, or Margaret MacLean as she was then, first met bush pilot Grant McConachie just after he had crashed a plane and was wheeled into an Edmonton hospital. Soaring through the northrider on a rush call, the young nurse almost stumbled into the man in the stretcher.

"Would you please move your wheelchair?" she asked. He did.

A few years later they were married.

The wife of the Indian agent there was the only woman she was able to converse with. At times, the Indians crowded around the two-room log cabin and peered through the curtainless windows, dangling what they considered choice cuts of fly - ridden moosemeat before her eyes in hopes of a sale.

While husband Grant was busy making his reputation as a northern bush pilot, Margaret, or Peg as he calls her, was busy with chores she had never done before — chopping wood, hauling water from the lake, washing clothes on a scrub board and baking bread.

There were more adventures in those early years.

Their first trip out for the winter ended abruptly when the plane's engine gave out and they had to land in the wilderness. The McConachies and mechanic Ed Gray paddled a boat 140 miles through rough rapids and freezing weather, sleeping out in 10-below temperatures during the night.

It's easier for her to go to places she hasn't seen—Africa and India—in describing where she has been.

Discuss Parliamentary Duties At P. C. Women's Meeting

The regular, monthly meeting of the Belleville Progressive Conservative Women's Association was held on Monday evening, April 20th.

President Mrs. Stuart W. Hobwell expressed pleasure in being able to welcome so many members and thanked them for venturing out in such inclement weather. A cordial invitation was given to all members of District No. 2 meeting, which is composed of all the Hastings counties and Prince Edward-Lennox, to be held in the Kiwanis Centre on Wednesday, April 29th, at 2.00 p.m., with Mrs. Dorothy Downing, national women's organizer, as guest speaker. Mrs. J. Orr, Mrs. M. McKay and Mrs. H. McKay will be conveners.

A dessert bridge and euchre will be held on Wednesday, May 13th, in St. Thomas' Parish Hall. Mrs. Howell asked for support to the organization on this project from all members and friends. Mrs. M. McKay will convene the overall plans.

Mrs. C. Nind, past president of Prince Edward Progressive Conservative Women's Association, favored the group with her entertaining readings. A gift was presented to Mrs. Nind on behalf of the ladies by Mrs. Bud Bateman.

Mr. Clarke T. Rollins, MPP for Hastings East, one of the speakers of the evening, was introduced by Mrs. George Gibbons. Mr. Rollins thanked the ladies for their help in the last provincial election campaign and remarked that their assistance and hard work were important and greatly appreciated. Mr. Rollins explained the duties of a provincial member and explained how committees are set up and how each member is a member of different committees. Mr. Rollins is active on five different committees.

A young Indian lad, Danny Leween, from Tyendinaga Reserve, was chosen in a recent session as a page boy and carried out his duties in an admirable manner.

Mr. Lee Grills, former MP for South Hastings, spoke on the present parliament and commented on the tremendous job affecting Mr. Diefenbaker was doing in the present role as Leader of the Official Opposition. Mr. Grills made mention of the small amount of work this government had accomplished and this progress had been made, mainly in the fields and policies which had been set up by the former Conservative government.

Mr. Grills was introduced by Mr. Ken Yuile, and both speakers were thanked by Mrs. G. Locke.

Greetings were brought to the association from Mr. J. Ireland, president of South Hastings Riding Association; Mr. C. Keeble, president of East Hastings Riding Association.

Mrs. Keeble announced that there would be a meeting in the Kiwanis Centre on Friday, April 24th, at which time the Belleville East Hastings Progressive Association would hold their annual meeting and election of officers.

At this year Mr. Grills' birthday, a birthday cake with lighted candles was brought in as a tribute to the popular guest.

Bringing Up Baby

HINTS COLLECTED BY MRS. DON GERBER, MOTHER OF 5

One of the wonders of babyhood is the development of manual dexterity. Busy fingers become aware of their usefulness at 3 or 4 months. Exciting to watch baby discover that fingers are fine for sucking, playing with and getting the feel of everything from nose to toes . . . toys to clothes. At 4 or 5 months he can grasp toys . . . at 6 and 7 hold his bottle securely. Eight or 9 months find those hands working together . . . and oh magic moment, at 1 year, he can pick up and pinch-hold small objects with nimble thumb and forefinger.

P.S. If baby doesn't conform to the above "norms", don't worry. He'll do these things in his own sweet time, the best time of all.

New breakfast bonanza with a flavour bonus. How about a special cereal treat for baby? Gerber ★Strained Oatmeal, Mixed Cereal, Rice Cereal or Protein Cereal—all with Applesauce and Bananas. There's a quartette to whet an appetite! Each cereal is cooked with the fruit and ready to serve. All have delightful flavours and a wonderfully smooth, moist texture. The B-vitamins, B_1, B_2, thiamine, riboflavin and niacin added.

Two sock stories. (1) If you've more than one tot in your house, why not initial sock bottoms with indelible ink? (2) Saves sorting time . . . prevents mismating. (3) For a member, socks should be checked for fit as often as shoes. Tight socks can cramp tender toes, too.

Vegetable viewpoint. Babies, like grownups, should have plenty of green and yellow vegetables because they're important sources of vitamin-A. (That's the vitamin needed to help maintain normal vision and healthy skin.) Gerber Carrots, Sweet Potatoes, Mixed Vegetables and Garden Vegetables, like all good-tasting Gerber Foods, are specially processed to protect precious vitamins. As for meal-appeal, Gerber Vegetables have come-hither colours and garden-true flavours. Small wonder so many babies love them and thrive on them. (Gerber Baby Foods, Niagara Falls, Canada.

Stuffed Boned Leg of Lamb With Glaze

By MARY MOORE

My son Peter and his wife Margy brought their two very little ones, Jennifer and Douglas to visit me over the long Easter weekend. Margy is a good and ambitious cook and makes sure she gets recipes from me which she cannot find in her cookbooks at home. Some that she asked for on this trip were my "best" waffles, rye bread and ways of cooking lamb.

By coincidence, I served a stuffed boned leg of lamb for dinner on Good Friday so that is one of the lamb recipes I give her. She and all of the others thought it was so good that I should pass it on to readers.

WEDNESDAY

Dinner Menu

STUFFED BONED LEG OF LAMB WITH GLAZE:

My leg of lamb weighted 5½ pounds before it was boned and cost $4.28. I am quite sure that if you bought frozen lamb it would cost less. But remember to order frozen lamb in advance as you will have time to thaw in order for the butcher to bone it out readily. Ask the butcher to leave it open and untied ready for you to stuff.

Make the Stuffing: In a large frying pan fry 3 slices side bacon until slightly crisp, lift from pan, drain on paper towelling and crumble. Tip all but 2 tablespoons of the fat from pan and add ¼ cup chopped mild onion and gently saute until transparent but not brown. Remove from heat and add crumbled bacon, 1½ cups dry cracker or bread crumbs, ¼ teaspoon pepper, ¼ teaspoon garlic salt, ½ teaspoon rosemary, ½ teaspoon salt. Dissolve 2 chicken bouillon cubes in ¼ cup boiling water and add. Mix well. Spread on boned surface of lamb and roll it up, tucking back any stuffing which escapes. Tie or skewer securely. Roast at 350 deg. Fahr. for 2½ hours. Fifteen minutes before roasting time is up, spread upper surface of lamb with contents of one 6-oz. can apricot purees (baby food) and finish roasting. I served ours with a casserole of crumbled eggplant and yellow buttered rice.

CASSEROLE OF CRUMBLED EGGPLANT:

Wash, slice and pare 2 medium eggplants. Parboil in salted water to cover for 2 minutes only. Drain. Mix 1 cup dry cracker crumbs with ¼ cup melted butter, ¼ teaspoon salt and ¼ teaspoon MSG. Arrange parboiled eggplant in alternate layers with the crumbs, finishing with crumbs on top. Bake at same time as lamb (above) at 350 deg. Fahr. for ½ hour.

U.C.W. Meeting

QUEENSBORO U.C.W.

The April meeting of Unit 1 U.C.W. Queensboro United Church was held in the Sunday School room on Thursday afternoon.

The leader, Mrs. Roy Rollins presided. The meeting opened with the hymn, prayer and Scripture lesson.

A collection amounting to $2.70 was taken and will be sent to Supply Depot in Toronto for soap in relief bales. Miss Alela McCaw had charge of the study period "The Word and the Way". Mrs. C. McMurray gave a tape recording of "The Work of India Women".

Plans were made for a ham supper which the general U.C.W. are having on Wednesday evening, April 22nd in the Sunday School room.

Radio Isotopes Explained To Members of Auxiliary

The regular meeting of the Women's Hospital Auxiliary was held on Monday April 21st in Edc ation Hall with President Mrs. F. A. Bedell in the chair. In-Hospital volunteers, under the direction of Mrs. J. Buchan, were the honorees of the afternoon. There are 160 volunteers carrying on the following jobs in the hospital: outpatient hostesses — information desk attendants — admitting escorts — hairdressing appointment takers — magazines — library cart — typists — mealtime assistants — occupational therapy assistants — coffee cart — gift corner and tour guide. — In 1963 these volunteers gave 3474 hours to this work and so far in 1964 have spent a total of 1361 hours at their posts. Mrs. T. N. Davidson, coffee cart convener, reported that she can use several more volunteers for 2 hour shifts on the coffee cart. Mrs. B. Casey, membership convener, told the meeting that so far this year the Auxiliary has gained 16 new members.

The president announced that the annual Fashion Show will be held on October 21st, with Mrs. J. H. Forrester acting as general convener.

RADIO ACTIVE DRUGS

The speaker of the afternoon was Dr. W. S. Totten, who was introduced by Mrs. E. A. Fleming. His subject was the "Radio Isotope Department." Dr. Totten cleared up many misapprehensions held by the members when he explained the new and valuable work carried on by his department. He explained that Belleville General Hospital is one of the few hospitals of its size at which there is a Radio Isotope Unit, while many larger hospitals have not yet availed themselves to this type of diagnostic help, which he felt reflected progressive thinking on the part of the Hospital Board.

Many Auxiliary members had thought that the use of radio active drugs sounded dangerous, but Dr. Totten pointed out that less radio activity is emitted from diagnostic doses than would be given off by a luminous watch and that no accumulation of radio active material remains after the tests or treatments.

The main uses of radio active drugs are for testing the condition of the thyroid gland, measuring blood quantity, locating a blood clot, discovering pernicious anemia and diagnosis and locating of brain tumors. Dr. Totten said that so far in Belleville General Hospital, the new department has treated about ten cases of hyperthyroidism, has done many blood volumes and studied many cases of anemia. Mrs. A. E. Miles thanked the speaker for his interesting and informative address, after which tea was served.

Ann Landers

Homosexual Pressured Into Marriage by Family, Friends

DEAR ANN LANDERS — In a recent column you offered two reasons why homosexuals marry.

First: "They yearn to be normal and hope that marriage will somehow enable them to lead a normal sex life."

Second: "They hope marriage will provide them with a cloak of respectability and serve as an effective cover."

There is a third reason, Ann Landers, a reason of which I am acutely aware. I married for this reason, knowing full well that I was a homosexual. In simple language — It was the unbearable pressure from well-meaning family and friends.

ANN LANDERS

I was 30, good-looking, well-built, successful in my profession, and frankly, quite content with my life as it was. My homosexual drives were low-key and I had none of the manifestations generally associated with homosexuality. I managed to keep that side of my life so well disguised that family and friends suspected nothing.

Finally I was so bedevilled by the relentless pressure to get married that I decided to do it.

The girl I married was charming, bright and totally unaware of what she was getting into. She is now in a private mental hospital as a result of two years with a louse who used her for his own purposes.

In your book, "Since You Ask Me," one chapter was headed, "Marriage Is Not for Everyone." I wish I had seen it five years ago. Thanks for letting me get this off my chest. — GUILTY.

DEAR GUILTY — Your letter was an excellent example of what you, my readers, can contribute to one another. Thank you for writing.

* * *

DEAR ANN LANDERS — Recently a letter signed "Past Tense" appeared in your column. The writer asked, "Am I wrong, or is it the height of bad manners to use a toothpick at the table? Shouldn't the gentleman have excused himself?"

Your reply begged the question. You gave the woman the impression that her escort's bad manners were acceptable and she wound up looking stupid.

I have a 13-year-old daughter who reads your column regularly and respects your advice. Will you please address yourself to the woman's question. — CONNECTICUT YANKEE.

DEAR YANKEE — Approximately 500 people wrote with the same complaint. Half of the letters came from Boston and the other half came from Maine, Connecticut and Rhode Island.

With all those fine schools in New England how come you people can't read?

I said in plain English, "It is indeed poor manners to use a toothpick at the table. The man should have excused himself."

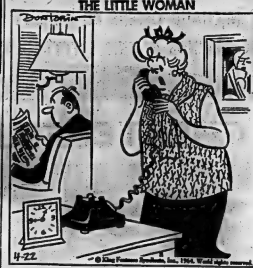
I did not mean that the man should have said, "Excuse me," and used the toothpick there at the table. I meant (and I thought it was clear) the man should have left the table and taken his toothpick to the men's room.

Compre?

* * *

DEAR ANN LANDERS — Can you tell me what to do about a conscience that's killing me? Last week we had a semester geometry test. The boy who sits in front of me is just about a genius. Geometry is my weakest subject, although I have managed so far to sweat out a B.

This particular exam was a beast. I got stumped on the last problem and passed a note to the boy ahead of me asking him to please slide over so I could see his answer. He slid over and I copied straight off his paper. I also changed my third answer after looking at his work.



I got an A on that exam but I feel like a thief. If I confess to the teacher I may get the boy in trouble because he helped me cheat. Please give me your advice at once. — SHOOK-COOKIE.

DEAR SHOOK — Go to the teacher and tell her you did not deserve an A because you copied off a boy's paper. It is not necessary to let her know that he who a willing helper.

Ann Landers' frank and informative new book, "Teen-Agers and Sex ($2.95) is now available at your book store.

Ann Landers will be glad to help you with your problems. Send them to her in care of this newspaper, enclosing a stamped, self-addressed envelope.

THE LITTLE WOMAN

"Oh, Agatha, I've been worried sick about you! I almost called before the night long-distance rates started."

U.C.W. Meeting

WHITE'S DISTRICT — Mrs. Jermyn Palmer opened her home on Tuesday afternoon for the regular meeting of White's U.C.W. with the president, Mrs. Albert Jones presiding. The meeting opened with a hymn and prayer and a Bible reading. Mrs. Jones gave an interesting resume of the Bible, telling how to read it. A definite time each day should be set aside, preferably at the beginning of the day. Consider the time as an appointment with God and keep the appointment faithfully.

A report of the ham supper at White's Church was given showing gratifying results, financially and socially. Mrs. Arnold Hotcheson offered her home for an evening meeting, make a knitted spread to make in May. Mrs. Palmer offered to extra funds. A nylon cushion and cookies were sold for tatent money.

CONTACT CLUB

Last Monday evening Contact Club of Christ Church began with a short business meeting by answering roll call with each member's place of birth. The members were surprised to note that the majority were from out of town. Thank you letters from several groups were read by Secretary June Woodley. A display of doll clothes was set up and explained by Dorothy Sinclair.

During the work period the members decorated hat boxes. Several members sorted and catalogued labels for the Golden Book of Charity project.

Next week will be an auction sale for members and their friends.

During a social half hour the members were treated to a variety of delicious doughnuts, tea and coffee. The hostesses for the evening were Jean Weaver and Irie Forster.

Will Develop Provincial Park At Sandbanks

PICTON (Staff) — The Hon. A. Kelso Roberts has announced that developmental work will start this spring on Sandbanks Provincial Park in Prince Edward County near Wellington. This was confirmed by Norris Whitney, MPP.

The western side of the property is a magnificent five mile white sand beach and behind this lies a chain of sand dunes some of which are ninety feet high.

It is planned to construct a bridge at Wellington to join the mainland to the northern tip of the Sandbanks. From there a paved road will meander through the dunes and at suitable intervals lookouts and parking lots will be provided.

Any part of the new road will be within easy walking distance of the long white beach. Camp grounds are planned for the southern end among the plantations, which were established there.

The Sandbanks will be 120 miles from downtown Metro Toronto, and should be able to accommodate thirty thousand bathers at a time. It will be a fine companion park to the nearby Outlet Provincial Park, which last year handled more than 300,000 visitors and 17,000 campers.

The popular Presqu'ile Park, thirty five miles west of the Sandbanks, accommodated 287,000 visitors and 30,000 campers in 1963.

Pickerel Derby Now Has 100 Applications

PICTON (Staff) — According to Jay Hepburn, chairman of the Pickerel Derby, sponsored by the Chamber of Commerce, entries are being received at a much greater rate than last year. To date more than 100 "would-be Isaak Waltons" have sent in their registration.

This would indicate a much wider interest being shown this year, and could be owing to the fact that the contest is open to everyone.

Last year the committee limited the major prize to people not living in the county, and many local anglers claimed that this procedure was not fair.

It turned out that for the most part, the visiting anglers were not too happy with the regulation, as they wanted to be on a par with the locals, "we will take our chances with any one else, after all, the local angler might know the place where the pickerel usually stay, but who can tell about a fish," one of last year's visitors told the officials of the Derby.

Officials of the Derby hope to have over one thousand entries by the time the contest actually gets under way, at midnight May first.

The Prince Edward Yacht Club will arrange a fish fry and dance at their clubhouse, and the Kinsmen Club will provide an additional attraction — the annual Sportsmen's Show at the Picton Arena on Friday and Saturday, May first and second.

Truck Flips Down Bank

PICTON — Two men were miraculously uninjured when a panel truck left the road and flipped over down a high bank on the Ridge Road, at 4 p.m. yesterday, two miles from Picton.

Police said Nelson Struthers, 44, Main Street, Wellington, driving the 1952 vehicle, and a passenger, Henry Monroe, R.R. 3, Picton, were unhurt.

The truck—at $150—was wrecked.

LADY FINED

LONDON (Reuters)—A titled Englishwoman was fined £50 ($150) Tuesday for allowing part of her fashionable home to be used for prostitution. Denisa Ladt Newborough, 51, had pleaded not guilty and announced she would appeal the conviction.

Kingston Firm Gets Contract For Hospital

PICTON (Staff) — After many months of planning and time-consuming meetings by members of the Board of the Prince Edward County Memorial Hospital with architects and governmental agencies, progress for the new wing has now reached the stage where the actual construction is expected to commence almost immediately. Authority has now been received from the Ontario Hospital Services, to proceed with the program.

After a review of tenders from seven contracting firms, it was decided that the tender from the firm of M. Sullivan and Sons of Kingston and Arnprior at a quoted price of $391,717 for the construction of the wing, be accepted.

The new wing will accommodate 40 additional beds, plus some ancillary services such as improved Laboratory, Pharmacy, and storage areas. It is expected that the new wing will be completed and ready for occupancy some time during the early part of 1965.

The total cost of the wing is estimated at $500,000 which means that it will be necessary to raise an additional $75,000 over and above the government grants and available hospital funds in order to provide the many items of important equipment, which are required for the completion of the 40-bed unit.

Georgian Bay Now Pickerel Sanctuary

SUDBURY (CP)—The lands and forests department has declared Georgian Bay a pickerel sanctuary until the end of the spawning season.

The order bans fishing on Georgian Bay until the pickerel run has ended, two or three weeks from now.

Wildlife supervisor Charles Bibby of Sudbury has ordered all fishing to cease in Georgian Bay. He says the department's order applies to Indians and his men have been ordered to stop reserve Indians from netting until the bay is again declared open.

The ban on fishing followed recent protests by the Northern Ontario Tourist Outfitters' Association and the Sudbury and District Chamber of Commerce.

Tied to Five Little ...ies Sending Dear Mom Mad

DEAR DORIS — Thought I was reading about myself in "Nightmare's" letter.

As a mother of five little ones, I have been going literally mad. I am a nervous wreck and making the children the same, constantly yelling and screaming.

Your answer to "Nightmare" is good in parts—Where do we find out about those courses in household science and plain cooking? — LOVE YOU, AS ALL MOTHERS, CHILDREN AND ALSO FATHERS DO.

DORIS CLARK

DEAR LOVE — If you scream they'll scream back. One man's secret for producing serene, obedient children, was to use "a low voice and a hard stick." Now I don't go for the stick — unless he means it figuratively: that is, a strict insistence on obedience. But I do go for the low voice.

Write in for Thankful's list of household routines, which might help with your mighty chore. Your local board or provincial department of education can direct you to the nearest homemaker's course.

* * *

DEAR DORIS — Please explain the difference between a retarded child and one who is mentally or emotionally disturbed. — MOTHER OF RETARDED CHILD.

DEAR MOTHER — It is a common error to group both types together. Nothing could be further from the truth.

A retarded child is one whose mentality is of a considerably lower standard than average. He will need special, patient care and training to develop what native capacities he has.

A mentally or emotionally disturbed child may have high intelligence but still cannot function well because of handicapping factors, usually rooted in a poor environment. With treatment, he may regain emotional balance and catch up, mentally, with children from homes where there have been the love and encouragement vital to healthy growth.

Defence of Apartheid Policy In South Africa by Weston Raises Storm in Toronto

TORONTO (CP)—A quickly-formed Toronto committee is seeking a face-to-face meeting with finance W. Garfield Weston to have him explain his recent defence of South Africa's racial separation (apartheid) policy.

Ten persons, calling themselves the Anti-Weston Committee, resolved Tuesday to let the outcome of their direct meeting determine whether to picket Toronto stores of Loblaw Groceterias Company Limited, owned by the giant George Weston Company of which Mr. Weston is chairman.

The Canadian-born food king spoke up Monday for the South African government's side in the segregation debate, contending it would be ridiculous to en franchise "millions of coloured men whose ethics are not ours and whose Christian morals are completely absent."

Mr. Weston, whose company has 6,000 employees in South Africa, said "every black picka-ninny or black mammy can call on the government for a solution to every social problem."

His remarks to the company's annual meeting followed a three-month visit to South Africa.

WANTS BOYCOTT

The committee, which includes writers, teachers, university students and housewives, has expressed an intent to establish a boycott of Mr. Weston's businesses as well as picket the stores.

At its me e ti ng Tuesday, headed by Negro author Austin Clarke, the committee decided to wait until Friday before making final plans.

At another meeting a group called the Canadian Anti-Apartheid Committee resolved to picket a Liquor Control Board of Ontario store here Saturday because it objects to South African wines and brandies being sold through government outlets.

Stephen Lewis) is member of the Ontario legislature for Scarborough West, demanded that the government ban the sale of South African goods in Ontario.

ON ORDE RPAPER

He put a resolution to this effect on the legislature order paper, making no mention of Mr. Weston, but in an interview later called the financier's statements "beneath contempt."

Mr. Lewis, who in 1960 and 1961 was in Ghana and Tanganyika aiding in the rehabilitation of South Africans who fled their country, said such statements "debase Christianity by using it as a blind for white supremacy and immorality born of greed.

Isaac Akande, a Nigerian student at the University of Toronto and executive member of the African Students Association, dismissed Mr. Weston as "not an expert."

NO PASSPORT

"He's basing his judgments on Christian morality. I don't think that should be a passport for Western democracy."

He said the association plans a protest by African ambassadors in Ottawa. New York and Washington to let Mr. Weston know what they think about his remarks."

Rev. G. W. B. Wheeler, chairman of the council for social service for the Anglican diocese of Toronto and a student of South African affairs, described Mr. Weston's remarks as "most regrettable."

"As for Christian morals," he said, "the African Christians could put many white Christians to shame by their concern for others and their Christian patience in the face of constant pressure."

Separatism, Destruction No Key to Progress Caouette Tells Sales and Ad Club

Real Caouette last night castigated apostles of extremism and violence in Quebec and said destruction was no key to progress.

If Quebec was economically bolstered by other areas the blame must lie with its own politicians, he told the Belleville Sales and Advertising Club at Columbus Hall.

The stormy petrel of Canadian politics derided extremists as "crazy" and blamed an avalanche of publicity for encouraging their activities.

However, the situation was fraught with danger, he intimated.

"It took only one crackpot to get rid of (president) Kennedy."

(Later, talking to an Ontario Intelligencer reporter, Mr. Caouette added this footnote: "We never know what's going to happen. Those stupid youngsters - - they don't think for a moment of their actions."

The controversial Creditiste leader spoke to a hall packed with 180 members and guests. The club executive evidently took pains that no controversy should be stirred at the meeting. Unknown to most of the attendance a plainclothes constable unobtrusively sat near the head table throughout the meeting.

However, the precaution seemed far-fetched within seconds after Mr. Caouette began speaking.

CAPTIVATES AUDIENCE

With the powerful confidence that has made him a legend the Creditiste chief literally swept his listeners into the palm of his hand. More with stan than the fierioness that is his prime forte, Mr. Caouette kept his audience laughing and applauding for nearly an hour, then kept them going for an extra 15 minutes while he answered questions from the floor.

While his remarks focussed mainly on Social Credit policies, his remarks pertinent to Quebec aspirations and attitudes drew the greatest reaction.

Quebec has the rest of Canada "scared" and wondering what it seeks. Citizens of the provinces "are not satisfied" with what does exist today."

Mind you gentlemen, I don't agree with what is taking place in the province of Quebec," Mr. Caouette stated. And its economic problems should not be blamed on Toronto or the Anglo Saxon.

"I say here you will never climb in social or economic life by prying to destroy the other"

"If Quebec is 10 years or 15 years behind the others (provinces) it's nobody's fault but the fault of--the politicians in ... There is where the ... has fallen."

He told his audience:

"I am a nationalist, I am a French-Canadian — definitely I am one. There is a place for a French-Canadian in Canada; there is place for an English-Canadian in Canada. It is not through destruction that we can create a better life and better understanding in our country."

The rest of his remarks were drowned out by applause.

WANT ECONOMIC INDEPENDENCE

He said it was "natural" that the provinces should want economic independence and Quebec sought no special treatment to the "detriment of the other provinces or the "English-speaking citizen."

"I have never called Hitler, Mussolini, communist — I've even been called a Conservative one time. Lately I've been called a separatist.

"I'm in favor of one kind of separatism—separating the Liberals from the Conservatives."

Economic policies of the old line parties as opposed to Social Credit were the key issues put forth by Mr. Caouette in his speech.

He sarcastically dismissed Canada's monetary system—which has resulted in inflation—as "that monkey system we've had in Ottawa since Confederation."

"And it is a monkey system, believe me," he continued as his listeners rocked with laughter. "That's the source of the economic ills in our country."

What Canada needs is not a balanced budget, but a balanced economy, he said.

DEBT TOO HIGH CLAIM

On all levels of government, Canada had now incurred a total public debt close to $60 billion. Yet outstanding currency and credit totalled only $16 billion.

He cited the example of Quebec now engaged in borrowing $550 million. In 30 years with interest and service charges the amount will have increased to $1,498,000,000.

"How will they be able to pay back three times what we are borrowing today. That's the problem in Canada."

"How do you buy 46 with 33? It's impossible. You have to fill the gap that exists between the total product and the total income in our country.

Mr. Caouette reiterated the Social Credit theory of using the Bank of Canada to create purchasing power matching production.

Money would not be "created without consideration —but to give us a balanced economy so that at all times there would be sufficient purchasing power put into the hands of the consumers to buy the goods and services that were being created and produced to satisfy the needs of the people."

WANTS BALANCED ECONOMY

"Money should serve the people," he said.

"While money and the monetary system was the key to the nation's problems nothing was being done about it," said Mr. Caouette.

"The Bible has been preached for the past 2,000 years yet we have people going to hell every day."

He appealed to his listeners — all of them businessmen — to exert pressure on government to give the country what it needs.

"A balanced economy—that's what we want from them."

He also warned governments "are only trying to diminish freedom of enterprise, freedom of the individual and initiative."

Speculation Fever Gripping Timmins Is Now Subsiding

TIMMINS (CP)—Speculation fever that has gripped this Northern Ontario mining town subsided briefly Tuesday after a lull in stock trading but recovered following what market analysts described as a normal let-down of excitement.

A drop in penny mining stock prices created a sombre atmosphere during the morning but a price rise in the afternoon brought a cheery response from crowds jamming the town's two exchange houses.

One man demonstrated his relief by going through both exchanges with his arms full of flowers, passing one to each woman in the crowd.

A big shock came when a radio announcer with a direct wire to Toronto listed Texas Gulf Sulphur Company, owners of the huge copper - zinc - silver find near here, as selling at $29. It had been selling at $42.

GOT CORRECTION

A Texas Gulf drop could mean disaster for the heavily-traded penny stocks but before they could be unloaded the radio corrected the error and listed Texas Gulf at $39.

John Angus, manager for T. A. Richardson and Company, said "volume was not quite as heavy here as on Friday and Monday but people are still optimistic."

One young prospector returning from the bush gave a teenager $1 for a dime and plunked it into a soft drink machine.

"I've been waiting for this drink for three days," he said.

TIMMINS (CP)—Red Bragg-nolo, the Timmins realtor who struck it rich on a small fortune through selling claims he staked near here just before the copper-zinc-silver find by Texas Gulf Sulphur Company, still has another deal to complete—his largest.

Mr. Bragagnolo began staking claims in the area 10 miles north of Timmins after he noticed a Texas Gulf helicopter was continually flying over his house, always headed in the same direction.

His total investment in the claims was $7,000, he said, and reports say he may have made as much as $2,000,000.

Mr. Bragagnolo, however, said "I haven't stopped to figure it out.

"I don't know yet exactly what I made."

Reports Saturday said Mr. Bragagnolo would close his biggest deal to date Monday. But he says he "is still negotiating."

BIG SUM INVOLVED

Refusing to name the company involved, Mr. Bragagnolo said it "was a large company and there's lots of money involved.

He originally staked 250 claims and subsequently sold 12 to PCE Explorations Limited, 20 to Coowest Exploration Limited, 12 to Bralorne Mill Extension Limited and four to Glenn Uanalan Mines Limited.

He still holds 202 claims.

Mr. Bragagnolo said he plans to take his wife and three children on a trip "when all this dies down.

"I don't know where we'll go yet, but we are going somewhere. "I'm just taking it easy now."

Creditistes To Organize In Province

Real Caouette, Rallieuaux Creditiste leader, says his party will start wide-scale organizing in Ontario in the near future — in time for the next federal election.

The party — named the Canadian Social Credit Party in English—already has local branches in several Ontario communities.

However, Mr. Caouette told an Ontario Intelligencer reporter after his speech to the Belleville Sales and Advertising Club last night, "we will start organizing full time, probably in two weeks."

He also the party will enter a candidate in Nipissing by-election, caused by the death of Kenneth Middleton Reid.

The CBC already has organizations in Toronto, Ottawa, North Bay, Sudbury, Kirkland Lake, Timmins and Welland.

Accompanying Mr. Caouette from Ottawa last night was the party's Ontario vice-president Raymond Berlinguette and Raymond Langlois, MP Megantic.

Parliament At a Glance

By THE CANADIAN PRESS

TUESDAY, April 21, 1964

Prime Minister Pearson said a report has been requested on the Quebec shooting incident involving the Canadian commander there.

Cracking down under new rules, Speaker Macnaughton reduced the oral question period to under 20 minutes.

NDP Leader Douglas said veterans oppose this policy because it didn't make clear how their rights would be protected.

A Conservative non-confidence motion criticizing veterans hospital policy was defeated 123 to 56. NDP members backing the Conservatives.

POTASH IN UTAH

The first major step in this direction began in 1960 when the company undertook a $30,000,000 program to develop a potash deposit at Moab, Utah. Production there, delayed by a fatal explosion in the mine last year, is scheduled to begin this fall.

The second big diversification project was announced April 2, but two weeks before the Timmins ore strike was announced. The company said then it will embark on a $45,000,000 program to produce 2,000,000 tons of phosphate rock annually from a North Carolina property.

The Timmins ore will provide the third but President Claude O. Stephens said the discovery is so recent that Texas Gulf has had no opportunity to sort out the details nor estimate the costs involved.

Stephens said, however, that

Canadian Interests of Texas Gulf Spread From B. C. to N. B., North to Baffin Land

NEW YORK (CP)—The Texas Gulf Sulphur Company's interest in Canada, which grew considerably with discovery this month of a major base metals lode in Northern Ontario, goes back many years.

The multi-million-dollar corporation, which since 1926 has been the world's leading sulphur supplier, has been exploring in various areas of Canada since the Second World War, searching for new sulphur reserves and other minerals that would help diversify its operations.

It found new sulphur in Alberta's petroleum fields, where since 1950 it has been recovering sulphur from sour natural gas.

Today, the company's Canadian interests are spread from British Columbia to New Brunswick and as far north as Baffin Island in the eastern Northwest Territories.

Its discovery of a 25,000,000-ton ore body containing zinc, copper and silver in the Timmins, Ont., area, announced at the company's head offices here last week, is the beginning of its third major step toward diversification.

Decisions on refining are to come later.

Meanwhile, Texas Gulf is expanding its sulphur production facilities in Alberta, continuing mineral explorations in eastern Canada and on Baffin Island and enlarging its participation in petroleum explorations in western Canada.

STARTED IN 1909

The company, which listed assets of nearly $170,000,000 at the end of 1963, was formed Dec. 23, 1909 as the Gulf Sulphur Company to acquire and explore promising sulphur deposits in Texas.

Initial capitalization was 25,000 shares of $10 par value stock, subscribed by nine investors. Today, it has more than 10,000,000 shares issued and, the number of shareholders totals nearly 75,000—most of them in the U.S.

In 1918, the present name was adopted and Texas Gulf began its first production the following year.

Texas deposits have provided the bulk of the company's sulphur production since it began but with world demand increasing it moved to other regions and countries for additional reserves.

The Timmins discovery followed six years of exploration in Northern Ontario, exploration Stephens said will be continued while the new property is being developed. The company has the mineral rights to more than 50,000 acres in the region.

WHOOPERS LEAVE

WASHINGTON" (AP) — The U.S Fish and Wildlife Service received word Tuesday that additional whooping cranes have left the Arkansas National Wildlife Sanctuary in Texas on their migration north. During an inventory Monday, observers counted only six cranes in the area, three adults and three young. It had been reported previously that a large number of the 32 known wild whooping cranes began their northward flight to Canada about April 10.

WESTERN MUSIC IN WEST GERMANY — Tommy Hunter, Canadian singer of western and country songs, and Gordie Tapp (right), host of CBC-TV's Country Hoedown show, performs at Ramstein, Germany, in one of 15 concerts put on by Canadian entertainers during a tour of RCAF and Canadian Army bases in France and West Germany. Country Hoedown First Regular Network Show Videotaped Completely Outside Canada

By DAVE PIKE

TORONTO (CP) — CBC-TV airs an experimental first Friday—the first regular network show videotaped from start to finish outside Canada.

The show is Country Hoedown, ordinarily telecast live from Toronto. It was taped recently at Baden-Soellingen, West Germany, where the Hoedown regulars featured, but an unusually large number of audience shots are included to give viewers at home an opportunity to try to spot relatives serving overseas.

Apart from the Hoedown production, the Concert Party ensemble featured two groups of performers, including Hoedown regulars, who toured RCAF bases at Baden-Soellingen and Zweibrucken in West Germany, and Marville and Metz in France, as well as army bases in and around Soest, West Germany.

The idea of doing a remote production began to take root a year ago. It had been hoped to tape Hoedown outside in May with the beautiful Baden-Baden area and the base with its CF-104 planes as a backdrop, but military reasons and the unavailability of German TV equipment forced the show into the huge base maintenance hangar a month earlier.

To emphasize the location of the show, Thomas employed short opening and closing sequences showing a pilot landing his plane to attend the show and then returning to the air afterward.

When the CBC initially requested three days' use of the entire hangar, the base commander had "no" written all over his face. The request was cut down to two days and a quarter of the hangar and, with added diplomatic jiggling and fiddling by Ken Dalziel, the CBC's assistant light entertainment supervisor, the RCAF extended full co-operation.

Taping on what amounts to a front-line air base presented problems galore, such as sound. With planes in the air all the time, maintenance crews working in the hangar could stop rattling away only long enough for the short taping period.

In Canada, it would have cost about $5,000 to rent the equipment the West Germans provided free. Thomas, who had to pick up a lot of technical German terms fast, found the equipment to be of the highest quality, but the production standards at least five years behind those in Canada.

GERMANS SEE SHOW

The German network planned to telecast 15 minutes of the half-hour Hoedown show, including the square-dance portion—the Germans had never seen a square dance before and were delighted—and an interview with Hoedown singer Pat Hervey, who was taught to reply in German.

This year's Concert Party tour was the largest ever, mainly because of the decision to produce a Hoedown show at the time. Besides it, 15 stage shows were done, six Tommy Hunter Shows and an Armed Forces Showcase special were recorded for the CBC Radio network.

The second big tour this year begins May 10 when Dalziel takes the Canada Entertainers performers, who include French-Canadian singer Claudette, on a swing through United Nations Emergency Force bases in the Middle East until May 28.

This year's tour of both European and Middle East bases, making a total of some 50,000 miles travelled to entertain troops. The tours were prompted back in 1959 when a CBC Toronto entertainment group visited army and air force bases in the Canadian north.

The Middle East tours proved so successful that the Canadian commander declared May 24 Canada Day.

"We're very proud of the fact that it has become recognized that our visit is looked forward to as the entertainment highlight of the year," said Dalziel. "Seeing entertainment from back home is a real link for our boys."

It's quite a sentimental affair at the end of each stage show when everyone sings O Canada and the Canadians ask the performers why they can't return more often.

The performers, who work for scale wages in both Europe and the Middle East, entertain all UNEF troops, putting on several shows specifically for the

SILVER ANNIVERSARY

THOMASBURG — Several friends and relatives gathered recently at the home of Mr. and Mrs. William Geen, Thomasburg, to honor them on the occasion of their silver wedding anniversary.

Mr. Everett Geen of Roslin was chairman and read an appropriate address after which a beautiful silver tea service was presented to the couple by the Geen family. Mr. Harold Varty of Bogart, Mrs. Geen's brother, spoke briefly and Mr. Stanley Geen of Plainfield gave a humorous reading.

The couple also received many other gifts as well as many cards. Mrs. Geen was also presented with a lovely corsage by her son Edgar and daughter Ruth and Mrs. Geen's sisters and brothers presented them with an artificial floral arrangement.

The remainder of the evening was spent playing cards and other games after which a tasty lunch including an appropriately decorated anniversary cake was served.

Mr. Earl Morton who underwent a tonsilectomy in Belleville General Hospital is now able to return to his place of business.

DEATH RATES DOWN

Had death rates remained at late 18th century levels, world population now would be 2,000,000,000 instead of 3,300,000,000.

RARE, MEDIUM, WELL-DONE

By GEO. H. CARTER, Sports Editor

Thirty-three entries with promises of more to come blew the cobwebs of disbandment rumor from the second general meeting of the Eastern Ontario Baseball Association.

Operation of the association is now guaranteed since an inaugural entry list of 23 out of a possible 54 clubs tells its own story.

The association territory divided into three zones, reaches from Bay Ridge near Pickering on the west to Belleville. Number One Zone stretches from Bay Ridge to Newcastle; Number Two from Newcastle to Cobourg with points north and Number Three from Cobourg eastward.

Three zone representatives have been added to the association executive. Elected were: Number One Zone, Art Perry, Oshawa; Number two, John Ryan, Cobourg, and Number Three, Harold Griffin, Campbellford.

Baseball men at the meeting appeared enthusiastic over the upcoming seasonal operations. Since the meeting a number of inquiries have been received by executive members regarding entries.

Agenda items with perhaps a spot of controversy such as each team posting a guarantee bond, went through with little or no discussion.

Those former strongholds of senior baseball, Kingston and Peterborough were prominent by their absence at the meeting.

A story from Peterborough last week said that "baseball is slowly dying" in the Littlest City. A meeting was called and only three people showed up.

Veteran Bob Whitehill says he is through. "It's up to the players if they want to continue. There will be minor baseball, but I'm afraid nothing higher. I'm sorry to see it go."

A "sorry" is nothing out of Kingston baseball-wise. I'm told it is doubtful if a city league operates down that-away.

Moe Hunter and Bill Lashford represented the Belleville Kenners and stated that this city would have a senior club. It was reported that Ken Soden, who sponsored the Kenners for several years, may be induced to get back into harness.

Speaking of senior baseball, President Carson says that at the moment four clubs, Alex, Port Hope and Oshawa Legion, besides Belleville, form the nucleus of a senior circuit.

"We hope to interest two other good intermediate clubs in playing a sort of interlocking schedule with the senior teams to make this phase of the association activities more interesting for all concerned," he said.

Zone meetings will get under way immediately, says Percy Carson and another general meeting of the Association will be held before opening dates to finalize schedules and other important pre-season business.

Another ten clubs would put all classifications of the association on a more or less solid footing. As it is and as was noted, 33 entries out of a possible 54 is a fine "kick-off."

Outskate Leafs In Win 2-1 ★ ★ ★ ★ ★

Jubilant Wings Say "It's All Over"

By DAVE BETTS

TORONTO (CP)—"We won't be back until the fall," a jubilant Detroit Red Wing player shouted as the team headed for the airport early today.

With a 3-2 edge in Stanley Cup games, the Wings were moving back to home ice for the sixth—and possibly last—game in the series after putting on a skating display here Tuesday night that earned them a 2-1 win over Toronto Maple Leafs.

Today Clarence Campbell, president of the National Hockey League, will fly to Detroit with the object of every hockey player's dreams, the Stanley Cup itself.

Whether he leaves it at Detroit Olympia Thursday night or lugs it back here depends entirely on 36 hockey players and their two tired coaches.

The Wings, who finished fourth in the league and who have not won the trophy since 1950, cricketed around Maple Leaf Gardens Tuesday night as if their lives depended on making it their last appearance here.

PERSISTENCE REWARDED

The Leafs, who missed the net, shot over the top, hit the post, banged the puck off the crossbar and did everything else to make goalie Terry Sawchuk's life miserable, finally got on the scoring summary in the third period while the Wings had two defencemen in the penalty box.

George Armstrong scored on his own rebound after Frank Mahovlich and Andy Bathgate had both tested Sawchuk's reflexes and been rebuffed.

There's nothing like a win in the other fellow's back yard to give a hockey player confidence.

Said Detroit manager-coach Sid Abel: "For perhaps the first time in the series I feel really confident."

Defenceman Bill Gadsby, who is playing his 18th NHL season without getting in on a Stanley Cup celebration, feels he'll never be closer and shouted: "Now I know we can take them."

Howe, the old master who moved into a tie with teammate Norm Ullman as playoff scoring leader, was more cautious.

"It's not over yet," he warned younger players sitting near him in the dressing room, "but if we play the way I know we can, we'll take it all."

There was no joy across the hall, where the Leafs were torn between disgust over their inability to score and admiration for Sawchuk's goalmouth calisthenics.

PUNCH STILL CONFIDENT

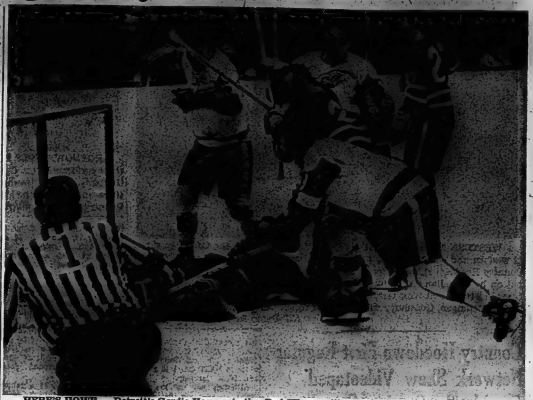
Manager - coach Punch Imlach, who took another verbal poke at referee Frank Udvari, expressed confidence his team can repeat its semi-final feat when the Leafs were behind Montreal Canadiens 3 games to two.

"I think the Canadiens are a lot better hockey club than the Wings," he said, "so we just have to prove again that we can win two big ones in a row."

Imlach, who said last week that Udvari is the worst referee in the league, said Tuesday night's officiating "just substantiates what I said the other night, that Udvari is blind."

Although he complained that Howe should have been penalized for stopping Red Kelly on a partial break-away early in the third period, Imlach did not mention that Toronto's only goal was scored moments after both Gadsby and Marcel Pronovost were sent off.

A breach was blown in Toronto's attacking wall when defenceman Al Langlois tripped left-winger Don McKenney in the first period. McKenney, who has scored four goals and eight assists in the playoffs, limped off the ice and was taken to hospital where the preliminary diagnosis was torn knee ligaments.

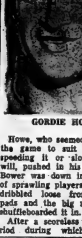


Imlach said he is a doubtful starter for the rest of the series and Ed Litzenberger, a veteran big-leaguer and former captain of Chicago Black Hawks, will dress in his place.

FASTEST OF SERIES

The game was the fastest of the series, with the Wings showing an edge in sustained speed, especially when their young third and fourth lines were on the ice. No whistle was blown until four minutes and 15 seconds had elapsed in the first period and the game was unusually free of icings, penalties, off-sides, pucks over the glass and other routine delays.

The Leafs will practise today and take a morning train to Detroit Thursday, returning to Toronto immediately after the game. The Wings will rest again at Toledo, Ohio, far from reporters, wives and autograph seekers.



Ullman missed a chance for his 12th point of the playoffs when he shot at Toronto's unstaffed goal with five seconds remaining in the game. The puck missed by less than a foot.

TERRY SAWCHUK

GORDIE HOWE

Howe, who seemed to control the game to suit himself by speeding it or slowing it at will, pushed in his goal while Bower was down in a jumble of sprawling players. The puck dribbled loose from Bower's pads and the big right-winger shuffleboarded it in.

After a scoreless second period during which Detroit's younger forwards kept the Leafs on their heels, Joyal used Andre Pronovost and Leaf defenceman Allan Stanley as a screen to shoot between Bower's legs.

Should the Wings win Thursday night, they will be the first fourth-place club to win the cup since 1940 when the Leafs beat Boston and Detroit to move from the last playoff position to the world championship.

This year's series conceivably could stretch to eight games. If Toronto wins Thursday, the seventh game here Saturday could up against Toronto's Sunday curfew law. No overtime period would be allowed to start after 11:30 p.m. and if the teams were tied at that time an eighth game would be played here Tuesday.

Cubs, Pirates Stage Home-Run Derby

Indians Ruin K's Debut

—A battery of 60 green and gold lights and three loud horns set to go off for every Athletics' homer in place of the fireworks the city has banned Finley from using.

—The outfield walls, painted green and gold and splotched with question marks where white lettering compared fence distances with New York's Yankee Stadium.

—The porch, an area in right field that reduces the dimensions of municipal Stadium, bring them more in line with Yankee Stadium geography.

—The Athletics looked sharp. The outfield walls were informative. And the lights worked. But the porch didn't.

Finley built the porch to catch his team's homers. It was bigger originally, but didn't conform to baseball rules and was whittled down. It stood there beckoning Tuesday night —but all three homers hit eluded it.

Meanwhile, homers were hit all over Wrigley Field in Chicago, Pittsburgh Pirates defeating the Cubs 8-5 on Gene Freese's pinch-hit blast in the ninth inning—the ninth homer of the game.

In the only other games played, Cincinnati Reds walloped Houston Colts 10-5 with a 16-hit attack and Detroit Tigers whipped Los Angeles Angels 6-4.

Wagner came up in the eighth with the Indians trailing 2-1 and flammed his homer, far over Finley's porch. Diego Segui, the losing pitcher, had shot Kansas City into the lead with a homer in the seventh.

In the ninth, the lights flashed again when Bill Bryan homered for the Athletics but Ted Abernathy came on to preserve Jim Grant's triumph.

Freese's three - run shot capped a homer derby that left the two teams one shy of the National League single-game record. Roberto Clemente, Dick Schofield and Jim Pagliaroni also homered for the Pirates while Jimmy Stewart, Andre Rodgers, Ron Santo, Billy Cowan and Billy Williams connected for the Cubs.

Vada Pinson cracked two singles and a triple, Pete Rose collected a double and two singles and Chico Ruiz hit an inside - the - park homer as the Reds belted the Colts.

Cincinnati starter Jim O'Toole was forced to leave after six innings because of a bruise on his pitching hand from a shot off Pete Rose's bat and John Tsitouris finished up. Jim Owens took the loss.

Frank Lary, Larry Sherry and Phil Regan collaborated to limit the Angels to six hits. Sherry got the victory with three hitless innings. Detroit, meanwhile, made the most of 10 walks issued by seven Los Angeles pitchers.

In The Dressing Rooms

By DAVE BETTS

TORONTO (CP) — Manager-coach Punch Imlach of Toronto Maple Leafs said after Tuesday's 2-1 Stanley Cup loss the refereeing "just substantiates what I said the other night."

Imlach confirmed he was referring to a remark he made last week that Frank Udvari "is the worst referee in the league."

"PUNCH" IMLACH

Clarence Campbell, president of the National Hockey League, said at that time no fine would be imposed because Imlach was merely expressing an opinion, not impugning the integrity of an official.

"I don't want to say anything that might cost me $1,000," Imlach said Tuesday, "but the refereeing tonight just substantiated what I said last week. That Udvari is blind."

The Toronto coach was annoyed over Udvari's failure to call a penalty on Gordie Howe of Detroit Red Wings who nullified a play by Red Kelly in front of the Detroit net when Kelly appeared to have the defenders beaten.

The Wings went on to win 2-1 and go ahead in the Stanley Cup final three games to two.

Imlach said he now is in the same position as he was with Montreal Canadiens in the semi-final.

"I think the Canadiens are a lot better hockey club than the Wings, so we just have to go back and prove again we can win two big ones in a row."

PLAYER INJURED

The Leafs lost left winger Don McKenney, who was taken to hospital with torn knee ligaments after he was tripped by defenceman Al Langlois in the first period.

Imlach said McKenney is a doubtful starter for the rest of the series — Thursday's sixth game in Detroit and a possible seventh game here Saturday. Ed Litzenberger, a veteran NHLer who played in the American Hockey League most of this year, will dress if McKenney is unavailable.

The Toronto coach said Tuesday's game was lost because of "the unseen hand that was working against us.

"We were doing everything but putting it in. We had breakaways, hit the post, slid it across the crease and everything else you can think of."

The dejected Leaf players admitted they made mistakes and only came close instead of finishing off the plays.

Dave Keon, who had Sawchuk at his mercy after an across-the-goal pass from Armstrong, said ruefully" I should have lifted it, but I couldn't get it up."

The Leafs will practice today at noon and take a morning train to Detroit Thursday, returning on an overnight train after the game.

By ARLIE KELLER
Associated Press Sports Writer

TORONTO (CP)—Ed Joyal, the 26-year-old barrel of speed who scored the winning goal for the fleeting Detroit Red Wings here Tuesday night, sat in the club's dressing room after the game beside the great Gordie Howe.

His expression on his face was one of bewilderment as he seemed tongue - tied by the attention given him by a multitude of reporters.

"Andre (Pronovost) made a terrific play on the goal. He put a perfect pass over to me, then screened (Allan) Stanley on my shot. I didn't take aim, just fired at the net and it went between (Johnny) Bower's legs. If was screened by both Pronovost and Stanley."

"Why shouldn't I be. For perhaps the first time in the series I feel really confident we can take them.

"We came out fast in the first period and beat them to the puck, except for the final pending. It was using four lines and intended to keep Gordie, Marcel (Pronovost), Bill (Gadsby) and Alex (Delvecchio) on the bench most of the period except for the last five minutes.

"Then the referee gives us two penalties and all my plans go out the window."

PLANS NO WORKOUTS

Abel, who added that his club will continue the policy of no workouts leading up to Thursday's next game, praised his defence and goalie.

"Sawchuk (Terry) played as good in goal as he has any time this season for us. And the entire defence was terrific. They wouldn't have scored at all if we hadn't had those two penalties."

"The leafs are on the spot now. They've got to win twice while we need only one and get two chances if needed. If we play as well Thursday as we did tonight it will be all over."

The game's master craftman, Howe, admitted he was tired. "But you don't seem to notice so much when you win. This has been a tough series, as tough as I've ever been in, and it's not over yet. But if we play the way I know we can, we can take it all."

Blades Dump Komets 6-2

FORT WAYNE, Ind. (CP)—Toledo Blades dumped Fort Wayne Komets 6-2 Tuesday to take a 2-1 lead in their International Hockey League best-of-seven final series.

Fourth game will be played here tonight.

Toledo marksmen were Ted Wright and John Goodwin.

'Last Place? So What'

Mr. Berra Not Worrying

CHICAGO (AP)—Yogi Berra chomped on a big black cigar and with Chicago's wind blowing the few remaining strands of his hair he remarked:

"So we're in last place. So what? If that were the last week of the season, I might be worried. But this is the first week of the season."

With that the freshman manager of New York Yankees predicted his club will repeat for the American League pennant.

"Look at it this way," said Berra. "How would you like to have my starting lineup? Would you trade it for any other club in the league?"

Berra was unconcerned over the fact that the Yankees were in last place in the American League with a 1-4 record.

COULD HAVE WON

"Remember," said Berra, "we could just as easily have been 4-1. We lost three games in extra innings."

Despite the bad start Berra said he loves managing.

"The only bad point of managing is losing extra - inning games. We have had good pitching and I know my guys will hit. If they don't then I'll know it's just a bad year."

"I'm sure the American League has more balance this year but it shouldn't hurt us. Sure, we'll get beat by some of the teams but they'll also beat off other contenders.His the long run the Yankees might be better off."

Players Will Operate Club

GUELPH (CP)—The players are the bosses on the Guelph entry this season in the Senior Intercounty Ontario Baseball Association.

It was announced Tuesday that the club had been transferred from a private operation to the players' group.

Walt Jeffries, a former minor league professional and veteran first baseman, was named president of the new operation.

Int. League Opens With 8 Squads

ATLANTA (AP)—Only eight teams will answer the call to play ball tonight when the International League begins its 31st season.

Indianapolis and Little Rock were dropped during the winter and the experiment with a six team loop was ended. Both found refuge in the Pacific Coast League.

At least one other change is in the works, but will not take place until next season. That's the loss of Atlanta Crackers. The Georgia city is building a multi-million dollar stadium on the basis of a firm agreement from a major league team to move in next year.

Opening games tonight, all in the southern section, are Rochester at Jacksonville, Syracuse at Atlanta, Toronto at Columbus and Buffalo at Richmond.

'Probably In Louisville'

Clay Rematched With Liston-If

LOUISVILLE, Ky. (AP)—Cassius Clay's manager said Tuesday a rematch between the heavyweight champion and Sonny Liston is likely in September "probably in Louisville" if Liston and Inter-Continental Promotions meet certain conditions.

Bill Faversham, Clay's manager, said negotiations have been under way for several weeks between Clay's sponsoring group and Jack, Jimmy and Bob Nilon of Inter-Continental.

"Both the Nilons and the Louisville sponsoring group are interested in a Clay-Liston rematch here in September," Faversham said.

The sponsoring group set, as conditions for a rematch, that:

1. Liston be reinstated by the World Boxing Association as a top heavyweight contender. He was dropped from the rankings after an encounter with Denver police and details were released of a contract between Clay and Inter-Continental of which Liston is a stockholder.

2. Cancellation of the contract made before Clay became champion.

3. Inter-Continental, be accepted by state licensing agencies for the title fight.

WOULD BE APPROVED

Faversham said in a statement that state boxing commissioner Bob Evans told the sponsoring group that the bout probably would be approved if the group's conditions and other Kentucky laws are met.

Asked by telephone from New York about such a fight, Clay said:

"I love that . . . it'd be a big thrill—all my friends seeing me while I'm on top.

"I'd like to fight Liston again . . . I'm not gonna make a prediction now because I might change my style this time. And I'm gonna be quiet now. I don't have to talk like I used to."

Clay said he would be back from a planned trip to Africa in time to train for a September bout.

Asked what would happen if rematch plans failed, Faversham replied:

"Then we'll sit and wait for Inter-Continental to come up with a top-ranked opponent for Clay. We have a contract extending through February of 1965 to fight for Inter-Continental—but this doesn't mean Liston has to be the opponent."

PHILS GET ROEBUCK

NEW YORK (AP)—Philadelphia Phillies bought pitcher Ed Roebuck from Washington Senators Tuesday for the $20,000 waiver price. The right-handed relief man, formerly with Los Angeles Dodgers, will be used in the Phil bullpen. To make room for the 33-year-old pitcher, the Phils optioned outfielder Alex Johnson to Arkansas in the Pacific Coast League.

Too Good For Own Good

Marlies Not Yet Tested

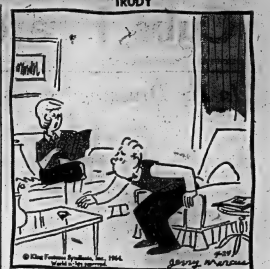
NORTH BAY (CP)—Toronto Marlboros may prove to be too strong for their own good.

They take on North Bay Trappers tonight in the third game of the Eastern Canada Memorial Cup best-of-seven semi-final series. Marlboros, who crushed the Trappers 13-3 and 11-4 in the first two games in Toronto, are overwhelming favorites to win tonight and wrap it up Friday.

In the two games, Toronto has outshot the Trappers 111-46 and outscored them 24-7. Except for brief flashes, Marlboros haven't been forced to play good hockey.

The winner of this series will meet Montreal NDG Monarchs for the Eastern Canada title with the winner to meet either Edmonton Oil Kings, the defending Memorial Cup champions, or Estevan Bruins.

Coach Jim Gregory and several key players agreed after Monday's battle that such games could lessen the chances of the Marlboros winning the cup for the first time since 1956.



Wayne Carleton, who scored 46 goals during the regular season, gave an example: "You know you're going to get a dozen goals against them so you figure what's the difference if I miss the net a couple of times on good chances."

Injuries are coach Gregory's main concern. "After a couple of games like these you start to take it easy and that's when you pick up a lot of injuries."

Doubtful starters for tonight's game are Ron Ellis, who picked up a groin injury in the opener, and Barry Watson, who limped off with a charley horse Monday after scoring two goals.

Gary Dineen, a four - goal scorer in the second game, has a university exam coming up and didn't make the trip north.

Will Inject New Blood Says Coach

OTTAWA (CP) — Coach Johnny Wilson plans to inject some young blood into his Ottawa Montagnards tonight for the fourth game of their Eastern Canada Allan Cup series against Woodstock Athletics.

Montagnards lost the first three games of the best-of-seven series by lopsided scores and must show a sharp reversal of form to stay in the running for Canadian senior hockey honors.

Wilson indicated Tuesday he'll use forward Claude Alain and defenceman Gord Hamilton, both juniors, for tonight's game. On Monday he inserted junior Pat Draper on a forward line and the last youngster came through with a goal.

Woodstock coach Ted Power says he'll stand pat.

Trans-Canada Rally

Toronto Cars Lead Pack

By STEPHEN SCOTT

WINNIPEG (CP)—The two best known Europeans suffered heavily in the cross - Canada rally Tuesday as at least four Canadians got perfect scores.

Oliver Gendebien, famed Belgian race and rally driver, missed a check point while Ann Hall of England, one of the best known European women drivers, got stuck in deep mud.

The perfect scores, plus the sealing of another because of a costly error, changed the leadership of the rally as it entered the second half of the 4,000-mile Vancouver to Montreal test of skill and endurance of drivers and cars.

Meanwhile, one of the leading Canadians, a former champion, dropped out after being involved in a traffic accident and a small snow bank gave many drivers much trouble.

Leading the six-day rally with one penalty point apiece as the cars left for Sault Ste. Marie, Ont., on the second half today were Klaus Ross and John Bird in a factory Volvo and John Merriman and Paul Manson in a Chevelle. Both cars are from Toronto.

Both had a perfect day over the relatively easy stretch between Saskatoon and Winnipeg Tuesday after acquiring their penalty points in British Columbia on the first leg of the rally that ends Friday night.

They took over the lead from Maurice Carter of Toronto and Ian Worth of Lachine, Que., who broke two days of perfect driving with five penalty points, four of them resulting from reading a watch incorrectly.

FELL TO FOURTH

Carter fell to fourth behind Wally Remington of Montreal and Les Houser of Vancouver who had four penalty points in a Valiant. They also had a perfect day.

Merriman, in a leased car, and Remington are in competition for the $1,000 over-all first prize plus the $1,000 for the first private owner.

Vaclav Bobek, Czechoslovakian national champion driving with Jim Luce of Hawkesbury, Ont., in a Skoda came up from sixth position to fifth with seven points, all acquired before Tuesday. Bobek now is the top European.

Behind the leaders came Scott Harvey and Bob Mollman of Dearborn, Mich., and Clarkland, Ohio, in a battered Valiant. Paul MacLennan and Art Dempsey of Toronto in a Falcon and Blair Bunch and Robin Edwards of Montreal in another Skoda.

NORTHERN DANCER SET

LEXINGTON, Ky. (AP)—Northern Dancer, Canada's outstanding Kentucky Derby hopeful, put the finishing touches Tuesday to his preparations for the $25,000-added Blue Grass Stakes at Keeneland. The Blue Grass, at 1⅛ miles the last distance test for the May 2 derby, will be run Thursday. Northern Dancer will go to the post Thursday as the odds-on favorite.

OUTPUT INCREASES

Despite production cut-backs, Norway's 1957 pulpwood output was 800,220 tons, compared with 1,136, and it's estimated there will be 1,900 new cases in 1958.

CANCER FATALITIES

The Canadian death toll from leukemia (in 1957 climbed to 730,000 in the peak year of 1956.

It's Daylight Saving Time Again All Across the Country - - Well Almost

By CARL MOLLINS
Canadian Press Staff Writer

The calendar's insistence that spring arrives on or about March 21 is sheer obstinacy in the face of ky evidence to the contrary year after year in most parts of Canada.

By now, Robert sometimes knows that the true signal of spring's arrival is the start of daylight time.

Everyone, that is, except Albertans, Saskatchewanians, Labradorians and Windsorites in Ontario. Edmundstonians in New Brunswick and other standard - timers, including farmers who resent getting their denims drenched with dew by performing chores an hour earlier.

Daylight time means spring for kids who use the post-supper daylight for a reprieve from bed; for adults who use longer evenings to test winter-flaccid muscles in the garden or on the golf course.

The beginning of daylight time the last weekend in April tells seven year - round standard-timers that spring is here. Chances are they will be caught up then in a perennial argument on whether to keep time with their neighbors or stand staunchly for standard.

MOST MOVE APRIL 25

This year, a Cross - Canada survey by The Canadian Press shows, most Canadians will set their clocks an hour ahead early on Sunday, April 25, and keep them that way for the middle six months of the year, recapturing the last hour of sleep Oct. 25.

Biggest blow being struck for conformity is in Manitoba, where the legislature last year ruled that the whole province would switch officially to Central Daylight Time on the last April Sunday. April 26 this year —and stay that way until the Sunday after Labor Day, Sept. 13 this year.

The law was designed to remove time-keeping chaos resulting from the old municipal-choice system, in which each community seemed to exercise its right to be telling different time than the next one.

Alberta legislators beat back a lonely Liberal move this spring to give individual communities the right to use daylight time. The Social Credit government now keeps the whole province on Mountain Standard Time the year round.

Maybe Alberta government members were looking across the Saskatchewan border when they spurned Liberal William Dickie's motion on the ground that it would introduce confusion.

SASKATCHEWAN SPLIT

There, nobody can be sure what time a neighbor thinks it is. Saskatchewan, split between the Central and Mountain time zones, has a perpetual headache trying to keep time under a municipal-choice system that becomes bewildering in the summer.

Most eastern Saskatchewan communities are on year-round Central Standard Time, most western parts of the province on MST all year, while central communities tend to switch to Mountain Daylight Time from MST in the summer.

A committee of municipal and educational officials appointed by the CCF government to study the Time Question, as the issue is known in Saskatchewan, came up with some recommendations. But one of the groups appointing members to the study committee, the school trustees, have since repudiated the recommendations.

In the face of Liberal promises during the campaign for the April 22 election to hold a provincial plebiscite on the question, the government has said it will meet with the time-study committee in June for another attempt at a solution.

As in Saskatchewan, the choice and the dates of any time change are left up to individual municipalities in Nova Scotia and New Brunswick, Quebec and Ontario.

MOST CHOOSE DAYLIGHT

But all Nova Scotia communities and all but a few in New Brunswick, Quebec and Ontario are going along with daylight time April 25 to Oct. 25.

Edmundston and other points north of Woodstock on the St. John River in New Brunswick are sticking with Atlantic Standard Time. A provincial union of municipalities recommended a uniform time pattern, but failed to agree on whether it should be uniformly AST or ADT.

Some Gaspe communities in the Atlantic time zone remain on AST the year round, thus matching minutes for the summer months with the rest of Quebec, which goes to Eastern Daylight Time from Eastern Standard.

Windsor, Ont., mindful of its hands-across - the-border role, stays on EST all summer to conform with American neighbors across the Detroit River. Port Arthur and Fort William at the Lakehead remain on EST and thus keep the same time as neighbors in Manitoba during the summer months.

Elsewhere, the province sets a standard. Prince Edward Island has proclaimed ADT and British Columbia Pacific Daylight Time to start April 26 and end Oct. 25.

Newfoundland set the dates for Newfoundland Daylight Time—half an hour later than EDT—as April 26 to Oct. 31.

Although B.C. officially designates PST for the winter and PDT for the summer, there are mavericks in the Peace River district of the northeast who choose to tell the same year-round Mountain Standard Time as their neighbors in Alberta.

OPENS THURSDAY
"DR. STRANGELOVE"

Peter Sellers and George C. Scott are starred in Stanley Kubrick's "Dr. Strangelove or: How I Learned To Stop Worrying and Love the Bomb," opening Thursday at the Park.

Also starred are Sterling Hayden, Keenan Wynn, Slim Pickens and screen newcomer Tracy Reed as "Miss Foreign Affairs."

"Dr. Strangelove or: How I Learned to Stop Worrying and Love the Bomb" has a psychotic Air Force general triggering an ingenious, foolproof and irrevocable scheme, unleashing his wing of B-52 H-Bombers to attack Russia. The President of the United States, unable to recall the aircraft, is forced to cooperate with the Soviet Premier in a bizarre attempt to save the world.

Sellers plays three roles in the film, as he did in Kubrick's earlier picture, "Lolita." This one, though, reportedly is different from anything ever before brought to the screen and Sellers' triple-threat performance is said by Hollywood to offer a trio of characterizations remarkable in both their intensity and in their comedy. The star is seen as the President of the United States, desperately trying to prevent the destruction of the world in the few brief hours between the unleashing of the bombers and the fall of the bomb itself; he appears in the title role as a German "nuclear wiseman" whose cold-blooded approach to the bomb is quieter-like in its inhumanity; and he appears as an R.A.F. Group Captain acting as liason with the U.S. Air Force.

Sellers reportedly is superb in his three roles, a triple-threat performance which is matched in intensity by the other members of the cast.

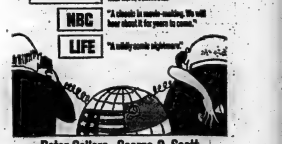
Screenplay for "Dr. Strangelove or: How I Learned to Stop Worrying and Love the Bomb" was written by Stanley Kubrick, Peter George and Terry Southern, based on the novel, "Red Alert," by Peter George.

On the same program: Three select short subjects, a color cartoon, a travelogue, "Wonderful Beaulieu" and "Gone Curling," World of Sports.



Two complete shows at 7.00 p.m. and 9.15 p.m.

Civil Rights Demonstrations May Spoil TV Fair Coverage

By CYNTHIA LOWRY

NEW YORK (AP) — This, if network television's judgment is correct, is National F—for Fair —Day.

That may be because it is the last word in fair, or because it is situated practically on the front door of the three networks' headquarters. The closer one is to things like that, the more important they seem.

But television most likely is excited because the fair is a natural for its attention. Like political conventions, Senate committee hearings and baseball games, the fair is contained in a limited space and most events are set up to stay. Cameras can be on the scene from the start.

For the last few days, however, network news departments have been acting like nervous party hostesses who are certain nobody will find the house.

The fears are the result of plans for massive civil rights demonstrations that could destroy the gala atmosphere, keep crowds away and change the plan for coverage.

None of as dismayed, perhaps, as the executives of a big company which has spent more than $1,000,000 for tonight's NBC 90-minute special to carry viewers on a tour of the attractions.

Recommended tonight:

"Opening Night at the World's Fair," NBC, 7:30-9 p.m. EST, with Henry Fonda, Carol Channing, Lorne Greene, Fred MacMurray, Marian Anderson and Cantainflas.

Quiet Day Is Planned for Shakespeare's Birthday

By BOB THOMAS

HOLLYWOOD (AP) — Thursday is William Shakespeare's 400th birthday had Peter Ustinov plans to make a quiet, sane day of it.

Ustinov will have none of the celebrations that are taking place throughout the English-speaking world.

It's not that he is anti-Shakespeare. He even defended the Bard against those who claim Shakespeare's works were penned by Francis Bacon.

"Bacon couldn't have written the plays," says Ustinov. "He was too much the gentleman, too much the educated man. Those are the chaps who become critics. It's the less educated writers who create the real works of art. They haven't the assurance to be parasites."

Ustinov was delivering some thoughts about his fellow actor-playwright while resting between scenes of John Goldfarb, Please Come Home.

"Shakespeare is England's most reliable export," he observed. "Whenever the cultural ministry is in doubt about what to send abroad, it always relies on Shakespeare. He's safe.

"I've made it my business to elude playing Shakespeare. I've done scenes on radio, but never on a stage. Stratford—the No. 1 Stratford—wanted me to play Falstaff this year, but I wasn't able to arrange it. I should like to play Lear some day. . . .

"Shakespeare is inclined to be dirty, but I resent those with dirtier minds who insist on expurgating the plays so they be read by school children. It's utter nonsense. . . ."

CAMPBELLFORD

C. H. Davidson Heads Memorial Hospital Board

CAMPBELLFORD — The Board of Campbellford Memorial Hospital held its annual meeting in the board room of the hospital on Friday evening with about 20 in attendance.

Chairman C. H. Davidson presided and expressed appreciation to administrator and staff for the competent way they had fulfilled their duties during the year. Mr. James St. Pierre, formerly of the Department of Health is the laboratory technician at the present time. Mr. Davidson also reported that an assistant dietitian may be procured on a consulting basis on May 5th. This is a further step toward complete accreditation.

The total income for 1963 was $462,678, an increase of 6.8% over the previous year. Expenses for year 1963 were $457,726, an increase of 6.21% over 1962.

As of December 31, 1963, there were 96 employees, salaries for the year, $303,430, an increase of 6.23% over 1962.

Occupancy for the medical and surgical wards for the year was 106%. The Campbellford Memorial Hospital is a 55-bed institution, but at times has had 80 patients and has had to use the corridors, while at the same time it has occurred that the maternity wing and nursery had empty beds. The total in-patients for the year was 1,626, with infant births 237, making a total of 1,900.

MAMAD WING

The board is exploring the possibility of adding a convalescent and chronic diseases wing. The necessity is partly due to Ontario Hospitalization and partly extended administration. The admission and discharge of chronic and convalescent patients is controlled on doctors' reports to the Ontario Hospital Connection. Admission and some under the control of the hospital board. It is understood from a member of the board that the present has been in Campbellford Memorial Hospital for 11 years.

Mr. Stewart Carr gave the administrator's report, the auditor's report by Mr. J. Lauer, was read by Director J. F. E. Douglas.

Mrs. J. Hackett, chief of staff, gave the report of the medical staff and expressed appreciation of the staff for fine co-operation.

Mrs. W. F. Scott, president of the Hospital Auxiliary, gave a fine report, outlining the two main projects of the year, the Christmas bazaar and the card tournament.

The directors elected for the year: C. H. Davidson, chairman; W. F. Scott, F. S. Listen, R. Locke, J. F. R. Douglass, C. H. Hunter, Mrs. J. Locke, those appointed are Mirden MacMillan, reeve of Seymour township; G. H. Fox, Campbellford municipal council; Mrs. R. E. Fox, Hospital Auxiliary; Dr. Hackett, medical staff; Mr. A. Wartman, reeve of Percy township.

Johnson Wins Battle To Stop Railway Strike

Men Will Get More Pay Firms Can Cut Jobs

WASHINGTON (AP)—A five-and-take agreement has ended the threat of a United States railway strike, with President Johnson a victor in the toughest domestic test of his administration.

A few hours after the agreement was reached, two dissident union officials threatened to strike part of the New York Central Railroad east of Buffalo.

But sources involved in the negotiations in Washington discounted the possibility that the threat would be carried out.

Johnson went before television cameras Wednesday night to announce settlement of the long, highly complex dispute a little more than 48 hours before a scheduled strike threatened to tie the U.S. economy in knots.

In effect, it gave union members financial gains in exchange for letting railways make changes in employment. Just how many jobs will be affected or how much money the railways may save won't be known for some time after the general agreement is translated into contract language.

TWO OTHERS FAILED

In herding unions and management negotiators successfully through 13 days of emergency White House talks, Johnson succeeded where two others failed.

Only labor history and achieved what two former presidents, Congress, the courts and five years of bargaining had failed to accomplish.

"This agreement prevents . . . the hope for all time—a crippling and disastrous strike in the railroad industry," Johnson said.

The agreement ended the threat of a scheduled strike at 12:01 a.m. Saturday. Johnson had estimated a strike would have made idle 7,000,000 American workers, endangered the health of millions and virtually paralysed the economy.

The unions won pay increases for railway yard workpieces, expense money for overnight layovers, maintenance of present crew sizes and three more paid holidays for hourly - paid employees.

They always gained the right to cut the number of employees now required to man self-propelled diesel locomotives and most and limited use of train crews in yard work under certain conditions.

WITHDRAW DEMANDS

Union withdrawal of demands for overtime pay for salaried employees and night pay for all classes of train crew also replaced crucial cuts for management.

The only unresolved issue was the railways' proposals to combine some divisional train runs, thus lengthening number of

CLC Given New Powers In Disputes

By ROBERT RICE

MONTREAL (CP)—The Canadian Labor Congress has been given new powers to deal with jurisdictional conflicts between unions.

The fifth constitutional convention of the 1,000,000 - member CLC agreed Wednesday to the new international dispute procedure by an overwhelming vote.

All but about 70 of the 1,600 delegates approved changes in the CLC construction to permit mediation and impartial arbitration of inter-union rivalries.

They also endorsed penalties that can be invoked against a union found guilty of attacking the membership or jurisdiction of another union. They include public censure, denial of CLC aid and services and CLC protection if attacked by another union.

The sanctions give the CLC more room in which to move in punishing an affiliate guilty of raiding — without supposing the maximum penalty of expulsion from the ranks of the central labor body.

SAYS IT'S BETTER

William Mahoney, a CLC vice - president as well as Canadian director of the United Steelworkers Union, hailed the new plan as a better way of working out disputes without "dismembering" the labor movement.

David Archer, president of the Ontario Federation of Labor, appealed to the 1,600 delegates to endorse the plan.

"We can't go on expelling affiliates from this congress because of jurisdictional disputes," he said.

In recent years, the CLC has kicked out the International Brotherhood of Teamsters, the Seafarers' International Union of Canada and the International Longshoremen's Association of Canada—shoving more than 50,000 workers outside the mainstream of organized labor in the process.

James Black, Toronto, a representative of the AFL - CIO building trades department, expressed doubt about the wisdom of the plan. He said it contained the "seeds of dissolution if not destruction of the CLC."

SEES BETTER IMAGE

J. P. Loughran, representative of the American Federation of Technical Engineers, once expelled from the CLC and later readmitted, said the internal disputes plan will help correct labor's tarnished public

5 Children, Including Wee Baby, Left Without Food for Weekend

BREHIN, Ont. (CP) — Mr. and Mrs. Carl Shearer of Thorah Township, about eight miles south of here, were placed on two-years suspended sentence Wednesday for leaving five children, including a three-week baby, alone for a weekend.

The court was told that police and officials from the Children's Aid Society visited the Shearer home last September and found the children alone. Officials said the children were in various states of undress and had no other food to eat than a basket of rotten tomatoes.

Police said the house and children were in filthy condition. Police said the mother and father, who are 28 and 32 years old respectively, were away with their other three children.

THE WEATHER

Synopsis: A high pressure system moving into Northern Ontario will bring sunshine and slightly warmer temperatures to that part of the province Friday. However a weak storm moving eastward below the lower lakes will cause cloudiness and likely a return of the raw biting easterly winds experienced earlier this week in southern Ontario.

Who Will Select Members?

OTTAWA (CP)—Who should select the members of the 10 new commissions that will cut up the 265 federal ridings and give Canada its new electoral map?

It provides that the chairman will be appointed by the province's chief justice, one member by the prime minister and one by the opposition leader. The fourth in each case will be the federal representation commissioner, Nelson Castonguay.

Stanley Knowles (NDP—Winnipeg North Centre) last week moved an amendment. It would delete appointments by the prime minister a nd opposition leader and give them to the chief justice.

Mr. Knowles argued that the interest expressed by Parliament should be to remove redistribution from politics should be carried as far as possible.

The law, redistribution of the ridings must be done every 10 years, after a census, to take population changes into account. Up to now, it has always been done by a committee of MPs. Hot political hassles have resulted.

Thus far in the debate two cabinet ministers have backed Mr. Knowles' idea. But the Conservatives have rallied a string of speakers against it.

Wednesday the amendment was defeated by Gordon Aiken (PC—Parry Sound-Muskoka) and Lambert (PC—Edmonton West) and Miss Woolliams (PC—Bow River) but supported by Miss Gregoire (Creditiste—Lapointe).

In other House business, Public Works Minister Pearson announced that the long-awaited report of the royal commission on banking and finance will be made public late Friday afternoon.

During the redistribution debate, Mr. Aiken said the House should be concerned about it and admit that redistribution is a political matter. There should be representation by area in the major parties on each of the 10 commissions.

Mr. Lambert sounded the same theme, saying it was ridiculous to suggest that the commissions could be completely free of politics. There wasn't a person in public life who was not involved in some way with politics.

Mr. Woolliams criticized another clause in the bill, although debate hadn't reached it yet. He felt the provision for a 25-per-cent tolerance limit for variations in riding populations was a step backward.

Mr. Gregoire said commission appointments in each province should be left to the leaders of the two parties that received the most votes in that province during the previous federal election.

Farris Perjury Case Ready for Jury's Action

TORONTO (CP) — Two charges of perjury against Ralph E. Farris, president of Northern Ontario Natural Gas Company Limited, will be placed in the hands of a Supreme Court jury today.

The jury will retire after hearing the address of Mr. Justice Dalton Wells.

Before adjournment Wednesday, prosecutor Harvey McCullough reviewed the evidence in support of the allegations that Farris lied under oath during judicial inquiries in 1958 - 1962.

He quoted evidence of John McGraw, president of Continental Investments Corporation of Vancouver, to prove that Farris had given him instructions with respect to 14,000 shares placed in a subscription account.

Amnesty Rejected by Turks, Would Be Admitting Guilt

NICOSIA (AP) — A Turkish-Cypriot spokesman rejected President Makarios' offer of a general amnesty and other peace proposals Wednesday, saying acceptance would be an admission of guilt.

Makarios told a press conference he wished to demonstrate "not only by words by also by deeds our good will and desire for the island's pacification." But he added:

"If the Turkish-Cypriot leadership does not show the necessary understanding, there can be no doubt that it does not wish the island's pacification, because it thinks it will be able to create partitionist conditions by the force of arms. In such a case we shall have to face the situation by all means."

The Turkish-speaking community, outnumbered four to one by the 445,000 Greek - Cypriots, has demanded partition of Cyprus to resolve the conflict. The Greek-Cypriots, many of whom want union with Greece, have rejected this demand.

Defence Minister Osman Orek termed Makarios' proposals propaganda and said: "One does not admit proposals like these in the form of a press conference, which, is how we got to hear of them.

"To accept his offer of an amnesty would amount to an admission of guilt," Orek declared. "The Turks only fought to defend life and property from attacks and are not guilty of any acts as suggested by Makarios."

It was the first time Makarios had offered a general amnesty to the Turkish-Cypriot minority since the communal dispute erupted in street fighting last December.

The Greek-Cypriot leader also repeated his offer to dismantle all Greek fortifications on the war-torn island if the Turks follow suit and to help resettle the Turkish villagers forced out of their homes by the violence. He promised protection for their lives and property.

Tanganyika and Zanzibar Will Unite in New Nation

CP from AP-Reuters

DAR ES SALAAM—The presidents of Tanganyika and the neighboring island of Zanzibar have agreed to merge their countries to form a new nation, the government of Tanganyika announced today.

Diplomatic sources in London said they thought the merger would diminish Communist influence in East Africa. But they added it could open the door to more Red penetration via Zanzibar.

The British Commonwealth office in London said the merger presumably would take some time to complete.

Informed sources in Dar es Salaam, the capital of Tanganyika, said the new nation would run, from here.

The presidents of Tanganyika and Zanzibar have signed "articles of union" under which the two states would become "one sovereign state," it was announced.

President Julius Nyerere of Tanganyika paid a visit to Zanzibar Wednesday and met President Abeid Karume and other ministers.

The union of Tanganyika and Zanzibar is one of the strangest political marriages to result from the wage of independence that has swept over Africa.

Although both Tanganyika and Zanzibar are former British territories and members of the Commonwealth, Nyere is considered one of Africa's more moderate leaders while the revolutionists who took over Zanzibar in December proclaimed a people's republic and have followed a marked anti-Western, pro-Communist line in public pronouncements.

The merger unites one of East Africa's larger nations and its smallest. Tanganyika has an area of 361,800 square miles, larger than France and Germany combined, and a population of about 9,000,000. Zanzibar and its smaller dependent island of Pemba have an area of 1,020 square miles and about 300,000 people.

New Dept. Set Up

TORONTO (CP)—A proposed provincial department of university affairs will go in no way interfere with traditional areas of academic freedom possessed by universities, Premier Robarts said Wednesday.

He gave the universities this assurance as he introduced a bill to set up the department and other legislation to establish a corporation to make construction loans to universities.

Mr. Robarts said the new department will be headed by a cabinet minister, who will be named later. However, it was expected that the portfolio will be assumed initially by Education Minister Davis.

J. R. McCarthy, secretary to the government's advisory committee on university affairs, will be appointed deputy minister, with the appointment yet to be announced.

The proposal for the new department was made in the speech from the throne in January and the premier said there has been a favorable response to it since then.

ORGANIZATION NEEDED

He said it had become evident that a full-time organization was needed to deal adequately with the complex problems of higher education on a continuing basis.

The new department will administer all provincial grants and subsidies to universities and maintain a constant scrutiny of the grants system, procedures and administrative methods, the premier said.

It will work in close co-operation with the Universities Capital Aid Corporation—the body proposed in the other measure introduced Wednesday. All submissions for capital assistance will be made to the new department and on the recommendation of the minister the corporation will purchase debentures in the amount approved for each project.

The premier also said the new department will administer all major programs of government aid to students, insuring such programs are fully co-ordinated.

Premier Robarts also said the

Bring To End 20 Years Of CCF Govt. In Province

6 Weeks Before Victors Known in Many Seats

REGINA (CP) — The Liberal party won the Saskatchewan election Wednesday on the basis of the election-night count, bringing to an end 20 years of CCF government—the only socialist administration in North America.

While the Liberal's narrow margin looked safe on initial returns, both Liberal Leader Ross Thatcher and Premier Woodrow Lloyd said it will be up to six weeks before a victor is known with certainty.

Some recounts are possible and margins are paper-thin. And an estimated 25,000 declared and advance ballots won't be counted until May 13, the date when all results must be filed officially.

Final standing based on election-night tabulation and later counts Thursday:

Liberal	32	17
CCF	25	38
PC	1	—
Doubtful	1	—
Totals	59	55

Late Wednesday night, Liberals had 33 and CCF 22. The CCF picked up two seats on the completion of counting in the multiple - member Saskatoon constituency Thursday, and the Liberals got one.

However, the Liberal gain was wiped out by a new tabulation in Regina, which showed CCF candidate Walter Smishek elected in place of Western Football conference referee Paul Dojack, Liberal. An unofficial count Wednesday night showed Dojack had won.

The CCF held 34 seats and the Liberals had 21 when the legislature was dissolved five weeks ago. Redistribution increased the size of the house by four members to 59.

HAVE NARROW MARGINS

Four Liberals and four CCF members were elected with margins under 100 votes. In this category for the Liberals were Gross, Hanley, Last Mountain, Nipawin; for the CCF Kelsey, Pelly, Turtleford and Watrous.

The Liberal party has now served this big grain-growing province for a total of 24 years since Saskatchewan was established in 1905, the last time it

Rain, Cold And Fog At Fair

By RAY KOHN

NEW YORK (AP)—The New York World's Fair bloomed in almost all its heralded splendor, but three little words — rain, cold, fog—put a decided damper on its opening Wednesday.

Civil rights demonstrations, and a threatened highway traffic tieup which never came off, apparently contributed toward holding official attendance to 92,646. At least 250,000 visitors had been expected. But it was the weather which put a damper on things.

President Johnson, for all the rain's theme of "peace through understanding," said that "peace is not only possible in our generation, but I predict it is coming much nearer."

The United States, the president added, would soon be a nation "in which no man is handicapped by the color of his skin or the nature of his belief."

JOHNSON CUT TAPE

President Johnson also cut the tape, and spoke, at the federal pavilion before flying back to Washington. As pilot Lyndon Baines Johnson chanted and shouted and some youths waved placards. Johnson said: "We do not try to cover up our failures; we freely admit them and bend our energies to toil to meet them."

The fair opened on schedule at 9 a.m. and soon thereafter came the big parade. Months in planning, the 45-minute procession was colorful, commercial, international patriotic, musical —and soggy.

But the 8,000 marchers greatly outnumbered the onlook-

Teen-agers Storm Maple Leaf Gardens for Tickets for Beatles

TORONTO (CP)—The battle of the Beatlemaniacs was shortlived but sharp Wednesday as 2,000 persons, mainly teenagers, stormed Maple Leaf Gardens for tickets for a Labor Day performance by the British rock singing group.

The demand was so great that Gardens officials started selling tickets for a second performance as yet not even scheduled.

So great was the crush for the limit of four tickets each that it took four city policemen and two Gardens guards to open the doors to let in the seething mass of teen-age humanity.

Stafford Smythe, Gardens president, said after an estimated 9,000 tickets were cleared that he is considering going to England to talk with the group headed singing quartet to try to negotiate for two other performances.

But in New York, a spokesman for General Artists Corporation, the group's agent, said it would be impossible for them to stay over a second day in Toronto and that they had a strict one-show-a-night policy.

"But," he said, "we're doing our best to get them to change it."

Officials of the Gardens said that of the 14,500 tickets printed for the Labor Day show, 7,000 were sent to ticket agencies and then two radio stations received 500 each, leaving 6,500 for public sale.

The tickets for the scheduled show went on sale in just one hour and 15 minutes, but when the wickets closed there still were lines of prospective buyers, mainly students skipping school for the chance to see their musical idols, for several blocks in two directions.

Scattered among the estimated 2,000 disappointed areas before sales opened were a few parents, looking after their children's interest.

And, at the head of the line after a 72-hour wait was 18-year-old Robin Warner.

Bleary - eyed and shivering after a night of brisk winds, thunder, lightning and pelting rain she observed, "I'm first and I'm proud of it."

Six girls and one boy were reported to have fainted in the crush at the ticket wickets area the Gardens doors opened, but police said most of the youngsters behaved well.

Police took pity on those among the 650 who were out in the overnight rain. They gave those who wished them numbered tickets and guaranteed them the same place in line when they returned.

St. Kitts Couple Say OSD Medical Care Not Adequate

ST. CATHARINES (CP)—A St. Catharines couple have withdrawn two of their children from the Ontario School for the Deaf at Belleville, charging the government - operated institution provides inadequate medical care facilities.

Mr. and Mrs. Gordon Fisher said Wednesday they want a government investigation of the school's medical services as a result of incidents in which their sons, Bruce, 8, and David, 4, developed serious illnesses after being released from the school's infirmary.

David has since been transferred to a similar school in Milton, but the Fishers said Bruce and his 11-year-old sister Marilyn have been taken home from the Belleville school and will not be returned until they receive assurances that improvements will be made.

In Toronto, a spokesman for the special education services branch of the department of education said Wednesday students at schools for the deaf "receive far more medical care than they might get at comparable institutions."

DOCTOR ON CALL

A doctor is on call and visits the Belleville school daily, said the spokesman, who declined to be identified. "If he is out of town or busy with other patients, he provides a standby so that we are never without a doctor."

He said there were two nurses on duty who, with the doctors, decide whether a patient requires treatment at a fully-equipped hospital.

"I am confident that we provide good medical services at all times," he added.

Mr. Fisher, a shipping room employee at a local pulp and paper firm, said he had made complaints first to the school then to the department of education. He also wrote to Robert Nixon, member of the legislature for Brantford.

"We would like the members of the legislature to decide for themselves whether this is a legitimate complaint," Mr. Fisher said.

In Belleville Mr. J. G. Dennes, superintendent at the Ontario School for the Deaf had "no comment" regarding the complaint of the St. Catharines couple.

"Our Department is fully aware of the situation and any comment should come from Department officials," he said.

Dog Is Dead Second Time, Now for Keeps

Mimi is dead . . . again. The little mongrel dog, pet of John Skirbick, Jamie and Tania Barlow of Belleville, died last week of cancer.

The fact that she died, it was different. Mimi was an experimental puppy at the Banting Institute of the University of Toronto. She was killed during experiments that have helped preserve the lives of thousands of humans. It was in one of the first experiments with a technique of slowing mortal functions by lowering the body temperature. Mimi's body was cooled to about 80 degrees fahrenheit during one experiment, her heart was stopped and for 55 minutes she was technically dead. This was about ten years ago.

For the past five years, the same technique has been used for countless operations in major heart-surgery centres. Patients are cooled to about 80 degrees fahrenheit, their vital organs other vital processes are taken over by machines, and the heart is stopped for surgery. As was Mimi, the human patients are revived by an electronic "heart, pacer" which restarts the heart and controls its beat until the brain is revived enough to take over.

Mimi was paralyzed when she emerged from the operation, and one of the research team took her home as a pet. Five years ago when the researcher was going to England and unable to take Mimi with him, he passed the dog on to Dr. John Barlow, of the Entomological Research Institute in Belleville. Mimi, by that time, was well trained and healthy. She quickly lived the rest of her life as the Barlow family pet.

There were 4,801 large regular cheese offered, 8,894 square cheese and 3,264 special.

First price for large regular cheese brought from 33½ to 33 9/16th cents with first grade square cheese quoted at the same 8-4ths, although these are subject to a premium in addition.

Convicted of Cattle Theft And Placed On Probation

A young Shannonville farmer who denied a series of events leading to his arrest for rustling, yesterday was convicted of cattle theft and placed on two years probation.

John McIvin Maracle called Hartley on his own behalf denied taking a Hereford steer, pasture near Shannonville and was convicted of the charge of selling them at a Newburgh barn auction.

Earlier the prosecution's key witness, 20-year-old William Kenneth John, also on a two-year suspended sentence for the same offence, claimed he, Maracle and a third man named Vernon Hill had taken the cattle in Maracle's truck early last November.

Sales barn clerk Thomas Gordon, in turn identified Maracle and John as two of a trio that turned up at Newburgh with two Holstein cattle for sale.

Called to the stand by his lawyer, Douglas Boyle, Maracle vehemently denied the allegations. He claimed on November 4 he drove a bull and a calf to the barn from cows owned by a Ward Maracle of Shannonville, was sold privately to a man he called Keith Maracle.

He also said he cashed a cheque for $180 for the sale.

Pressed by acting crown attorney Tom Lally to produce Keith Maracle, the accused said he did not know his whereabouts.

CATTLE TRACED

"Is it possible Keith Maracle doesn't exist?" suggested Mr. Lally.

"It's possible — if he was using a different name."

"You wouldn't be Keith Maracle, would you?

"I don't think so — I can't be John Maracle and Keith Maracle too."

"Well, if you were using a different name you could be," challenged Mr. Lally.

Mr. Lally then requested the accused for a specimen of his handwriting. Informing magistrate Phillip Baker: "There's some suggestion that Keith Maracle and John Maracle are one and the same person."

Yet a third Maracle — this one Ward, the alleged owner of the controversial calf — figured in the case before the magistrate wrote off the whole affair with a conviction.

Mr. Boyle asked that Ward Maracle be summoned to testify for the defence. However, after the man had been called in the court corridors there was no response. The case continued without his testimony.

The accused Maracle also was questioned about the whereabouts of Vernon Hill, but was unable to furnish any clues.

DENIES ALLEGATION

The officer was questioned about an allegation made earlier by William John that he had been promised a light sentence if he co-operated.

Constable McAllister said he gave the youth no such intimation.

"Did anyone?" asked Mr. Boyle.

"I believe it was intimated that as a first offence in all probability he would get a suspended sentence but that we would not interfere on his behalf."

"Did you indicate to him that this would result from his cooperation?

"No I didn't. The day he appeared in magistrate's court I didn't know until that day that he was going to plead guilty."

After the case had been disposed, the officer obtained a second statement from John, in which certain names were mentioned. In his first statement to police John had made implicate anyone but himself.

Restitution amounting to $231 was ordered apportioned by the magistrate among all those involved in the offence. Costs totalling $125 were levied against Maracle as the magistrate ordered him to report monthly to probation authorities.

He also stipulated Maracle was to stay away from persons of known criminal record — "this particularly being Billy John, no matter what you might say to him."

Remedial Reading Specialist Needed in City Says Speaker

The plight of the retarded reader in our society was recently enunciated by Sydney C. Rose, optometrist, in a talk to the Quinte Branch, International Reading Association, given at the spring meeting held at the Corby Public Library. The speaker expressed himself as being appalled at the unbroken stream of retarded readers which continues to pour from our elementary schools. Although acknowledging the administrative and economic difficulties involved, he said that the solution to the problem lies in the hands of educators, and suggested that a city this size could use a remedial reading specialist.

Early detection and remedial measures applied in the elementary schools is necessary, since very little can be done about it at a later date. Among other things, the speaker said, lies can lead to serious personality problems, extending into adult life. The speaker also speculated, in this regard, on a possible connection between poor reading and delinquency. He quoted several American sociological surveys made of children taken into Juvenile Courts in which extraordinarily high percentages of reading disabilities were found.

The factors contributing to retarded reading are not clearly understood, and so many causes have been suggested that the only factor common to all children with a reading disability is that they all have an inability to read easily and with understanding. Among the several contributory causes discussed were poor eyesight, physiological handicaps, hearing defects, speech and language defects, lack of native ability, emotional and personal problems, sex differences, visual difficulties, poor teaching and pressuring to learn reading before the child is mature enough for this task.

Dr. Rose indicated that a large percentage of reading failures resulted from this last-mentioned cause, and suggested that simply putting off the beginning of a formal reading program for a year or two, in many cases, would prevent a large number of failures. He also stated that many visual difficulties of a refractive nature which appear later in life could be prevented by proper eye examinations. Some children, he stated, are exceptional and suffer no apparent harm, however, picking up the necessary reading skills with ease.

Visual testing in the schools was inadequate, the speaker stated, since it involves investigation at a distance, whereas reading is a near-point task. Many children who are easily able to pass any distance visual testing suffer from near-point visual deficiences. In this he would look forward to a thorough near-point visual examination being made a prerequisite to entering Grade 1 and the beginning of a formal reading program.

DENIED HERITAGE

The student without reasonable reading facility in this area finds himself at a severe disadvantage. Not only is he barred from advanced education, thus curtailing the development of his personality and contribution to society, but he is also denied the ability of availing himself of many recreational outlets. With the world of knowledge contained in books, magazines and newspapers closed firmly by the gates of reading disability, the student and the adult is an incomplete member of the modern community.

Diagnostic testing of the retarded reader in an ideal form requires the combined efforts of a whole team of professional workers, including a reading specialist, an optometrist, the family physician, school personnel, parents, and sometimes psychiatric social workers. Much can be done in the case of retarded reading ability, ranging from class-room supervision in the milder cases, to special classes or attendance at reading clinics in the more severely handicapped.

Dr. Rose's thought-provoking talk was followed by an informal discussion period. The speaker was thanked by Mrs. Dorothy Blakeley, and the meeting was chaired by Mr. Arthur Bradford. Miss Olive Delaney supervised the serving of refreshments.

Druggists Hold Spring Meeting At Shrine Club

"You are professionals men and are entrusted with many things by the public," Percy Moisely, Registrar of the Ontario College of Pharmacy told members of the Quinte Pharmacists Association at their spring meeting at the Shrine Club on Wednesday evening. It was the largest gathering of druggists that has been on hand in some time and they received a lot of valuable information from officials and inspectors of the college.

Don Rupert of Madoc, presided at the delicious roast beef dinner that yes provided by Mr. and Mrs. Len Martin, in charge of the club.

There was a moment of silence for Charles R. Johnson of Madoc, who died since the fall meeting. Bruce Latimer introduced the head table guests and Jimmy Corradi provided incidental music during the meeting and also took home the door prize.

Don Spring, of Canadian Kodak and Ken Richardson, Richardson and Roy Graydon, discussed the advantages of the Instamatic Kodak, recently put on the market and also showed films on how to sell the camera.

Prizes were awarded for one of these new cameras and Ray Mc Lean of Campbellford, was the winner.

Harold Seldon, representative on the Ontario Board from District 2, reported to the meeting and requested that any problems that druggists might have be sent along and they would be given every consideration from Government officials. A inspector for the college, also reported, and Pete Farley, Director of Canadian Services, explained the apprentice system to the members.

MUST WORK TOGETHER

Mr. Moisely told the assembly they must work together and be a strong body to cope with the ever changing difficult times but that the independent druggist has a big future, particularly a prescription counter is the basis of all pharmacies," said the speaker, "but the druggist must have a front store to exist.

He stated that the drug store must be a health centre and that the druggist should meet as many of his customers as possible and project his image to the public. He also showed that the druggist is the custodian of drugs and poisons and extreme care should be taken at all times.

The speakers of the evening were introduced by Wes Simmons of Trenton, and Gordon Johnson, the youngest druggist present, presented the speakers with a product of the Quinte area.

It was a well conducted and enjoyable meeting for the druggists of the district, who only get to meet each other socially twice a year.

No Progress Made at Meet

N. Whitney Wants Parkway Extended Across County

The proposed "Quinte Parkway" along No. 33 Highway from Collins Bay to Adolphustown should be extended throughout Prince Edward County to Trenton.

This is the feeling of Norris Whitney, M.P.P. for Prince Edward Lennox, who in a recent address to the Ontario Legislature said a better name for the proposed parkway would be "Quinte Seaway."

There has been mixed reception to the parkway idea proposed last year by the Quinte Parkway Association. The proposal calls for preserving the historical aspects of the Quinte area between Collins Bay and Adolphustown. Which was predominantly settled by United Empire Loyalists.

Mr. Whitney says the parkway should apply all the way from Kingston to Trenton, through both Lennox and Addington and Prince Edward counties, and should be advertised as a scenic route and tourist attraction at both ends.

At the same time he feels that there should be more facilities at the Adolphustown Park to attract more visitors.

Mr. Whitney said attendance at Adolphustown Park last year was down by 16,000, despite the fact that over 7,000 more people drove by the park and used the Glenora Ferry.

"We are grateful for the park but feel it really has not attained the potential which it should.

"I am sure that with a little effort and a little thought the commission will make it pay. It is one of the very best parks in the St. Lawrence Parks Development system."

BCI Concert Band Presents Annual 'Spring Musicale'

By EUGENE LANG

The B.C.I.V.S. Concert Band of approximately forty players presented their annual "Spring Musicale" on the collegiate auditorium last evening before an audience of band music fans plus the relatives and friends of many of the musicians and singers. Under the capable direction of Clifford Harper the youthful players gave a program of varied and interesting musical content ranging from the baroque style of Frescobaldi in the current Broadway melodies of the present.

The band members demonstrated their abilities both individually and collectively in the various selections with results that came off remarkably well, showing the result of many hours of practice under the guiding hand of Mr. Templer.

The members backed with accentuated rhythms fared better than those that didn't have a decided "beat," this the popular items were given a more unified presentation. The Frescobaldi Toccata (that hold itself together as well as it might. The "Little Brown Jug" variations gave the various soloists and sections ample opportunity to display their proficiency, and this they did commendably. Performance on the part of the brass overshadowed the winds many times, thus it wasn't till on in to the second half of the program that the clarinets and oboes really could be heard—the Yoder and Anderson numbers were the two examples where these instruments at last could be made out.

Soloists David Perreault (the piston horn), Hazel Locklin (French horn) and Gary Chaplin (trumpet) all did very well in their respective offerings, despite nervousness. Mr. Templer accompanied each soloist on the piano. Messrs. Lewis Lambert and Harry Rose supplied fine background as musical fill-ins for members not available to play last evening.

Flanked Wanda Reid, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Norman Reid was the guest artist for the evening, playing four works from the 19th and 20th century keyboard repertoire. Her stanism was marked by poetic feeling in the Chopin, romantic flair in the Brahms, rhythmic polarity and delicacy in [illegible] powerful sonorities and fervor in the Dohnanyi. Fine readings were given each opus with subtle shadings balanced by colorful interpretations. Only in the last page of the Brahms Rhapsodie was there an argument for projection open.

Miss Reid and Mr. Templer were presented with gifts from the members of the band at the conclusion of this enjoyable "Spring Musicale."

Had More Pickerel Than Law Allowed

Marvel Galvaston Bernhart was fined $15 and costs for taking more pickerel than allowed under an Indian Act licence.

RCMP constable George Lilley said he stopped Bernhart at Deseronto airport with eight five-pound pickerel - - and a licence to catch only four.

At the time, pickerel was selling at 30 cents a pound, added the constable.

No Legal Aid Yet Secured For Youth

A Deseronto man, jailed on a truck theft charge, today said he had applied for legal aid 11 days ago, but thus far has not seen a lawyer.

"I applied for it a week ago last Monday — and so far I haven't heard anything yet," Nelson Edgar Wood told Magistrate T. Y. Wills.

The magistrate remanded him to next Tuesday, while stating some effort should be made to secure a lawyer for the accused.

"Between now and Tuesday we will see that at least you get so: e advice," Magistrate Wills promised.

'Mike' Weichel Presents Own Trophy to Juvenile 'A' Champs, Talks to Veterans

TRENTON — A man, who is so highly thought of in amateur sports' circles that he will be named the "Most Valuable" in Ontario hockey, a gold hockey stick, Saturday night . . . so concerned with veterans, that he has not missed an Armistice Day service since World War 1 . . . so popular in federal politics that even high ranking members of the Opposition party have been heard to say they 'would vote for him against all comers . . . W.O. "Mike" Welchel" . . . was the guest speaker at last night's Trenton Legion Branch 110 Vimy-VE banquet in the Legion hall.

Mr. Welchel was introduced to the veterans and high ranking officials at the banquet by Bill Long and Harry Lock. Knack, who gave a partial biography of his "comrade."

Holder of the Distinguished Service Medal and the Coronation Medal, which he received at the hands of Monarch herself, Mike Welchel served with the 18th Battalion and the First Canadians. He was also wounded and forced to have his right leg amputated, thus ending his football dreams of becoming a hockey star. This, however, didn't dampen the indomitable Mike's interest in amateur sports. He went on to serve as the president of the Ontario Junior Hockey Association, an executive member of the Ontario Hockey Association and honorary president of the Toronto Hockey League.

A member of the federal government's veterans' affairs committee for the past six years, Mike donated his $8,000 increase in salary as MP for Waterloo North to buy wheelchairs at the Kitchener Legion Branch. He received the Royal Canadian Legion Medal of Merit from Dominion Command for outstanding services to the Legion.

Always interested in youth, Mike is one of the originals of the physical fitness program for Canada.

FINE MUSICIAN

As a musician of no mean ability, Mike had his own concert group and won a gold medal as the best Ontario tenor.

In the midst of his overfull life, Mike is in great demand as guest speaker at sportsmen's banquets, Legion banquets and other affairs and he proved his worth to the Trenton and area veterans last night. In a rapid fire address, consulting his notes only briefly, Mike covered the field of veteran's interests and touched on amateur sports for the benefit of the special guests at the banquet, the members of the Trenton Legion Juvenile "A" Ontario champs.

He relived the Battle of Vimy Ridge for the 12 Vimy Vets present, referring to the capture of the ridge by Canadian troops as "the most perfectly worked out operation of World War 1," when even the elements seemed to favor the Canadians, as a snow storm raged throughout the famous battle on April 9, Easter Monday, 1917.

To all veterans and serving members of Canadian forces at the banquet, he had this to say: "We should all foster the observance of Remembrance Day and work to draw the significance of the day to the attention of the public. Gratitude to the men who died to preserve our freedoms should compel us never to forget. We should be concerned with those who have been left, scarred in mind and body."

Mr. Welchel said he had no reminiscences with those who would do away with Remembrance Day. It should be made a national holiday, he said, and the significance of the day explained to the children who were too young to remember any war.

"No one can speak so eloquently for peace as those who have fought in war." he told his comrades, "including the sins of the world, the worst is the sin of forgetfullness. The Legion, which has gained so many benefits for veterans through insistent demands on the government, should continue this program."

CHAMPIONS PRAISED

Mike Welchel had a special word of praise for the Juvenile "A" team, whose members were introduced to the guests at the banquet by team manager, Jack Bonn. He said, in presenting the Welchel Trophy to the team captain Terry McCosh, that this was the first time since donating the trophy in 1952, he had had the pleasure of presenting it to the winning Ontario team. The team was judged by the ball and received a standing ovation from the sponsoring Legion Branch.

A highlight of the banquet itself was when the guests rose to a man and sang "Happy Birthday" to the RCAF, at the suggestion of Mayor James MacDonald, honoring the three RCAF officers present and marking the 50th birthday this month of the force.

Represented at the head table were the Legion branch, service clubs, the Hastings and Prince Edward Regiment, No. 6 Repair Depot, RCAF Station Trenton and the Trenton Sea Cadet Corps.

Special guests were the branch padre, Rev. J. A. Payton, Miss Hazel Farley, a life member of the Legion branch .

Old Families Are Honored

TRENTON — Four old-time Trenton families have been honored by having streets in the North Byron land assembly area named for them. Mayor James MacDonald said today. So honored are the Bleecker, Cory, Ireland and Graham families.

John Bleecker, one of Trenton's two original settlers in 1790, is the founder in the company of John Smith from New York State, following the American Revolution.

The late William Ireland was Conservative Whip for the Legislature for many years, charter chairman of the Trenton Memorial Hospital Board and a mayor of the town. Bruce and Bill Ireland of Ireland's Drugs are sons. General Howard Graham, the president of the Toronto Stock Exchange and Councillor C. V. Graham are two distinguished members of the Graham family.

OFFICES BUSY

Two Trenton brokerage offices, Barclay and Crawford, Inc., and Bryans and Co. Ltd., report an upswing in business over the past week, in keeping with offices across the country, on the heels of the announcement of the base rewards find in the Timmins area.

Business was "brisk to frenzied," up to Wednesday morning, falling off slightly until noon and resuming the pace Wednesday afternoon.

March Busiest Month for VON Since June '62

TRENTON — The Victorian Order of Nurses' staff, forced to vacate the offices in the downtown CNR station because the building has been sold, has found other accommodation and will open an office on the second floor of the new Ireland building, next door to the bus terminal, next month. It is understood that the Ireland brothers, Bill and Bruce, have made a very satisfactory adjustment to the rent, and while this won't be quite as low as the CNR station rent, ($5 a month for the past few years), the members of the local VON branch feel that it can be handled.

Meanwhile, the branch members have been dispatched by town council, as their request for an additional grant of $600 to cover the cost of higher rental, was halved by council in its yearly estimate, brought down last week.

At a meeting on Tuesday night, Miss Anne Stewart, VON nurse in charge, reported that March had been the busiest month for home visits the staff had had since June, 1962. In all, 176 visits were made: 87 were for nursing care, 14 were made to Frankford, 11 to Batawa, six to Middleton Park. Three quarters of the adults visited were old age pensioners, Miss Stewart said.

Three members of the local branch attended the Ontario VON convention in Toronto last weekend. Reports of the convention by George Greer, Trenton president; Ralph Weaver and Miss Stewart will be given at next month's meeting.

Branch members are now planning for the annual VON tea in the Legion Hall, April 29, of which Mrs. Vere LaGrois is convener, and VON tag days, June fifth and six. Many offers of donations for baking, milk, door prizes etc. for the tea have been made by Trenton merchants.

Tax Bills Late

TRENTON — Now that the mill rate has been announced, tax collector Alan Weaver and his staff are starting to mail out tax bills. Because of the delay in the mill rate announcement this year, the first installment of taxes won't be due until May 25. The ratepayers will have an extra ten days' grace this year, as the bills generally go out earlier and first installments are generally due May 15.

Cancer Society Drive Staged

TRENTON — The Cancer Society's drive for funds is well under way in this area. This year's objective for the Trenton area is $6,500.

To date, only the results of the drive in Middleton Park have been announced. More than $250 was raised in the park, and this compares favorably with last year's results.

Industries are being canvassed by Trenton businessmen O. M. Newton and Paul Bailey.

Army Personnel Leaves Station For Nicosia

The plane, which left at 9.15 a.m. was expected to spend 18 hours in the air with only a brief stop at Marville, France to change aircrews.

The aircraft will bring to L-088 the number of Canadian troops in Cyprus.

Intermarriage Forced

According to "Indian and Foreign Review," an official Indian Government publication, the above statement was made early this month by Prof. Bobodjan Gafurov, head of the Institute of Asian Peoples in Moscow.

"Indian and Foreign Review" quotes this, and an article by Mikhail Susiow, member of the U.S.S.R. Council of Ministers, with approval, because both articles are attacking China's territorial expansionist tendencies, the effects of which have already led to border strife with India and to border incidents with Soviet Russia.

Prof. Gafurov, though, seems to be drawing a long bow when he compares Chinese racism with that of the Nazis. In endeavors to substantiate his view as follows: "In Inner Mongolia the Chinese are practising the policy of forced assimilation; they are obliging the Chinese to marry Mongolian women, and the Mongols to marry Chinese women. They want to wipe out the Mongol race in this way. In Sinkiang, the non-Chinese population is fleeing from persecution and seeking refuge in the Soviet Union where they arrive starving and stripped of all their belongings."

Any similarity between this policy and the Nazi attitude towards the Jews, or for that manner towards the Poles or other peoples who came under their control, would be difficult to discover.

That must not be misinterpreted as a defence of the Chinese policy. This is miscegenation by compulsion, a process which, while it may eventually assume troublesome political problems, shows a ruthless disregard for the rights of the individual. The individual, though, seems to get scant attention from governments at opposite ends of the political scale. In China, if Prof. Gafurov is correct, people of different races are forced to marry each other; in South Africa, which is as close to a rightist totalitarian state as one will find in the world today, and in some of the southern states of the supposedly free world, races between Negroes and whites are prohibited by law. And, just to prove that ideologies do not always determine attitudes on racial questions, countries with such differing political climates as Canada and Russia are numbered amongst those where the state does not interfere with intermarriage, although social attitudes may exert some pressures.

Paradoxically enough, an old Canadian song of a few decades ago may have had the final answer to the world's racial problems—"and to morrow's children," it went, "will be a high yellow."

All of them.

It seems a pity—not that people of mixed race are not frequently strikingly beautiful, but a world in which all people are a light tan will lose something—just as it would if all chickens were White Leghorns, all cows Herefords or all birds red-wing blackbirds.

Provincial Bill of Rights

Premier John Robarts has hinted that his government may ask the Legislature to pass an Ontario bill of rights.

This would be an excellent idea.

It has been said, with considerable justification, that the bill of rights passed by the Diefenbaker Government early in its tenure of office is not worth the paper it is written on. What makes criticism of the federal bill of rights fundamentally sound is the fact that constitutional barriers prevent its application to matters which come under provincial jurisdiction. For instance, the federal bill of rights, if it had then been in existence, would have been unable to prevent the imposition of the infamous Duplessis "padlock law" in Quebec.

If Premier Robarts introduces a bill comparable to the federal bill of rights but governing those matters which come under provincial jurisdiction, the obvious loopholes in the federal law will have been plugged.

This is not to say that the result will be as satisfactory as would have been the case were it possible to make the federal law applicable in areas of provincial jurisdiction. Such an extension would have effectively blocked provincial legislatures from unwarranted infringements of civil rights. The big flaw with both the federal law and any proposed provincial bill of rights is that these laws cover only the acts of the bodies which passed them and that the bodies which passed them can annul them. Still, such laws are of some value. Any move to repeal them would serve as a formal warning that an infringement of existing civil rights was planned.

20 YEARS AGO

APRIL 22, 1944

The April meeting of BCIVS Home and School Association was held in the school library on Monday. A business session devoted to necessary business preceded the main event of the program, a speech by Mr. Malcolm Robb, Q.C., on "Citizenship."

"The concept of citizenship," according to Mr. Robb, "has changed over the course of the past century and even over the past twenty years. A hundred years ago, the duties of citizenship involved, primarily, survival against the elements. Now, they are concerned chiefly with avoidance of war. We do not wish war, but in the practise of good citizenship, it is not sufficient to merely think wishfully; we must do something about it.

"It was pointed out that China, S.E. Asia, France, Italy and other countries in like position are paying for our despising. Communism seems the only system offering them any tangible relief. We in Canada and the United States are not being realistic about the problem. From the end of World War II it was realized that communism would supplant fascism and that Russia intent on conquering the world for communism.

"Since no vigorous, prosperous country ever succumbs to communism, the answer to the problem of combatting the communist threat is clear. We must raise the standard of living in those countries which might fall into Russia's ambit. To accomplish this we must trade with them; we must sell them our huge exportable surplus and in return purchase their goods. This cannot be brought about unless we remove our tariff barriers whether they be five per cent or 95 per cent."

Ottawa Offbeat
Commission Scores Victory, It Unifies Opposition

By RICHARD JACKSON
From The Intelligencer's Ottawa Bureau

OTTAWA — It has taken the unlikely instrument of the Royal Commission on Bilingualism and Biculturalism to do what many people were beginning to suppose was the politically impossible.

The four Opposition parties weren't truly united all the way down the line, and they didn't let their unusual political team-spirit carry them away to the reckless point of backing up their common opinion with their votes.

But at least they stood together — Conservatives, New Democrats, Social Creditors and Creditistes — in their acid criticism of the Royal Commission and it bicultural carryings-on.

True, they criticized for different reasons.

The Conservatives, New Democrats and Socreds tore strips off the Royal Commission, as a gaggle of trouble-making busybodies stirring up far too much controversial dust.

The Creditistes have taken pot shots at them because in Real Cassette's nationalist book, they are pussy-footing boondoggers not doing enough to help themselves to a province.

But whatever they are, the Royal Commissioners have at least one thing proved it was possible for the Opposition to close ranks.

THE FINANCIAL SCORE

And for this splintered Opposition, perhaps no different ways, to unite on anything is progress indeed.

For up to now, on almost every issue — the Budget defence, Cyprus, the various committee investigations and just about any other question you'd care to bring up — they largely have split themselves in other sort of ways.

First in their attitudes and arguments, then in their votes.

But united they stand on the "B and B Commission" in their distaste and even suspicion of it.

Eight of the 10 Commissioners have been chosen on racial or educational backgrounds, an interesting balance in a Royal Commission, a training agency assigned to adjudicating what is known as the English-French dualism.

But the stanting, weighting, loading, rigging or whatever you might wish to call it, of the Commission, is getting to be a

What's now is the cost — in its first 16 months of operation the "B and B Story" are going to cost just a bit under a million and a half dollars, or, to be precise as the Finance Department's Estimates calculate it, $1,463,450.

The 10 Commissioners, all drawing $100 a day plus expenses for every "working day" — and they have to be sitting, listening, at their public hearings, to be gainfully employed — have assigned work — picked up a collective $47,000 in their first four months.

Their staff — any self-respecting Royal Commission must have its own bureaucracy — got another $105,000.

OPEN END

The Commission opened shop last September, so the total payroll for those closing four months of the year was $152,500.

But there were other charges; Travelling expenses:- $41,000
Office equipment:- $16,000
Furniture:- $3,000
Phones:- $3,000
Telegrams:- $300
Stationery:- $1,000

Other assorted items - - all listed, as above, but including a number of "miscellaneous" in the Finance Department Estimates — ran the four-month total to $300.

This was the specific item in the Estimates on which the Opposition united to zero in with its fiery criticism of the Commission.

And this is part of the job for which Parliament is electred — to look for an accounting, to criticize, to demand explanations when any Government department, Board, Bureau, Agency or Royal Commission seeks to tap the taxpayers' treasury.

The Opposition didn't like the Commission or the job it was doing, and it didn't hesitate long enough to hold up the funds it had requested, or dig in to battle the administration on what clearly has become a hotly controversial issue.

It will get another crack at the "B and B Boys" this Session, for in the Estimates, the Commission is asking for another $1,187,600 for the current year, added to that four-month tab of $275,850, runs the bicultural bill to $1,463,450. And that's just the start, for the Royal Commissioners have served formal notice that their's isn't an overnight job, but one that will keep them all busy at their $100-a-day-plus-expenses for a few years yet.

Strictly Personal
Some Virtues Can't Be Held In Moderation

By SYDNEY J. HARRIS
Purely Personal Prejudices:

The basic paradox of personality is that it takes a strong and secure sense of self to forget oneself, to give oneself, to subordinate oneself; and those who seem to be the most "egotistic," in the popular sense of the word, are actually those with the weakest and most insecure ego.

Certain virtues cannot be held in moderation, or they fall: just as a certain amount of gas in a bicycle, cannot be ridden below their proper speed, or they can't be ridden at all, for instance, to be "moderately loyal."

Someone always in a hurry has little sense of the present; by constantly anticipating the future, he never arrives in it, or learns how to convert it into usable present.

We blame philosophers for not being able to state their opinions in plain English, but nobody blames a physicist for not putting his equations in plain English; nor blames a physicist for not putting his equations in plain English — but is not conscious that the inner world of man defies a simple communication as much as the outer world of galactic space.

Speaking of philosophers, who need the best advice for marriage I've ever heard was given by William James, when he remarked, in another context, "The art of being wise is the art of knowing what to overlook."

Some people praise others in order to elevate their own ideas; while some praise others in order to put themselves on a level with those they praise, as an act of homage, and the second a form of snobbery.

The mortality of men sometimes seems divided into those who can't remember a face, and those who can't remember anything else.

It is the superstition of the modern "educated" person to believe that science can "explain" what it cannot, but if the so-called explanations of science are pursued far enough, they are seen to be as mysterious and, in their way, as mystical, as the more traditional explanations.

Sermons make us feel good when they make us feel bad; and having felt bad, we then feel free to go out again and commit those deeds that will call for the sermons to repeat the process ad infinitum.

We are all proud of the vices we don't have, and certain that Jack the Ripper prided himself upon the fact that he had never stolen so low as to attack a child.

Technology won't have justified itself until it can devise a machine to take the place of the old-fashioned handyman.

To Your Good Health
Eczema Could Be Caused By Something Son Handles

By JOSEPH G. MOLNER, M.D.

Dear Dr. Molner: What causes eczema and what can be done about it? My son has it on his hands. — Mrs. R. R.

Eczema is a scaly eruption of the skin — but that does not mean it is always the same, or results from the same cause.

In babies, it is frequently the result of a food allergy.

In adults, and you don't mention your son's age — eczema can mean any number of things. If on the hands, I strongly suspect a contact dermatitis, or a skin ailment resulting from something he handles or touches. This, in fact, is in the nature of an allergy.

Don't try to guess what these skin troubles mean. Go to a dermatologist.

People say, "Oh, it's just a skin eruption," and ignore it, or try some home remedy, or get some kind of goo at the drug store, hoping it will solve the problem.

Sometimes they try half a dozen kinds of salves and medications before they finally go and go to a specialist. By that time they often have so much irritation and secondary infection that the doctor has a difficult time working back to find out the original trouble.

In the interests of saving money as well as having cured quicker, consult a dermatologist before you've played blind man's bluff with a dozen remedies. (Some cases will be hard to treat anyway! others will clear more readily.)

Dear Dr. Molner: Is it harmful to take a teaspoonful of epsom salts in a glass of water every night? I have been doing it for years, as a preventive to high blood pressure. I am 75. — B. H.

Epsom salts is irritating. If your system tolerated the irritation, you've been fortunate. It will not have any effect on the blood pressure. I would try going without the salts for a month — and see whether you don't feel as well, or perhaps better.

Dear Dr. Molner: My problem is I eat starch, sometimes two pounds or more a week. When I try to get off the habit for two or three days I feel craving it again. Please tell me in what ways it harms a person. I am worried sick. — Mrs. M. B.

Two letters on the subject in the same mail and the question keeps coming up. I'b beginning to wonder how many starch-eaters there are. It would be interesting to know how the habit starts.

However, there isn't any reseltiog harm except that starch piles up a lot of calories, and could interfere with the appetite when it comes to getting other dail necessities — protein for one. And the fruits and vegetables which provide vitamins and minerals, for another.

There's no harm in it, except to the degree that it would help make you fat, or interfere with eating some more desirable food, as would be the case if you nibbled two pounds or more of candy a week.

If you aren't putting on weight, and if you eat milk, meat, cereal, some fruits, yellow vegetables, and fruit, then don't worry about the starch. But if you are getting fat — the starch is helping do it. This is a habit like smoking or drinking, which you could stop if you set your mind to it.

Dear Dr. Molner: What causes warts? I had about seven on the fingers, but they have disappeared and there is no indication they were ever there. — Miss E. P.

TWIWTW, eh? Those were the warts that were.

Actually, virus apparently causes some warts, and maybe all. When we were kids, we were worried about them. These days people are more inclined to fret about such things, but it's not necessary to do so. I have had, and if you haven't tried any drastic treatments, they don't have any scars.

Embarrassing Quotations

Winnipeg Tribune

On April 1 the reconstructed ministry of defence in Great Britain became operational. For more than half a century attempts had been made to streamline defence in the United Kingdom without any great success. Now the single ministry of defence is responsible for 25,000 officers and civil servants, 400,000 members of the regular forces, 460,000 in the militia. Into one fold. The new ministry is responsible for spending about £2 billion a year — seven per cent of the gross national product of Great Britain.

In justifying the creation of a single ministry, the performance of the old system for the past 150 years has been described as an "astonishing record of myopia, inertia and slothful bureaucracy." To bolster this assessment, a long list of statements made by various experts and defence committees from time to time:

The following is an excerpt from a communication from the First Lord of the Admiralty to the Colonial Secretary in 1828: "Their Lordships felt it their duty to discourage attempts on the utmost of their ability the use of steam vessels, as they considered that the introduction of steam was calculated to strike a fatal blow at the naval supremacy of the Empire."

Here is an observation made by Field-Marshal Haig in 1925: "Some enthusiasts talk about the probability of the horse becoming first and ultimately that the aeroplane, the tank and the motor car will supersede the horse in future wars. . . . I feel sure that as time goes on you will find just as much use for the horse — the well-bred horse — as you have ever done in the past."

The following is the answer given to a War Office questionnaire by Sir Douglas Haig in 1915: "The machine gun is a much overrated weapon. Two per battalion is more than sufficient."

The admiralty war staff had this to say in January, 1917: "The weapon of several shipsailing in convoy is not recommended in any areas where submarine attack is a possibility."

Finally, the following was the considered opinion of the Naval Staff to the Shipping Defence Advisory Committee in 1917: "The submarine should never again be able to present us with the grave menace we faced with in 1917."

All these quotations are to be found in a book by David Divine entitled The Blunted Sword published in London last month. They make interesting and enlightening reading, but the haunting question remains: Will the mere collecting of everything into one defence fold in Britain ensure that future quotations will be less piquant?

Standard Set For Meat Pies

Montreal Star

Britain's food standards committee has spent seven reflective years coming to a decision on what decisions to take for the course even under recent Canadian practice). Perhaps, however, the committee is deeply in the heart of British life that it was worth waiting for.

Britons have always had a vivacious appetite for meat wrapped in pastry in all forms from the humble Cornish pasty to the lordly Melton Mowbray pie. In particular they consume by the million something known simply as a "meat pie". It weighs perhaps a pound, can be eaten by hand after the fashion of a sandwich or hot dog and is sometimes sold in the street and is handy on a picnic.

The meat pie, the food standards committee has now ruled, must contain 25 per cent by weight of meat.

That may not sound much, but some of the pies sampled by the committee contained less t an 10 per cent. Further, the pie producers' associations argued that "the pie was "in fact a farinaceous article, and the meat is only present in order to give flavor," and anyway the public must like them that way or it wouldn't buy them. Still further, the committee had to obtain written evidence on what people in Scotland after it was argued that the Scots, being even more farinaceous in their tastes than the English, would be quite content with five per cent meat. But 25 per cent, it is to be hoped now on, eyed farinaceous Scotland.

And the results of the students efforts are on display in a glass showcase in the main lobby corridor.

Animals and human heads and figures were the main choice of models for the students whose brightly painted carvings show a true to life aspect which belies the fact that for many it was their first effort at sculpturing.

Eskimo carvings and oriental heads are among the most interesting in the display.

The student's interest in plaster carving was nurtured by their art department teacher, James Ritchie, a graduate in fine arts from Edinburgh University in his native Scotland.

PSI Enrolment Plan Closes On Saturday

The P.S.I. sponsored Hastings and Prince Edward Community Health Plan enrolment closes this Saturday, April 25, at 12 o'clock noon.

Response to this second offering of P.S.I.'s comprehensive doctor-sponsored coverage has been "exceptional", according to Charlie Stone, P.S.I. spokesman.

"After the great success we enjoyed here last year," said Mr. Stone, "we did not suspect that there were so many people who wanted coverage still not enrolled. Our office has been extremely busy right since the opening day, however, and with just three days left to enrol, we expect an even greater rush."

Mr. Stone cautioned that no applications can be accepted following the April 25th deadline.

Residents wishing to enrol or further information on the plan are urged to contact the P.S.I. Information Centre, 346 Front St., in Belleville, telephone WOodland 3-9125.

Club Members Will Manage One Checkpoint

Quinte Auto Sport Club members tomorrow will manage a time-control checkpoint of the "Shell 4,000" auto rally.

Location of the checkpoint is secret, but the route of the rally passed about 100 miles north of Belleville. The rally, one of five counting toward the world rally championship, left Vancouver April 18 with more than 80 cars. Participants include most of the world's top rally drivers, several of them driving for manufacturers' teams, and some private entries. Finish of the 4,044 mile six-day rally is in Montreal.

A new feature of the rally this year is "closed sections." Five stretches of the route are closed to normal traffic and on these roads average speeds, the speeds at which competitors must drive to make the checkpoints on time and avoid losing points, are higher than the legal speed limits. This feature was added to bring the rally into line with the other four world-championship rallies. Average speeds over open roads in Canadian rallies must, according to CASC regulations, be at least ten per cent lower than the legal speed.

Rally headquarters for the event operate from a DC3 airliner, owned by Shell Canada Ltd., which carries rally officials and reporters from stop to stop along the route.

Police Believe Flashers Will Cut Accidents on By-Pass

Installation of flasher lights atop "stop" signs regulating traffic leading onto the No. 14 by-pass at Foxboro is expected to have a favorable effect in reducing accidents at this point.

This was the feeling of district Ontario Provincial Police patrol officers and other officials meeting in Belleville earlier this week with Tom Mahoney, highway safety officer with the Ontario Department of Highways.

Highway patrol officers were called in from throughout the area and asked to discuss traffic problems and highway danger points. The Belleville meeting was held on Tuesday while a similar meeting was held yesterday at Kingston.

LIGHTS APPROVED

Since the Foxboro by-pass was opened last fall this section of highway has been the scene of a number of serious accidents and flasher lights have been approved for installation.

Staff Sgt. H. S. Gall at the Belleville Provincial Police headquarters said it was hoped that the flasher lights would serve to reduce the number of accidents at the Foxboro by-pass.

He noted that since flasher lights had been installed on No. 37 highway on a bad corner at Plainfield there had not been a single serious accident.

In past years the Plainfield corner had been the scene of several fatal mishaps.

At the Kingston meeting yesterday "wrong way" travel on exits at 401 highway interchanges came up for discussion.

It was recommended at the meeting that prominent reflective signs reading "Do Not Enter" be placed half way along all such 401 exits.

In this way if a confirmed motorist happened to miss the sign at the end of the exit road, he would be reminded in time to prevent him getting onto the wrong lane of the express highway.

City Police Chief J. B. McLauchlin sat in on the Belleville meetings, while at Kingston representatives from city police, Napanee Police Chief Benn, a department of highway engineer and department of transport officials also attended.

Lonely Widow Plans Tricks To Get Needed Attention

DEAR ANN LANDERS — I am the manager of a luxury apartment building in a large metropolitan city. For years I have read your column for kicks — never dreaming I would one day be writing for serious advice.

A prominent, well-to-do widow who lives in the building is driving the maintenance men buggy. Since January 1st she has put in 62 service requests. Her requests involve everything from the replacement of a light bulb (which she says she can't reach) to a leaky faucet or a loose doorknob.

When the men get there they can't get out. She has the table set for two and insists they sit down and have a cup of coffee and a piece of her delicious apple strudel.

Yesterday the electrician told me he is positive the woman disconnects and unscrews things so she'll have an excuse to call somebody up to her apartment.

Will you please tell me what to do about this tenant? She has three years to go on her lease. — EXASPERATION PLUS.

DEAR EX — The poor dame is lonely. But you can't continue to send workmen up there just to keep her company.

Tell the woman she is entitled to a specified number of service calls per week and that after she has used up her quota, she'll have to hire outside people.

• • •

DEAR ANN LANDERS — I was touched by the letter signed "His Kids." Those teenagers were worried about their father because he smoked heavily. His battle cry was, "I've been smoking this way for 25 years. The damage is done and quitting now won't do any good."

That same edition of our newspaper carried a truly encouraging story. The headline read "Quit Smoking and Lungs Will Be 'Pure' Again." The article reported on a meeting of the Kent County (Michigan) Unit of the American Cancer Society and Kent County Medical Society.

A chest surgeon said, "Those dirty, black, tar-filled lungs may be restored to a new state of pink purity in from three weeks to three years after the smoker quits, depending on how long and how much he smoked."

This is the most heartening news I have read on the subject yet. I hope you will print it and offer hope and encouragement to all those who refuse to give up smoking because they believe it's too late for them. Thank you. — MRS. G.J.

DEAR MRS. G.J. — Approximately 80 million pairs of eyes will see those words because you were thoughtful enough to send them on. Thank you.

DEAR ANN LANDERS — Our daughter is to be married this spring. Claude is a very nice fellow but his taste is not good.

Becky has always had her heart set on pastel appliances for the kitchen. Last night we were discussing what they would have in their new little home and Becky mentioned a pink refrigerator. Claude said, "A refrigerator ought to be white." Becky asked him why and he said, "There is no reason, except that white is the natural color for a refrigerator."

They got into an argument and Becky couldn't budge him. [illegible] and I have [illegible] buy them a pink refrigerator as a gift before Claude has a chance to buy a white one. My sister-in-law says this is butting in. Since when is wanting your child to be happy "butting in?" Are we right. — LOVING MOTHER.

DEAR LOVING — If you think a pink refrigerator will bring Becky happiness when you know Claude wants a white one, think again.

Your sister-in-law is right. If this isn't butting in, find me a better phrase and I'll buy it.

Poultry Shop Being Used as Art Gallery

MONTREAL (CP)—In a renovated poultry shop, Mrs. Daniel Johnson, wife of Quebec's Union Nationale leader, daily makes what she describes as her "contribution to old Montreal."

The contribution is Galerie Bonsecours, a kind of poor man's art gallery of contemporary Canadian paintings.

"My motive in establishing the gallery is to make a personal contribution to old Montreal," says Reine Johnson.

"Also I want to help take the sws out of art galleries. People should visit them more."

Mrs. Johnson and her partner, Mireille Parent Fortin, opened the gallery recently with a hanging of 100 paintings. Included were 25 of Mrs. Johnson's own works, mostly landscapes, seascapes and snow scenes.

Mrs. Fortin, who worked many years in an art gallery, joined Mrs. Johnson in renovating a poultry shop opposite Bonsecours Market, retaining the building's 1820 Jacobean beamed ceiling and fieldstone wall at the rear of the shop.

Two Variations of Tender Sweet Rolls

by Mary Moore

A letter that was music to my ears came from a man and started "I just had to write and tell you how simply delicious your Hot Cross Buns are. I have tried several recipes, but this one is just perfect. If you have any more recipes for sweet breads, please have them printed, soon."

I mailed my recipes for Cinnamon Rolls and Chelsea Buns to Paul, but made the following Sweet Rolls up into two variations and sent that along to him too. Half of the batch came out of the oven plain, without any topping, and were served at once for dinner and made the lightest and tenderest rolls I ever tasted. Be sure to try the following that way.

The second half I made up into fancy rolls which were iced when cool, then frosted and sprinkled with chopped cherries and nuts. These result in Sweet Rolls something like Butterfly Buns that our Americans folks are dearly love with their morning cup of coffee.

Dinner Menus

THURSDAY

SUNDAY
(Guests)

Stuffed Boned Leg of Lamb (see Wednesday); Mint Jelly; Crumbed Eggplant (see Wednesday); Yellow Buttered Rice; Salad Greens of Shredded Chinese Lettuce, Sliced Celery and Cucumber with Blackstone Dressing; Snowy Coconnut Layer Cake; Coffee.

TENDER SWEET ROLLS (2 variations).

1 package dry active yeast, 2 teaspoon sugar, ½ cup lukewarm water, 1 cup lukewarm milk, ½ cup sugar, 1 teaspoon salt, ½ cup soft shortening (part could be butter), 4½ cups sifted all-purpose flour, 2 eggs.

In mixing bowl add the 1 teaspoon sugar and lukewarm water to yeast and let soak 10 minutes. Then add lukewarm milk, the ½ cup sugar, salt, shortening, eggs and 3 cups of the flour and beat until blended. Add 2 more cups flour and mix and knead until smooth as satin. (Reserve remaining ½ cup flour for sprinkling kneading board.) Let rise until tripled in size. Punch down dough and knead again. Let rise a second time until doubled. Knead on lightly floured board 100 times. Shape into long roll and cut into 24 or 28 pieces, to make coiled buns as I did, roll each piece under your palms into a roll 10" long by about ¾" in diameter (a little narrower than a broomstick). This is lovely soft pliable dough — a joy to any breadmaker. Shape any way you like but I made coils by taking hold of each end and curved them around and inward to meet at centre of each (like a capital "B"). Tenderly lift to greased cookie sheet. Let rise covered until very light. I allowed mine to rise 3 hours at room temperature. Bake at 425 deg. Fahr. 12 to 15 minutes. Time your baking so you can serve half of them at once.

Sweet Topping for Remaining Buns: One cup icing sugar, 1½ tablespoons butter, 1½ tablespoons maraschino cherry juice, 1½ teaspoons milk. Mix togather well and spread on top of cooled buns. Have ready ¼ cup each chopped walnuts and chopped drained maraschino cherries. Strew these evenly on top of freshly iced rolls. Press gently to make them stay.

We'll bring a bumper-box for your off-season clothes—then pick it up for expert, Sanitone drycleaning. That means every item receives gentle handling and careful attention. When needed again, your clothes will be returned to you professionally pressed, ready to wear. Call on us today and avoid closet clutter.

Canadian Fashion & Fad

BY pegg rogers

PINK IS FUN GIRLS

Fashion has a rosy hue, a pink is everywhere — in dresses, blouses, running shoes, even in sportshirts for men. Pink is one of the best cosmetics ever invented. It is nearly as effective as black velvet when worn near the face. While there are a few women who find that black velvet hats make them appear sallow, I have yet to hear of any woman who cannot successfully wear at least one of the many shades of pink now on the market.

Blondes look wonderful, well in all tones of this color, from the palest through to the roisest shades. Brunettes can wear it with distinction. Everyone knows how flattering pink is to the silver-haired and it even looks chic on the carrot - top type. One of the great advantages of having red hair is a ready - made chic, which usually only needs to be accented.

If you have never worn pink and are convinced that it is not for you, try a print blouse with a touch of it in the print. This is a good way to get used to a new color, especially if you key your make-up to the latter. Stylists are now combining pink with yellow, gold and deep reds. All the fashion people, who are involved in planning for fall 1964, are talking about deep carnation pink. It is to be one of the top colors for coats and suits.

Pink, combined with red or yellow, can be seen in upholstery fabrics and draperies. It is another sign that this color has arrived and will stay for quite a while.

PINK IS FEMININE COLOR

The current pink rage stems from the more feminine trend in silhouettes, and accessories. This trend has suggested that our fabric and dye makers develop more interesting shades than those pale, characterless pinks which have been around for so long. Now they are producing pinks with more depth and individuality. Make-up is so varied today that there are few colors that cannot be worn successfully by most women, but of course, pink was never one of these difficult colors.

Pink has a happy faculty of blending or contrasting with almost every color in the spectrum. It looks well with navy, grey, black, all the browns and beiges, the stronger hues and most of the tender greens. There are some women who may feel that there is still a "little girl" look about pink; this may have been true in the case of the paler washed - out tones, but not today, when coral pink or carnation pink, look so chic in almost every fabric under the sun.

If you have a question on fashion, just write Pegg Rogers care of this paper.

WEDDINGS

DONAHER—ROBINSON

Rev. James A. Payton of Tweed officiated at the recent marriage of Marlene Ann Robinson, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Ross John Robinson, Thomasburg, to Ambrose Donaher, Thomasburg, son of Mr. and Mrs. Frank Donaher of Targetville, New Brunswick. The ceremony was performed in St. John's United Church, Tweed.

Wedding music was rendered by the organist, Mr. Fred Porter, who also accompanied the soloist, Mrs. D. G. Purdie, of Tweed.

The bride, given in marriage by her father, Mr. R. J. Robinson, was dressed in a floor-length gown of white peau de soie featuring a rounded neckline which was outlined with floral appliques, and long lily point sleeves. The bodice of the skirt was enhanced with appliques with tiny bows high-lighting the centre panel, with the back of the skirt flowing into a chapel train. Her shoulder length three-tier scalloped edged tulle illusion veil flowed from a circlet of lily of the valley. She carried a cascade bouquet of pink Delight roses interspersed with stephanotis.

The matron of honor, Mrs. Howard Mercer, sister of the bride, was dressed in a street-length dress of turquoise peau de soie featuring a bell shape skirt enhanced with a bow at back. She wore a matching pillbox hat and carried a colonial bouquet of white pompons centred with turquoise poms.

Little Miss Janice Meeks, of Roslin, niece of the bride, was dressed in a white lace and chiffon over taffeta dress, highlighted with turquoise sash, with bow at back. She carried a basket of white and turquoise tinted poms. Her headdress was a band of turquoise and white poms.

Mr. Howard Mercer of Brasside attended the bridegroom, while Mr. Howard Meeks of Roslin, brother-in-law of the bride and Mr. George Donaher, Toronto, brother of the bridegroom, were the ushers.

A reception dinner was held at 4.00 p.m. in Sioco Lake hotel, Stoco, where the bride's table was centred with a three-tier round wedding cake, topped with two doves carrying the rings and misted about the base with white tulle. The colorful bridal bouquets added to the setting.

For the bride's mother received the guests wearing a navy chiffon crepe sheath with three-quarter sleeves, and a corsage of pink Sensation roses. The bridegroom's parents, who reside in New Brunswick, were unable to attend, because of distance.

For the wedding trip through the States and back by way of Montreal, Quebec, Hull and Ottawa, the bride chose a light blue three-piece cotton knit suit, white hat and gloves, white patent shoes and purse, and corsage of pink carnations.

Guests were present from Ampherst, Belleville, Brasside, Milford, Boston (Mass.), Picton, Moncton (New Brunswick), Plainfield, Roslin, Toronto, Thomasburg, Tweed and Whitby.

A party in honor of the young couple was held at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Sam Fisher, when a number of friends and neighbors were in attendance and presented them with a white wool blanket.

Mr. and Mrs. Donaher will reside on Moira Street, Tweed.

ELLISON — KLEINSTEUBER

A pretty wedding was solemnized in West Lake United Church, recently, when Gale Mabel, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Cecil Kleinsteuber, R.R. 1, Picton was united in marriage to Robert Dymond Ellison, son of Mr. and Mrs. Roy Ellison, Kings County, New Brunswick. The Rev. Nathan Reaveley officiated at the double-ring ceremony before a background of pink gladioli and chrysanthemums.

The wedding music was rendered by Miss Judith Thompson who also accompanied the soloist Miss Sharon Mabee in two selections.

The bride, given in marriage by her father, wore a princess style gown of silk organza embroidered with simulated pearls fashioned with an inner construction of pelon featuring a graduated train. Her shoulder-length veil was held in place with a coronet of forget-me-nots. She carried a colonial bouquet of pink roses and stephanotis.

The maid of honor, Miss Margaret Thompson of Picton, chose a green organza sheath with overskirt, and matching headpiece and accessories. She carried a colonial bouquet of carnations. Miss Jody Ellison of Ottawa and Miss Helen Whitehead of Picton wore identical dresses of yellow organza with matching headpieces and accessories. Each carried a bouquet of white baby 'mums and stephanotis.

The little flower girl, Miss Lyn Terry, niece of the bridegroom from Sussex, New Brunswick was in green organza with matching coronet and she carried a basket of yellow baby 'mums.

Mr. Roy Ellison of Halifax, Nova Scotia attended his brother, while another brother, Mr. Ralph Ellison of Ottawa and Mr. Lewis Grier, Northport were the ushers.

The United Church parlors were decorated with pink and white streamers and wedding bell and the bride's table was most attractively, centred with a wedding cake flanked by white and pink lighted tapers in crystal holders, and vases of white 'mums. For receiving the bride's mother wore a turquoise two-piece brocaded ensemble with pink accessories and a pink and white corsage. The bridegroom's mother was dressed in winter beige brocade with green accessories and mink stole with pink and white orchid corsage.

Out-of-town guests were present from New Brunswick, Nova Scotia, Ottawa, Toronto, Kingston, Belleville and Bowmanville.

The bride presented her bouquet to her grandmother who was ill and could not attend the wedding.

A shower was held at the home of Mrs. Albert Kleinsteuber and Lynda when about 80 friends, relatives and neighbors were present. Miss Margaret Thompson assisted the bride in opening the many lovely gifts which were displayed by Miss Lois Kleinsteuber and Miss Margaret Trumpour.

Mr. and Mrs. Ellison are residing at a cottage at West Lake.

U.C.W. Meeting

MELROSE U.C.W.

The monthly meeting of Melrose United Church Women was held on Thursday evening, April 16, at the home of Mrs. R. McLaren.

President, Mrs. N. Demuth conducted the worship service. A number of scriptural selections read by various members illustrated how God has acted and still acts in the life of man. The service concluded with prayer.

STUDY OF INDIA

Following the discussion of business matters, the program convener, Mrs. A. English, took charge of the meeting. Her topic was "East — West Encounter". Mrs. English outlined the work of the United Church in India. At the request of the Indian people, there has been increased unity of Christian effort. In addition, there is widespread use of Christian technicians, agriculturalists and economists. The latter is in accordance with India's drive to industrialize in order to alleviate the problems of overpopulation and a falling standard of living. By means of several readings, Mrs. English demonstrated the misunderstanding which at times exists between two diverse cultures — Eastern and Western — meet.

The convener pointed out that India's annual increase in population cancels gains made in industrial output and food production. Canadians are too niggardly. We must give more and do more.

A pleasant interlude was provided by Mrs. R. Cook who sang a solo accompanied by Mrs. L. Weese.

The meeting closed with singing a hymn. A pleasant social hour completed the evening.

The participating merchants were the John Lewis Company, David Electric, Ireland Appliances, Booth Radio and Television and C. Hyde and Son.

Mr. Harry Rollins, chairman of the Belleville Utilities Commission, introduced the show, Mrs. J. Mazer, president of the Auxiliary, spoke briefly.

Master of ceremonies was Mr. Don McCurdy formerly with the Hydro staff who is now travelling with Showtime. Mr. McCurdy handled the show with fast-moving wit and added to the entertainment value.

Miss Barbara Woodall, B.A., was in charge of the cooking demonstration and besides providing delectable dishes which were given away to lucky participants, Miss Woodall demonstrated modern appliances in the home, their uses and care, and also described modern lighting for the home. The dealers all had models on display.

The main prizes were donated by the local merchants, Belleville Utilities Commission and Ontario Hydro. The Cascade water heater was won by Mrs. Carl Marsh; toaster by Mrs. Irwin; electric clock by Joan Wilson; table lamp by Mrs. J. Rasch; fishing reel by Mrs. Grass.

'Lines on Life'

By Dr. Simon E. Rosenberg

A man searching for the truth came one day to speak to a learned Greek scholar. "Will we ever have justice in Athens?" he asked the wise man. The sage turned to him and slowly replied: "We will have justice in Athens when those who are not injured are as indignant as those who are!"

The great spirits of all ages had this humane quality. They knew, what too many of us customarily forget: righteousness can be achieved only when it is divorced from self righteousness. Only when those who are not themselves the victims, feel as if they were.

HYMNS OF FREEDOM

Minorities know this truth, but often forget it, when they become majorities. Once they did sing hymns to freedom and justice for all. But that was when they did not have it! The Puritans, it is said, fled to the New World in order to worship God as they pleased. Once landed, they made everyone else do the same. Perhaps it was then that the American Indian proverb was coined: "Do not judge an Indian until you have walked for two weeks in his moccasins."

Many of us are very good at verbalization — we talk a "very good game", but rarely play it. Thus, the ever-present tendency to generalize. We do not really "jump to conclusions" as much as we draw conclusions without ever making the jump, at all. We know so much, it would seem, about this group, or that nation, religion or race — so much in general, but precious little in particular.

MORAL CHALLENGE

But the real need, the urgent moral challenge, is to learn how to particularize from the particular, not to indulge in the cheap and easy talk which can only generalize from the general. A man may like to be called liberal or progressive as a testimony to his humane, "free" thinking. But there's the rub! Liberalism that can only think freely — that is free to act but will not act to free—is but the self - righteous smugness of the smug.

It is liberalism only if it liberates. It is liberalism only if instead of serving as a salve for the safe, it hurts the cause of disinterested discussion and leads us to resolve human problems — not to save our own skin but to bring balm to the injured. It is liberalism only if it can cut through the stilted "subject-object" style of our thinking and force us to see others as we see ourselves. It is liberalism only if it makes us subjects facing other subjects, in fundamental, God-given equality.

OBVIOUSLY

The man who justifies his own needs as "obvious" but, but refuses to grant this right to others, just is not just.

Yes, the Greek sage was right! Justice can be achieved in Athens, or anywhere on earth, only when those who are safe and secure become so indignant that they will become active in achieving for the unsafe and the insecure, the safety and security they themselves enjoy.

Federal Funds Provided To Aid Thalidomide Babies

By IRA DEYSDALE

WINNIPEG (CP) — Research and development to aid the physically handicapped are rising swiftly from the ashes of the thalidomide uproar of two years ago.

Federal funds have provided facilities here and at Montreal and Toronto aimed at helping children deformed by the drug make the best use of the limbs they have.

Indications here point to wider spread benefits, reaching not only thalidomide children but people with disabilities totally unrelated to thalidomide.

Orthopedic surgeon F. R. Tucker, medical director of the new prosthetic and orthotic research and development unit here, says such a unit was needed for a long time.

"Thalidomide crystallized it," Dr. Tucker says.

Monthly clinics have begun at the unit with two thalidomide children attending plus a handful of handicapped by other causes.

The two thalidomide children are boys about two years old. Both have rudimentary arms and hands and one has rudimentary legs.

TREAT MOTHERS

These are both from Manitoba. Dr. Tucker says one more is expected soon and possibly a fourth. These together, with a child who died in hospital shortly after birth, comprise the known Manitoba total of deformed children born to women who took the drug during pregnancy.

The Winnipeg unit was built to serve Western Canada and Dr. Tucker says he understands thalidomide children from throughout the West may be brought to the unit at government expense.

A federal grant of about $42,000 provided in co - operation with the Manitoba government resulted in the prosthetic and orthotic unit, built in the basement of the Manitoba Rehabilitation Hospital and operated under the director of the Sanatorium Board of Manitoba.

The word prosthetic in the name refers to artificial limbs while orthotic refers to braces.

Staffing the unit with three or four helpers is James Foort, 43, a chemical engineer by profession and inventor in the prosthetic field.

Mr. Foort, a native of Quadra, B.C., who worked in prosthetics for 10 years at the University of California, is one of a small group of authorities on artificial limb research and development.

HELPS IN PLAY

As part of his job here he tries to develop things thalidomide children will use in play and from which they might learn something useful later.

A small ladder might help a child learn to use his chin to climb. A dangling rope might help him learn to use his teeth to change his position.

On a rolling device he might learn to rock himself into position. He might also learn how to move himself by inflating something.

One of the thalidomide babies here can throw a ball across a room with his underdeveloped arm.

The hope is that thalidomide victims will be able to trigger devices to do the work of the underdeveloped limbs. Such devices will be used as the children progress into stages at which they might be expected to operate them.

"We are prepared to bring them along as fast as they are prepared to be brought along," Dr. Tucker says.

Being developed, among other things, is an artificial leg that can be lengthened as a child grows.

In Edmonton a special team that includes a certified prosthetist has started a program to help four babies born without arms, Alberta victims of the drug.

Plaster casts have been made of their bodies and exact measurements of their shoulders taken. A social worker studied their reactions and a therapist their reflexes.

Mr. and Mrs. W. H. Stauffer of the Edmonton Artificial Limb Company will use the information in fitting the babies with artificial arms, and therapists and doctors will then start a program of training the children to use them.

Shyness Could Be Reason He Doesn't Kiss Her

DEAR DORIS — I am 19, attractive, and well groomed. I'm going out with a very nice boy. I like him a lot and I think he likes me too. At least he says so.

We have been going out together for over a half year but never has he put his arm around me or kissed me. What is wrong with him, or is it me? — PUZZLED.

DEAR PUZZLED — He may be:

1. Shy.
2. Strongly self-disciplined.
3. Afraid of his natural impulses.
4. Just not the affectionate type.

At least it's a change. If he comes to really care about you and you about him, there'll be some kissing done, or

DORIS CLARK

I'm a monkey's uncle. — Oh be is!

* * *

DEAR DORIS — I have been pretty well tied to the house for the last 35 years. Now I have a wedding coming up for my daughter and I wonder if you would give me an idea as to what we are responsible for; who should be in the reception line, etc. — IGNORAMUS.

DEAR IGNORAMUS — Parents of the bride put on wedding and reception; provide invitations and announcements, cake, decorations for church, church music, anything else needed.

Reception line includes mother of bride, father of groom (optional), mother of groom, father of bride (optional), bride, groom, maid or matron of honor, bridesmaids. Or the bride and groom may be flanked on both sides by brides maids. Fathers of bride and groom may, instead, hover near the line to "catch" guests as they move on into the room and introduce them around.

* * *

DEAR DORIS — I am 21 and have been going with a boy for three years. We are very much in love and would like to marry some day.

He would like to go to an English college and wants me to get a job there so that we would not have to be apart for three years.

But I have my heart set on becoming an airline stewardess. He hates the thought and we argue about it constantly. I feel that since we could not marry for quite some time, I would like to do this.

Yet he means the world to me. Am I being selfish (as he says) or do I have the right to follow my dream and return to him when we could get married?

I desperately need some sound advice from an uninvolved person. — LOVE TO FLY.

DEAR LOVE — Follow your dream. Your boy friend has not thought of your need for self-expression; but good grown-up love should realize this and be ready to encourage it.

When you marry you'll bring a broader understanding of life, of people, of your own loved ones, to your marriage. Your husband will then be delighted with the poise you have acquired; you will be grateful for your own growth and ability to cope with children, home organization, emergencies. You learn all of these things when you ride the airways as a working partner.

SPEAKING OF MANNERS

BY PATRICIA LEWIS

MAIL CALL

Question: When one orders a casserole — cog au vin, for instance — at a restaurant, how is the service handled? The waiter usually dishes out the first portion, but after that may the diner help himself or should he wait for the waiter to serve the remainder? — E. M. Key of Gardena, N. Y.

Answer: Often the waiter serves the rest of the casserole when the diner is ready for it, but, if he's not around, the diner helps himself.

Question: I've been invited to an afternoon wedding around the middle of May and would like to wear a linen suit I bought last year. It's beige, and I have shoes and bag in a slightly darker shade. Would it be appropriate to the season, or do you think this would look too summery? I plan to buy a white hat to go with the outfit. — Miss F. V. B., New Haven, Conn.

Answer: Linen is very big this spring, and is no longer considered purely a summer fabric. As long as it's not too tailored or sporty, the suit you have, and the accessories you describe, would seem appropriate for the occasion and the season.

Question: My husband and I went to a dance with two other couples. It was given by a social organization to which one of the couples belonged and we all purchased tickets to attend. During the evening, I was asked to dance by several men who simply approached me at our table without benefit of introduction or even knowing anyone else in our group. I politely declined, of course, but one of the women at our table was of the opinion, when we discussed it later, that it's considered correct to accept a dance with a stranger at a dance of this type. Her argument was that since it was sponsored by a social group, introductions were unnecessary, just as at a house party, but I think this reasoning is rather farfetched. What is the proper etiquette in such a situation? — Mrs. R. C., Newark, N. Y.

Answer: Since the dance was a benefit and non-members were invited to buy tickets, it could hardly be considered a private party, so the no-introductions-necessary rule of the living room would not apply here. Unless a man knows someone in the group who could introduce him, it's rather forward of him

By BERNARD POIRIER

FREDERICTON (CP)—When people ask why Premier Louis Robichaud appears to be trying to accomplish a hundred things at once, the answer usually given is that he drives hard because he does not consider himself unbeatable.

He is trying, they say, to make New Brunswick progress as much as possible while he is in power. His present mandate has another four years to run as the 38-year-old lawyer-politician approached the first anniversary today of his re-election to office April 22, 1963.

The anniversary led some political observers to glance back over some of the accomplishments of the province's first Acadian premier since his government took over from the Progressive Conservatives in 1960.

Perhaps the most eye-catching have been in the fields of education and industrial development.

New Brunswick has frequently complained that new industries by-passed it because of its shortage of electric power. Mr. Robichaud's government—the cabinet portfolios are equally divided among French- and English-speaking members—set out to remedy that situation.

START POWER PROJECT

The province is undertaking the $109,000,000 Mactaquac power project on the St. John River with a $20,000,000 grant from the Atlantic Development Board.

The opposition's criticism of the government's policy on the establishment of new industries led the premier to call an election in 1963, only three years after he had scored an upset victory. He returned with 32 of the 52 legislature seats, an increase of one over his 1960 strength.

Three weeks later he turned the first sod for mill and wharf facilities in South Nelson which will cost between $7,000,000 and $12,000,000. The project, planned by an Halifax company, could involve expenditure of $45,000,000 if all plans for future expansion are carried out. The opposition has claimed the scheme would not be advantageous for the province.

Later, he presided at the opening of a new Canadian industries plant at Dalhousie, a distillery and a chemical plant in his own constituency of Kent, and attended the launching of a $29,000,000 smelter and chemical complex at Belledune.

EDUCATION STUDIED

In the field of higher education, Premier Robichaud set up a commission to study the province's needs. His government now is acting on the commission's report which recommended the establishment of a French-language university and a fairer distribution of grants to colleges and universities.

The government has established a fisheries school at Caraquet and three technical schools.

The government has abolished compulsory contributory payments to the province's hospital insurance program; revised outmoded liquor laws; sponsored an inquiry into gasoline distribution in the province; appointed a retired supreme court judge to revise the Election Act and arranged for an investigation into the province's relations with its municipalities.

A report based on the investigation has recommended a complete reorganization of the provincial administration dealing with municipalities, public health, education and social welfare.

A special session of the legislature this fall will consider the recommendations.

Mill Rate Up As Council Approves Budget

CAMPBELLFORD — Campbellford council met in special meeting on Monday night to set a mill rate on the approved budget. The 1964 commercial rate is 118.3 mills and residential 106.4 mills. In the past two years the mill rate has been increased by a high increase in 1963, as well as again this year. In 1962 the commercial rate was 96.5 mills, now 118.3 an increase of 20.0 mills in two years, and since 1962 the residential has raised from 89.3 to 106.4 an increase of 16.1 mills. When asked at the meeting the possible amount of unpaid taxes in December 31st, 1964 the clerk R. M. Dey replied he expected it would be in excess of $52,000 for a small town of a little over three thousand population, which has decreased in 1963.

One ratepayer remarked that if the town were industrially prosperous, the high mill rate would be more acceptable but he further stated that one industry closed recently, another moved away, two remaining have laid off some employees and the three new industries promised in December 1962 if the administration changed which it did have never materialized.

In spite of this industrial situation it has been approved by Central Mortgage and Housing to build 16 low rental houses on which the taxpayer will be asked to pay a percentage of construction costs as well as a percentage of local improvement costs.

APPROVE SURVEY

The municipal council have also approved a survey for sewage disposal by the Ontario Water Resources, the cost of survey not to exceed $2,500. Following the preparation of this report, applications for approval will be made to the Ontario Water Resources Commission and the Ontario Municipal Board to proceed with work for sewage disposal for the town.

In spite of the fact that government grants were increased in 1963 the Campbellford High School budget has risen from $228,919 in 1963 to $260,260 as an estimate for 1964 an increase of $64,321 for the area. Public School spent $118,599 in 1963 and estimate the budget for 1964 as $134,900, an increase of $16,211. The police committee has increased $5,600 in two years.

According to official figures the general trend of population is downward in both the town of Campbellford and the township of Seymour.

part-time advisory committee on university affairs, set up in 1961, will continue to function and will be enlarged.

ACCEPT ESTIMATE

The committee's annual report, tabled in the house by the premier, said presidents of all Ontario universities have accepted an estimate of 91,400 students in the province's universities by 1970-71. The report said the province must concern itself with the progress universities make in accommodating a growing enrolment.

Robert Nixon (L—Brant), Liberal education critic, said the opposition will watch closely to see there is no interference with the historic autonomy of universities.

University officials, although pleased with the premier's assurance of no interference in traditional freedoms, wanted to know who will head the department, the size of the staff and the budget available for operations and research.

Reform Institutions Minister Grossman denied reports of a dormitory riot at Guelph reformatory April 10 in which 10 prisoners were said to have been injured.

He minister read a statement from Charles Sanderson, superintendent at Guelph, in which Mr. Sanderson said no such fight had taken place.

Fred Young (NDP — Yorkview) had asked Mr. Grossman to comment on the fight. The minister said Mr. Young should "be sure of his facts before making public charges."

APPOINTED CHIEF JUSTICE

CANBERRA (Reuters) — External Affairs Minister Sir Garfield Barwick has been appointed Chief Justice of the High Court of Australia effective April 27, it was announced Thursday. Barwick's appointment as chief justice was made by Governor-General Lord de L'Isle.

1944 when the CCF, born in the depression days of the early 1930s, was voted into power.

The last nip-and-tuck election which resulted in a government change in Saskatchewan was in 1929 when Conservatives, Progressives and Independents formed a coalition with 38 Liberals in the opposition. The house had 63 members. This lasted until 1934 when the Liberals were returned.

Premier Lloyd said in his home riding in Biggar the outcome would not be established until final vote counts are made in three weeks.

He said the only reason that occurred to him for the closeness of the vote was the "expensive and tremendously costly television campaign which must have had greater attraction than we anticipated." This was a reference to the Liberal campaign.

LLOYD WINS HANDILY

This was Mr. Lloyd's first general election as premier and he won handily in Biggar. But four cabinet ministers lost in Liberals.

Mr. Pratcher, a former CCF member of Parliament, said in Regina "As long as we have a majority of one, we intend to form a government."

He said earlier in Moose Jaw it could be a few weeks before the Liberals knew whether they would form the government. However, in a speech here, he referred to a Liberal "victory."

Martin Pederson, provincial Progressive Conservative leader who became the first PC member of the house in 35 years by winning Arm River against a veteran Liberal, said "there will be no alliance with either party."

Social Credit Leader Martin Kelln, only leader defeated, said his party will move into a long-term program of organization.

The CCF contested all 59 seats. The Liberals had 58 candidates, Conservatives 43, Social Credit two and there was one Communist.

The four cabinet ministers who fell were Education Minister O. A. Turnbull, Industry and Information Minister Russell Walker and Frank Meakes, minister of co-operatives.

CARRY 38 NEW SEATS

The Liberals picked up 14 seats from the CCF along with two new seats while the CCF captured three Liberal seats.

Voting day was cool and blustery. Some parts of the province received much rain and flurries. About 540,000 persons were eligible to vote. Turnout was lower than the 84.1 per cent recorded four years ago.

The CCF took an early lead after counting started at 6 p.m. MST but it soon became apparent that the outcome would not be settled quickly or decisively.

The lead changed at least once in 27 constituencies.

The closeness of the count was indicated in the party vote. Liberal and CCF candidates each received 40.5 of the vote while the Conservatives got 13.5 per cent and .4 went to others. In the 1960 election the CCF had 40.9 per cent and Liberal got 32.7 while the PCs got 14 per cent. Others got 12.5 per cent.

Mr. Thatcher, a veteran of 18 years in the political ring who has led the provincial Liberals for almost five years, widened his winning margin in Moose Jaw in a bettie with a CCP candidate.

The 46-year-old cattle breeder had a majority of 353 compared with 183 in 1960 when he won the seat for the first time.

PROMISED TAX CUTS

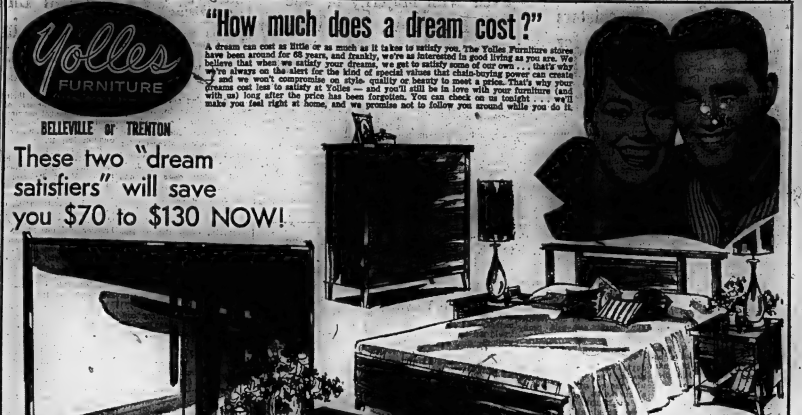
Mr. Lloyd, Biggar representative since the CCF sweep of 1944, had his majority lowered to 821 from 1,117 in 1960. He took over as premier in 1961 after T. C. Douglas became national leader of the New Democratic Party.

The 50-year-old former school teacher called the Liberal campaign Canada "Buckerization" and said their "roadshow" campaign was irresponsible.

Mr. Pederson, Conservative leader for six years, made it to the legislature on his third try by defeating Liberal Herman Danielson, at 81 senior member of the house and member for Arm River for 30 years.

Mr. Kelln, Social Credit leader for six years, ran third in Last Mountain behind Mr. Brown and Liberal Don MacLennan, a former civil servant.



Liberal George Leith unseated Mr. Turnbull in Kinsey; Herb Pinder, president of the Saskatchewan Liberal Association, defeated Mr. Walker and Conservative Hans Taal in Hanley; and Liberal George Trapp stopped Mr. Meakes' bid for re-election in Touchwood.

Mavis opposition developed among spokesmen for building trades unions.

The convention also approved pay raises for the four top officers of the CLC, but turned down a motion to increase the number of general vice presidents to five from four.

The pay increase — which open the way for similar increases to CLC staff officers — lifts CLC President Claude Jodoin to $20,000 a year from $16,000; Secretary - Treasurer Donald Macdonald to $17,500 from $14,000 and executive vice-presidents William Dodge and Joseph Morris to $16,000 from $13,000.

A number of union delegates expressed misgivings about increasing the pay of the CLC officers, arguing that if they are "paid like bosses, they'll begin to think like bosses."

Rejection of the plan for a fifth general vice - president broke up CLC plans to increase the executive council to 25 members from 21 to make room for Stanley Little, national president of the Canadian Union of Public Employees.

LEAD FIGHT

Quebec delegates led the fight to block the extra position, which was slated to be filled by William J. Smith, national president of the Canadian Brotherhood of Railway, Transport and General Workers.

A straw poll of delegates indicated that both Mr. Smith and Mr. Little will be elected as regional vice - presidents for Ontario, with Mike Eagen, Canadian vice - president of the International Association of Machinists, stepping down.

Mr. Little heads the second largest union in Canada, an 85,000 - member giant formed last year from the merger of two former rivals. He has no post in the CLC hierarchy at present. Both he and Mr. Smith head sprawling Canadian unions, in contrast to the majority of international unions based in the United States.

The congress came out unanimously in favor of a Canada-wide health plan available to anyone without a means test.

BASIC WIDE COVERAGE

The CLC recommended that the plan be comprehensive in scope so as to include prevention, diagnosis and treatment of illness as well as rehabilitation.

In the same resolution, adopted without opposition, delegates voted to oppose the introduction of voluntary-coverage health plans such as the one in effect in Alberta.

Syd Prentice, a United Auto Workers delegate, argued that the resolution should include a recommendation that all hospitals be nationalized. He said a full health plan is impossible until its operation is "taken out of the doctors' hands."

Inco Uncovers New Ore Body In Manitoba

TORONTO (CP) — International Nickel Co. of Canada Ltd., has uncovered a new nickel ore body near Thompson, Man., and will be bringing a new mine into production by 1968, Henry S. Wingate, chairman, said Wednesday.

He also told the company's annual meeting that first-quarter earnings this year are "much the highest" in the company's history—about $34,000,000 compared with $25,000,000 in the first quarter of 1963.

Mr Wingate said the new ore body "is separate and distinct" from the Thompson mine. It will be called the Birchtree mine.

He gave no details immediately as to the size and quality of the ore body.

"he find would not require any increase in the milling, refining and smelting facilities at Thompson.

"We will start the sinking of a production shaft at Birchtree by midsummer of this year. The mine should be ready for production by 1968."

Earlier Mr. Wingate told a press conference that he is doubling his exploration work near the site of a major mineral strike in the Porcupine district of Northern Ontario.

He said, however, that so far the search has produced "nothing that is hot."

PAPAL AUDIENCE

VATICAN CITY (Reuters) — Rice Frederick and Queen Ingrid of Denmark, accompanied by Princess Benedikte, had a 16-minute private audience with Pope Paul Thursday.

Speculators Waiting for Meeting Report

TORONTO (CP) — Specialists drawn into the week's frantic activity at the Toronto Stock Exchange have been waiting impatiently for today's annual meeting of Texas Gulf Sulphur Co.

The American firm's announcement last week of a 25,000,000-cu.-yd. strike in the Timmins area created a buying spree the likes of which no North American market had ever experienced.

Further details of its find are expected to be disclosed at the meeting in Houston, Tex., and, according to one broker, "it looks like the whole section of the Timmins-area speculatives could get hot again."

The gamblers, working on reports that the strike was even better than Texas Gulf confirmed, had set tremendous trading records as they frantically bought and sold penny stocks.

FEVER COOLS

The fever has cooled. Wednesday's volume was 15,450,000 shares, large when compared with the pre-strike normal of about 4,000,000, but well off Monday's 28,501,000.

Meanwhile three oil discoveries in Alberta have brought about one of the largest gains in the oil index on record. Shares of companies with oil properties in Western Canada rose as average of 7.8 per cent in the last two days.

Brokers, usually dismayed by an active speculative market, have been encouraged throughout most of the excitement by a continuingly rising industrial index.

One analyst said the rise in he higher priced portion of the market "shows a basic underlying strength."

Even With Majority of One Will Form Govt. Says Thatcher

REGINA (CP) — Ross Thatcher, Saskatchewan Liberal leader, told a cheering crowd of supporters in Regina's Trianon Ballroom last night that his party had won a victory in the provincial general election Monday of our program."

"Our program is business-like," he said. "It looks as if we have 31 or 34 seats. But as long as we have a majority of one, we intend to form a government.

"We're going to have a middle-of-the-road reform government. I feel a good campaign has resulted in a good thing for Saskatchewan.

Mr. Thatcher was cheered after almost every phrase of his broadcast address.

He said a campaign rally in Regina April 15 which attracted more than 6,000 persons was the "turning point" in the campaign for the Liberals.

Mr. Thatcher said Premier Woodrow Lloyd had accused the Liberals of fighting a dishonest campaign by using advertising methods and also had said he would not concede the election until the final vote count May 13.

"I felt he was a bit ungracious tonight. We as Liberal candidates agreed there would be no mud-slinging and there has been none."

Mr. Thatcher said he wanted to thank "adherents of other parties who in this election put aside personal preferences in order to bring about a change of government."

Saskatchewan faced a new future, he said.

PRICE HIKE PREDICTED

R. S. Reynolds, board chairman of Reynolds Metals Co., said Wednesday in New York "it is obvious that a price increase (in aluminum) is in order." He said it should come first on ingot, then on products as he reported first quarter company earnings of $7,891,000, or 39 cents a share, compared with $3,048,000 or 24 cents in the same 1963 period.

INCOME TO RISE

Maurice F. Strong, executive vice-president of Power Corp. of Canada Ltd., said Wednesday in Montreal that the company's net income for the current fiscal year ending June 30, 1964, will not be less than 40 cents a common share. During the last fiscal year, ended June 30, 1963, the company earned 36¼ cents a common share against 26½ cents during the 1962 fiscal year.

Federal Liberals Jubilant Over Win in Saskatchewan

OTTAWA (CP)—Federal Liberals were jubilant over the showing of their party in Saskatchewan's provincial election Wednesday night.

But they tempered their elation slightly in the face of the slim election-night margins in a number of ridings which might be affected by advance poll counting May 13.

Progressive Conservatives were almost as happy about the election of Provincial Leader Martin Pederson, the first Conservative elected in Saskatchewan in 30 years.

New Democrats on the other hand were disappointed at the blow in the CCF government of Premier Woodrow Lloyd.

No immediate comment was forthcoming from Prime Minister Pearson, who was reported to be heartened at the upsurge the Liberal fortunes under Liberal Leader Ross Thatcher.

EXPECTED GAINS

A good many federal Liberals made no secret of their views that they expected some gains but nothing on the scale of the election-night performance.

They were prepared to reward Mr. Thatcher's party since he received relatively little help from the federal party during the campaign.

Richard Thrasher, Progressive Conservative party national director, commented that Conservatives "are delighted that we got a breakthrough after 30 years."

He read the election - night vote-count as an indication the Conservatives will be the real alternative to whatever party forms the government when the results are fully known.

With about a dozen fewer candidates in the field than in the last Saskatchewan election, the Conservatives were particularly impressed by increases in their party's share of the popular vote, which appeared likely to increase almost five percentage points.

New Democratic Leader T. C. Douglas, Saskatchewan premier for 17 of the CCF's 20 years in office, said the result was "a great disappointment to the government but in terms of votes cast it was not a repudiation of the government's program."

He said that the CCF vote held firmly at about the same level as in the 1960 Saskatchewan election while the Social Credit vote switched to the Liberals.

He said he doesn't consider medicare was a factor in the result since Mr. Thatcher had said throughout he would maintain and even broaden the controversial medicare program instated originally while Mr. Douglas was premier.

The federal Liberals hoped the Saskatchewan result would give a boost to their fortunes in the federal byelection in Saskatoon, scheduled for June 22.

A victory there—in a seat a Liberal hasn't won since 1935—would be almost certain to give new impetus to pressure for a federal election. The Conservatives have held the Saskatoon federal seats since 1957.

Witness Wins Right to Give Evidence in French Against Man Charged With Murder

OTTAWA (CP)—A 28-year-old Crown witness won the right Wednesday to testify in French in the Ontario Supreme Court after a clash with Mr. Justice Sam Hughes who at one point ordered her to speak English.

The incident took place after Mrs. Agathe Jensen, a resident of Christ the King Church Rectory Apartment, was sworn in as a witness at the capital murder trial of 18-year-old Reginald Binette. He is charged with the shooting of Paul Mercier, 22, one of four persons killed in a robbery attempt at the rectory last Dec. 22.

Mrs. Jensen was ordered out of the witness box by Mr. Justice Hughes after persisting in her request to give evidence in French.

"You will speak English in this court," Mr. Justice Hughes said. "You understand it and you will speak it."

However after Mr. Justice Hughes had conferred during a recess with Crown Attorney John Cassells and defence counsel Louis Assalay, he said there is "nothing objectionable" about Mrs. Jensen wanting to testify in French. He said a witness "can give evidence in his or her native tongue."

DISCUSSMENTAL STATE

At this point, Mr. Justice Hughes entered a trial within a trial to determine whether Binette was mentally fit to stand trial. The jury ruled that he was fit after it heard evidence from two psychiatrists and a psychologist.

Dr. Edward Houston, one of the psychiatrists, said that Binette had symptoms of schizophrenia but "this does not affect his ability to instruct counsel." Donald McKnight said the accused had "a rich but morbid fantasy life."

After Mrs. Jensen had been sworn in, she told the court she spoke and understood English but preferred to testify in French.

Mr. Justice Hughes said that when a person is being tried for one of the most serious of all crimes the court should not be turned into a theatre of any kind.

Mrs. Jensen was asked whether she spoke English.

"I just prefer French," she replied. "My privilege."

ARE IN ENGLISH

Mr. Justice Hughes said the proceedings are being conducted in English. If Mrs. Jensen did not understand and speak English an interpreter would be provided.

"Then will you please get an interpreter," Mrs. Jensen said.

"Now do you or do you not understand English?" the judge asked.

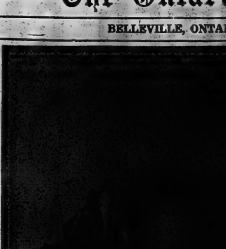
"I understand English, but I would like to speak French," Mrs. Jensen said in English.

"Do you propose to turn this court room and this court of justice into a demonstration of some kind?" the judge asked.

"No sir," she said, breaking into a few sentences of French.

"You speak English in this court," Mr. Justice Hughes said. "You understand it and you will speak it."

"It may be last stage not official," sir?" Mrs. Jensen asked.



"Not in the province of Ontario," Mr. Justice Hughes said.

"In the whole of Canada, no?" Mrs. Jensen asked.

"Now, will you please take it from me, Mrs. Jensen, as far as this court is concerned, these proceedings are being conducted in English and this is not the place or the time for a philosophical discussion," the judge said.

Mrs. Jensen: "Well, you take it from me, my language is French and this is in Canada where there are two official languages, and I wish to speak French."

"Leave the box," the judge ordered.

MR. AND MISS BCIVS — Students at Belleville Collegiate yesterday named their king and queen of the year. They are Mary Beth Follwell, Belleville, and Lyle Adams of R. R. 7 in Prince Edward county. Sponsored by the boys' and girls' Hi-Y Club. The contest is based on scholastic standing, conduct, extra curricular activity and school attendance. For Mary Beth "the victory was a matter of carrying on family tradition. Three years ago her brother, Rodney, was chosen Mr. BCIVS.

Not Mandatory For Groups To Sign Forms

OTTAWA (CP)—Don't be misled by the supercharged language of the Unemployment Insurance Commission: It is not mandatory for persons exempt from insurance coverage to sign up for the government's new social insurance numbers.

Labor Minister MacEachen, who has been emphasizing this point for a month, indicated Wednesday he felt the commission had made too strong a pitch in its efforts to have all employees—insured or not—apply for the new nine-digit numbers.

He was referring in an interview to instruction sheets sent to employers by the commission on March 25 seeking registration of all employees in the new numbers system.

At the bottom of one of the commission's circulars—one of two slightly differing forms issued—was the words in capital letters: "It is an offence to fail to comply with this request."

There was no mention of the fact — emphasized repeatedly since then by MacEachen — that non-insured employees are not required by law to fill in the form.

MINISTER ANGRY

Informants said the minister was angry that the insurance commission didn't make this distinction clear despite his request that it do so.

The new nine-number social insurance registration plan is designed in large part to let employees listed in advance of the proposed contributory Canada Pension Plan, the commission hoped in one operation to accomplish this as well as issuing insured workers under the new numbering system more easily handled by electronic computers.

Mr. MacEachen said this is the only case of "misunderstanding" he has heard about.

He said this now has been settled to the minister's satisfaction sent to school boards last week.

Governor-General Vanier Gives Moving Speech to Originals of First World War

OTTAWA (CP) — Canada's contribution to the cost of human liberty in the First World War was not just a token, Governor-General Vanier said Wednesday night.

"It was the stuff of a mature nation and even yet the magnitude of its loss is felt as a void in our life and leadership," Gen. Vanier said in possibly the most moving speech he has given since he became governor-general.

The First World War veterans he left a leg in Flanders—was speaking to the 44th annual reunion dinner of the Red Cherrons or "originals" of the Canadian Expeditionary Forces. He proposed the toast to "the first thirty thousand" on the 49th anniversary of the second Battle of Ypres.

Gen. Vanier coupled his tribute to the force with a plea for national unity.

SEEDS WERE PLANTED

"The seeds of a genuinely national spirit were planted by the Canadian Expeditionary Force," he said and recalled the words of Lord Byng of Vimy: "When men from Quebec stood shoulder to shoulder with men from Ontario, men from the Maritimes with men from British Columbia, there was forged a nation tempered by the fires of sacrifice and welded on the anvil of high adventure."

Gen. Vanier told "this remarkable assembly":

"To have an inkling of what the Great War meant to our infant nation, to perceive a flicker of what the contest meant to her people, it is important to remember that over 60,000 of them, more than one in 10, did not return but found a resting place in a French or Belgian field."

Canada had at that time a population of 7,000,000 and sent more than 500,000 men overseas.

"While we came out of the war mature and industrialized, a nation in our own right with a voice in the councils of the world, the loss of that precious and inspiring generation of leave haunts us still.

HAVE MUTE REMINDER

"The very vacuum is a mute but all-pervasive reminder of their excellence. For those of us remaining, their absence and the terrible chastening experience we shared with them, has emphasized our responsibility for Canada's development."

Gen. Vanier concluded:

"We were a citizens' army. Scarce any of us opposed a military career.

"If, as is said, the readiness of a people in the defence of their country is the great proof and glory of its nationhood, then true indeed were Canada to Canada when the trumpets of emergency sounded so many years ago.

"To you who wore the Red Chevron was the burden and today the honor of having led the way.

"To you and to your absent comrades, I wish to say, in effect, 'The first thirty thousand.'"

Extension of Legal Aid Is Opposed by Lawyer

PORT ARTHUR (CP)—Extension of legal aid beyond the present system might result in crimes, Chesley Carson—Attorney-General Ibbetson of the Thunder Bay district said Wednesday.

He told the Ontario legal aid commission that some people would take a chance and commit a crime if they knew skilled counsel would defend them in court.

The commission was holding a two-day hearing at the Lakehead city.

Mr. Ibbetson said it is not true that an accused cannot receive a fair trial without benefit of counsel.

A claim of this kind implies the court or Crown may take unfair advantage of undefended persons and it is an insult to prosecutors and magistrates, he said, added:

"I do not question the right of every accused person to be represented by counsel but I do question his right to be represented by counsel at someone else's expense or at the expense of the general public."

COULD APPLY

He said that free service, if permitted in legal and medical fields, could as easily be applied to any other profession.

"It is my personal opinion that instead of expending money for the defence of those who have obviously, from their record, embarked upon criminal careers, their money should be spent to prevent or deter their commencement upon such activities."

He said any defects in the present system of legal aid have been magnified out of proportion by editorials, newspaper articles and other publicity.

Earlier A. A. Petrone, president of the Thunder Bay Law Association, told the commission most lawyers want to retain the present legal aid system on a minimum basis through the Upper Canada Law Society.

In the Thunder Bay district this means that free legal aid is provided for all first offenders who qualify through a means test.

Mr. Petrone said employment of a public defender to take the cases of the indigent would be regarded as an infringement on the freedom of lawyers in the community.

WON'T EXTEND PLAN

OTTAWA (CP)—The government has decided against any extension of its municipal winter works incentive program beyond the April 30 deadline, Labor Minister MacEachen said Wednesday in the Commons.

Soviet Troop Withdrawal From Cuba to Start Soon

By HAROLD MORRISON
Canadian Press Staff Writer

Within a few weeks the Soviet Union likely will withdraw a large portion of its remaining soldiers and technicians from Cuba, turned over to the Fidel Castro regime increased control over some 500 surface-to-air missiles and other weapons ringing the island as a defence against U.S. penetration.

This general has heightened speculation that some dangerous entanglement between the U.S. and Cuba might result with the U.S. persisting in continuing aerial surveillance of the island and the Cuban government warning that these conventional missiles may be used to shoot down U-2 spy planes that violate Cuban air space.

Cuba and the U.S. in fact have exchanged views which tend to emphasize the critical period that lies ahead, especially in the light of growing demands by right-wing political elements in the U.S. that the Castro regime be crushed once and for all by sending in the marines.

Should Castro make good his threat to destroy American spy planes, President Johnson might find himself under increasing pressure in this election year to respond with more than just a protest or another impotent attempt to tighten economic sanctions against Cuba.

INVESTMENT HUGE

But this speculation, which finds expression in some U.S. newspaper columns, does not take into account that the Soviet Unfon has invested hundreds of millions of dollars in strengthening Cuba as a Communist base in the Western Hemisphere.

It is not likely that the Kremlin would be willing to see Cuba tu up in smoke.

Soviet Premier Khrushchev is well aware that given the excuse and proper circumstances, the U.S. would be tempted to rip the thorn from its side and crush the Castro regime. Khrushchev also is aware that Castro is somewhat emotional and militant and might be tempted to knock down American planes to display the grandeur of Cuban sovereignty.

Back in 1962 when Khrushchev agreed to withdraw nuclear - tipped ballistic missiles from Cuba, there was an understanding that the withdrawal would be witnessed by one-site inspection. The Russians refused to allow that the Cubans refused to agree to this inspection method and the late president Kennedy then ordered that the inspection be continued by sea and from the air.

PERMANENT

There is a difference, of course, between high - altitude U.S. reconnaissance surveillance. The Pentagon declines to say whether any recent air patrols eliminated the other Cubans in the case during the 1962 nuclear crisis when one of the U-2 spy planes was shot down with the loss of its pilot.

The extent of Soviet control over Cuban military policy can be seen by the fact that until the current situation developed, there was no great Communist show of protest over previous reconnaissance and no report of any American plane being molested during reconnaissance.

With the U.S. and Russia interested in a détente and in view of the heavy Soviet investment in Cuba, it is unlikely that withdrawal of Soviet troops and technicians will spell the complete end of Soviet control over Cuban military operations.

With the Kremlin watching, it appears Castro will not act against Kremlin orders. He likely will pursue his outrage through propaganda channels, hoping to arouse new sympathy for himself and new criticism of American foreign policy.

TO START HOUSES

BROCKVILLE (CP) — First phase of a housing subdivision which will eventually provide 800 new homes for Brockville will get under way here late this year, city officials announced Wednesday. The first section to be developed consists of 237 building lots, with provision for sites for two new public schools and a church in 10 acres of parkland.

1,000 Dice Were Loaded Says Witness

MILTON, Ont. (CP)—An official of the attorney - general's laboratory testified here that 1,866 dice seized by police from two men involved in craps games across Ontario were loaded.

Douglas Lucas said the loaded dice were found in a box labelled "winners," while 174 honest dice were in a box labelled "losers."

Mr. Lucas was testifying Tuesday at the preliminary hearing of seven men charged with conspiracy to cheat at play in Ontario over the last seven years. The hearing was adjourned to May 1.

Charged are William Scherbank, 44, of Hamilton; Vincent Bondo, 46, of Ancaster; and five London residents: Richard Yanks and Bevan Stewart, both 37; Robert Dowling, 35; and Joseph Dowling, and Thomas Darnell, both 36.

Two of the men were arrested in Oakville Dec. 6 when players at a crap game suspected the game was dishonest and called police.

Prime Minister, Gov.-General Have Birthdays

OTTAWA (CP) — Governor-General Vanier and Prime Minister Pearson both celebrate their birthdays today. The Governor-General is 76; Mr. Pearson 67.

The Governor-General marks his birthday at his Government House residence in Ottawa. Mr. Pearson's regular workday schedule will be broken by four brief birthday tributes from cabinet, party and staff colleagues.

His cabinet ministery were to present Mr. Pearson with a gift. The Civil Service Federation of Canada will give him a framed picture of the new Lester B. Pearson tulip developed by Dutch bulb growers.

He will receive a gift of fishing gear from the National Liberal Women's Federation. His office staff has a small party planned.

Breach of Contract Suit Filed Against Liz and Dick

NEW YORK (AP)—Twentieth Century-Fox filed a $30,000,000 breach of contract suit Wednesday against Elizabeth Taylor and Richard Burton.

The suit said the actors' "conduct and deportment" during and after the filming of Cleopatra lessened the commercial value of the motion picture.

They "maliciously interfered" with the firm's property rights, and the suit said, by "their conduct with each other although each was to the public knowledge at these times married to another."

Miss Taylor and Burton were married and divorced recently but during the Cleopatra filming she was married to Eddy Fisher and he to Sybil Burton.

The suit in U.S. Federal Court was filed by 20th Century-Fox Film Corp. and 20th Century-Fox Production Limited.

NEARLY DIED

Filming of Cleopatra began in London Sept. 28, 1960, and was shelved in June when Miss Taylor nearly died of pneumonia, the suit said. It added work was resumed in Rome Sept. 25, 1961, and Miss Taylor's services were terminated on June 28, 1962.

Miss Taylor received more than $2,000,000 in connection with the film, the suit continued.

The suit sought $20,000,000 from her, saying she had breached her contract by:

"Failing to abide by the observe reasonable and customary rules, directives, regulations and orders for her conduct and deportment during the course of the production of Cleopatra?

"By not reporting for work; by not reporting for work on time;

"By not performing her services with due diligence, care or attention;

"By reporting for work in a condition which did not permit her to perform her services;

BECAME DISABLED

"By suffering herself by her own acts and fault to become disabled, incapacitated, or unphotographable, and unable to perform her services;

"By conspiring with and inducing others to breach their agreements faithfully to perform their services in the production of Cleopatra; or

"By suffering herself to be held up to scorn, ridicule and unfavorable publicity as a result of her conduct and deportment both during and subsequent to the production of Cleopatra and while it was being distributed so as to become offensive to good tastes and morals and to depreciate the commercial value of Cleopatra."

The second claim, against Burton, sought $5,000,000 and was similar to the charges against Miss Taylor. The suit said he had received more than $500,000 for portraying Mark Anthony in the film.

A third claim, against both for $25,000,000, criticized "their conduct with each other although each was to the public knowledge at these times married to another."

U. S. Expecting More Will Try To Cross Border

By HAROLD MORRISON

WASHINGTON (CP) — The U S immigration service says it expects illegal alien activity to increase substantially along the Canadian border this year.

This is indicated by a continuing upward trend in the number of violators found in the eastern portion of the area since 1960, marked increase in the population of Western Canada will continue and its attraction work in the U.S., particularly highway construction, will be expanded," the service said in a report to Congress.

This annual document was submitted to a congressional appropriations subcommittee last January and published in a transcript of the subcommittee's hearings made public today.

"The devaluation of the Canadian dollar, coupled with chronic unemployment, will continue to be a factor," the service said in anticipating an increase in border violations.

"Crewman desertions in Canada will continue and is expected that crewman control problems in the St. Lawrence Seaway area will remain fairly constant."

The number of aliens found to have entered the U.S. illegally along the Canadian border increased to 5,317 in the 1963 fiscal year from 4,080 in the year previous.

SEEK HIGHER WAGES

"Most of the increased activity was in the eastern portion," the service reported. "Areas of chronic unemployment adjacent to the border had a substantial influence upon illegal entry. Unemployed workers were particularly anxious to work in the U.S. because of the higher wage scales and because payment was in U.S. currency which amounted to an eight-per-cent bonus."

The immigration service found one instance of entering during the 1962 potato harvest when "many laborers congregated in border towns and then crossed into the U.S."

"One fourth of the 1962 deportable aliens, located by a task force operation in the Maine potato harvest, had criminal records."

During that year the service also found that 361 crew members deserted their ships while in Eastern Canadian ports. This posed a threat to the border patrol with the prospect that many of these deserters will try to get into the U.S. In fact, seven of them were found in the U.S. after they jumped ship.

Many Canadians travel to Florida for winter vacations and while most of these are law - abiding, dropping large sums into Florida tourist coffers, the services also found that some of them constitute a headache.

"Canadians who enter as nonimmigrants and later violate the conditions of their admission continue to be a problem in the Florida area and a high percentage of them (the violators) have criminal records."

Mr. and Mrs. Orrin Day and Mr. and Mrs. Martin Haveman of the newly cleared West Front.

So far the building has barely reached the second-floor level but trumpeting of public indignation are attempting to drown out the hammering down before it gets any higher.

"A national disaster." says Mr. Ashley Hodgson, editorially echoing such spluttering phrases in its letters column as: "An appalling monstrosity . . . shameless vandalism . . . an outrage to history and good taste."

A city director has organized a protest meeting and circulated a petition. The Ancient Monuments Society and the Penn and Chapter of St. Paul's have added their weighty objections; suggestions have been advanced in the Commons by a High Court injunction and some people even think the subject should become a general election issue.

As yet the forces of protest have made little impression on the governmental powers responsible. Housing Minister Sir Keith Joseph says he doesn't "contemplate taking any action" because "the new building is in accordance with the approved plan."

This is one of the several ironies embedded in the controversy.

Sir William, in a long letter to The Times defending his design, notes that a model of the project has been on public view for eight years. There were a series of public inquiries before the plan was approved and he cannot understand why objections are being raised so vociferously now.

His most important point — which is strictly true — is that the new block is actually farther back from the original building line. The angle of Ludgate Hill, the street approaching St. Paul's, allows only part of the West Front to be seen in any case.

The obstruction is only apparent from one viewpoint. None of the traditional prospects of St. Paul's will be affected at all.

Sir William adds that the roof of the new office block will be open to the public and on ceremonial occasions will afford an unspoiled vantage point for television cameras to view processions winding down Fleet Street an dinto the City.

A second irony is that the concept of a long vista of the cathedral is one which Wren himself proposed while rebuilding St. Paul's after the great fire of 1666.

His ideas were rejected at the time and in their place developed an esthetic theory known as "the unexpected glimpse" of the cathedral—caught from one of the mase of side-streets that feed into the cathedral precincts. The Holford plan is in this tradition.

"It is part of the historic character of St. Paul's," writes the architectural correspondent of The Times, "to be seen framed by other buildings rather than as an isolated monument."

So the argument between those who decry "a blight on the parish church of the British Empire" and those who see the plan as "a brave attempt to give some shape to modern development" continues unabated while the building continues to rise.

Perhaps the last word comes in a letter from a parson: "It is obvious that most people do not regard a church as a building to be approached and entered but as one to be looked at from afar."

"Outrage" at St. Paul's Mammoth - - and a Mighty Masterpiece

By DOUG MARSHALL

LONDON (CP)—Not since the Blitz have Londoners been so preoccupied with what is happening to St. Paul's.

When Nazi bombs rained around it, Sir Christopher Wren's mighty cathedral, and particularly its majestic dome, became a vivid symbol of the nation's survival.

Rebuilding of the battered area surrounding the cathedral began in 1957, based on a plan commissioned by the City of London Corporation and designed by Sir William Holford.

Now as the rebuilding nears completion, protectors of St. Paul's are bombarding newspaper editors with angry epistles directed at the architectural Philistines who allowed the plan to go through.

They are particularly offended by an eight-storey, 90-foot-high office block that will jut out into the cathedral's forecourt and partially obscure a view of the newly cleared West Front.

So far the building has barely reached the second-floor level but trumpeting of public indignation are attempting to drown out the hammering down before it gets any higher.

CONSTRUCTION STIRS CONTROVERSY — An eight-storey office block, under construction, that will jut out into the forecourt and partially obscure the view of St. Paul's Cathedral in London, England, has stirred controversy between protectors of the church and architects who allowed the plan to go through. The majestically domed cathedral became a symbol of the nation's survival when Nazi bombs rained around it in the Second World War. Rebuilding of the area started in 1957.

Russian-U. S. Nuclear Move Could Lead to Great Things

By JOSEPH MacSWEEN
Canadian Press Staff Writer

The new nuclear move between the Russians and the Anglo-Americans is in itself nothing more than a friendly gesture—but it could amount to a good deal more in the future. There was nothing specific(al) about the announcements by President Johnson and Premier Khrushchev about cutting the over-production of fissionable materials for warheads.

To realize how far away this is from actual disarmament it is only necessary to recall Johnson's statement in January that the United States and the Soviet Union now have enough nuclear weapons stockpiled to "equal 10 tons of TNT for every man, woman and child on the face of the earth."

The new decision, of course, does not scuttle any bombs in being. It is as if children on guard in a field of snow threw some surplus snow over the fence, keeping intact their stockpile of snowballs.

Only when they start throwing away the snowballs will disarmament begin and the other kids follow suit in the real security. And kids don't take kindly to scuttling snowballs.

Yet most people find considerable encouragement in the Khrushchev - Johnson move—even in that they were able to synchronize their announcements with a show of good will. This follow-up to the test-ban treaty is seen as a welcome advance, although it is well to remember that the treaty is not complete and the nuclear cuts are not subject to independent checks of any kind.

Some observers see a danger that such heralded events as Washington-Moscow announcements will become the actual disarmament which everyone hopes — is being negotiated by the 17-nation East-West committee in Geneva.

PROGRESS ARRIVES

The test-ban treaty does not preclude development of ever more deadly weapons and, in fact, the U.S. now claims to have obtained "important information" in this direction in recent months.

The absence of progress of Geneva has been underlined by the cold reception given by the Russian delegate to a U.S. proposal for a freeze on strategic missiles. The hope is that the Geneva talks now will take more life.

Overhanging the whole matter is the hydrogen dollar question of how Red China is to be brought into disarmament negotiations.

Anyway, most people feel a distinct improvement in comparison with the days when Sir Winston Churchill warned a word-weary world that jaw-jaw-jaw is better than war-war-war.

There still is plenty of jaw-jaw-jaw but a few hesitant steps are also being taken.

RARE, MEDIUM, WELL-DONE

By Geo. H. Carver, Sports Editor

It was rather a quiet get-together of the Fish and Game Club the other night. The majority of the faithful stayed home to watch the Leafs-Wings hassle, but a fair crowd was on hand at that.

Former Mohawk-Quinte Band chief Melville Hill was disappointed as were those present in the failure of the motion pictures of the Tyendinaga waterfowl project to show up in time for presentation.

The project located on the Tyendinaga Reservation was built in 1963 by "Ducks Unlimited." It is a duck-production unit of some 1,000 acres and almost nine miles of shoreline.

There is a reinforced concrete outlet control at the south end of the large marsh. The control uses a stop-log system with logs lifted by hooks on chains attached to wheeled rods.

The Tyendinaga is the first Ducks Unlimited project in Ontario and has created much conversation interest in Eastern Canada.

And speaking of wildlife I had an interesting conversation with a veteran outdoorsman the other day.

Some time ago I received an inquiry from a reader asking the difference between a lynx and a bobcat. I am not an expert on such matters but my silver-thatched hunter friend provided the answers.

Modestly he said he read it "somewhere" and quotes District Forester J. M. Taylor of Dog Tweed District, Lands and Forests Department as his source of information.

"The lynx," said Mr. Taylor, "which prefers fairly heavily forested areas as a natural habitat, was once quite plentiful in this part of the country. With the advent of land clearing and build up of broken populations the lynx receded north to more favorable conditions but reports of lynx in the northern part of this district have not been infrequent over the years.

"The bobcat, a member of the same family, seems to have adjusted to changing conditions, and has always been present in fair numbers. Undoubtedly bobcats are often mistakenly ... called as lynx and vice-versa. This is understandable when you consider how closely they look alike.

"Both animals weigh between 15 and 30 pounds but the lynx is slightly longer, going up to 36 inches in length as opposed to 30 inches for the bobcat. Both have short tails, about four inches for the lynx, five inches for the bobcat. There is a distinguishing mark here however, in that the tip of the tail on the lynx is completely black whereas it is black only on the top of the tip of the tail of the bobcat.

"Both have ear tufts, usually larger on the lynx. The paws of the lynx are large while they are smaller or catsize on the bobcat. The fur of the lynx is somewhat lighter than the bobcat. The fur of the lynx is fine and of good commercial value whereas the fur of the bobcat is coarse and of little or no value.

"Unless one is completely familiar with the appearance of these animals in the wild and sees them quite frequently it is pretty hard to say whether you have seen a lynx or a bobcat.

"Rabbits and lesser rodents are the main food of both these animals and their population density is tied very closely to the abundance of the rabbit. No doubt neither animal would overlook a good fat chicken if one was handy and there was a scarcity of their natural food.

"Contrary to many 'old wives' tales, the lynx and bobcat are absolutely harmless to humans. As a matter of fact they are mainly nocturnal in their habits and quite shy and retiring. At the same time they are curious and will often stand and watch a human if the opportunity should arise."

Take 3-0 Lead

Maroons Nip Quakers 5-4

SASKATOON (CP) — Winnipeg Maroons scored in the second overtime period Wednesday to defeat Saskatoon Quakers 5-4 and take a 3-0 lead in the best-of-seven Western Canada Allan Cup final.

Maroons held a 3-0 lead at the end of the second period, but Quakers came back to tie the score 4-4 at the end of regulation time.

After a scoreless first overtime period Maroons in Mackenzie beat Quakers goalie Don Campbell at 3:12 of the sudden death period.

Al Johnson, with two, Aggie Kukulowicz and Ross Parke scored the other Winnipeg goals.

Leafs Always Tough In Detroit-Abel

By DAVE ESTES

DETROIT (CP)—Believe it or not, Sid Abel would like to be back in Toronto tonight.

"We've played better there," the manager-coach of Detroit Red Wings says Wednesday, "and they play better here."

"They" of course are Toronto Maple Leafs, who dropped a 2-1 decision to the Wings Tuesday in Toronto to fall behind in the Stanley Cup finals three games to two.

"I'd like to play Thursday's game right back on their ice," Abel said, "and if Toronto does pull it out here and it goes to a seventh game, our guys know they can win at Maple Leaf Gardens because they've done it twice."

Big Gordie Howe, who took over the playoff scoring leadership Tuesday with his eighth goal, agreed with his boss and former linemate that playing the Leafs here can be rough.

AFRAID OF ERRORS

"You're always afraid of making mistakes in front of your home fans," said Howe, "and don't forget Toronto beat us here during the season four out of seven."

Memories stirred in the Red Wing camp as they took Ohio, Wednesday of the spring of 1952 when 23 - year - old Terry Sawchuk, a Detroit native, speared the Red Birds to the cup in eight straight games.

Although Sawchuk will be the 13th playoff game for Detroit this year, Howe and Sawchuk continue to inspire their teammates and Tuesday neither of them looked a day over 23.

"We've surprised a lot of people who never thought we'd come this far," said Abel, "and think Toronto figured they'd sweep us right out in four straight. Well, Uke (Sawchuk) has taken care of that and now the pressure is on Toronto."

Controversy raged here and in Toronto over a goal that wasn't a goal Tuesday.

The Leafs watched a film after their practice session Wednesday that appeared to prove Gerry Ehman was not offside when he scored in the second period. The goal gave Ehman admitted the film surprised him, that he thought he was offside at the time.

The play was whistled dead by linesman George Hayes. The score was 1-0 for Detroit at the time.

Sawchuk's version: "Ehman took a pass over two lines from Ron Stewart and he was 20 feet offside. He heard the whistle and he didn't shoot because he knew the play was dead. I didn't play the puck at all."

As manager-coach Punch Imlach of the Leafs said in Toronto Wednesday all of that is of no consequence now and the defending champion Leafs must stand or fall on their play tonight.

At Detroit Wednesday hundreds of fans lined up for tickets that were long gone. Every seat in the 12,500-seat arena was sold Sunday but a few standing room places will be sold today.

HUNGER FACTOR?

Hunger could be one of the big keys to the Wings' strange success story of 1966. Only four of their players — Howe, Sawchuk, Marcel Pronovost and Alex Delvecchio—were on the last cup winner in 1955, whereas almost all of the Leafs were in on the champagne-drinking the last two Aprils.

Perhaps even more anxious for cup glory than the half-dozen youngsters on the club is 36-year-old Bill Gadsby, a balding-scarred defenceman who has been in the league regularly since 1946 without getting his name engraved on the Stanley silverware.

Gadsby, who blocked Leaf shots like a goaltender Tuesday, was bubbling with confidence about tonight's encounter: "We've just got to take it all now."

The Leafs will use Ed Litzenberger, who has shared cup happiness with Chicago Black Hawks and Toronto, at left wing tonight to replace Don McKenney, who suffered torn knee ligaments when checked by Al Langlois Tuesday.

WINGS AILING

The Wings are ailing but ready for the ice. Mild influenza run through the camp in Toronto, and Ed Joyal suffered dizzy spells before and after he shot the winning goal. Big defenceman Doug Barkley, who admits "I've been nervous for five games," twisted a groin muscle Tuesday.

Larry Jeffrey will play with bruised ribs and Sawchuk, who had to be replaced three times in the semi-final against Chicago because of a pinched nerve, now is suffering back pains as a result of sleeping on a hard mattress in Toronto Monday night.

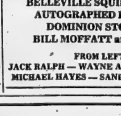
The Leafs, who practised for an hour Wednesday, mainly shooting a final game goalie Don Simmons, will arrive by train a few hours before game time.

"Of course we'll be coming back to Toronto Saturday night," Imlach said. "I'm just worried about our ability to put two big games together. We did it against Montreal in the semi-finals and there's no reason why we can't repeat it."

AT STAKE

The Wings, who were the hottest team in the league in the second half of the season, beat Toronto only three times all year, their worst record against any club. A big question to be settled tonight is whether the surprising club is just reaching its peak or whether it has just peaked.

Detroit has not had a championship team in major sport since 1957 when the Lions brought home the National Football League title. Since then Detroit has been an also-ran town with its Lions, Wings and baseball Tigers.



Should the Wings win tonight, they will become the first fourth - place club to do it since the Leafs of 15 years ago.

The Detroit players have an added incentive for polishing off the Leafs. A win will mean a return to work, family reunions and friends and an escape from the monastic life imposed by Abel at Toledo since the series started. The Leafs have lived at home while the team was in Toronto.

Boyer Homers For Yankees Win

By THE CANADIAN PRESS

Clete Boyer, who is supposed to be the glove man in New York Yankees' lineup, has finally put the home run back into the Bronx Bombers' repertoire.

The willowy third baseman, who ranked no better than eighth in the club's homer-hitting hierarchy last season, belted one out of Comiskey Park Wednesday night and his teammates responded by pretty much trouncing their pitching coach, Whitey Ford, with the 200th victory of his American League pitching career, defeating Chicago White Sox 3-0.

It was the Yankees' first home run of the season and their second victory in six games.

Ford kept the White Sox off balance, scattering six hits, striking out two and issuing only one walk.

Minnesota Twins hit three homers—by Tony Oliva, Rich Rollins and Don Mincher—but scored the winning run on a passed ball in a 7-6 triumph over Washington Senators in the only other AL game played. Los Angeles struck for two runs in the ninth and a 3-2 victory over Detroit Tigers.

Two games were postponed by rain—Boston at Baltimore and Cleveland at Kansas City.

JOMER ENDS DUEL

Ford, who was the Als winningest pitcher last year with a 24-7 record, was locked in a duel with White Sox starter Gary Peters until Boyer hit his bases - empty homer in the fifth.

The Yankees made it 2-0 in the seventh without a hit. Elston Howard reached first on an interference call against catcher Gerry McNertney, took second on a passed ball, reached third on an infield out and scored on a wild pitch. Howard also singled in the Yankees' final run in the eighth.

Zoilo Versalles drew a walk with two out to get the Twins started in the eighth inning, streaked to third on a single by Bernie Allen and scampered home when rookie catcher Mike Brumley let a pitch get by him for a passed ball. George Banks struck out on the next pitch, ending the inning.

Senators had tied it in the top of the inning when Moose Skowron hit his third homer and Chuck Cottier drove in another run with a sacrifice fly.

The Tigers pulled ahead 2-1 in the top of the ninth on Jerry Lumpe's run-producing single, then headed into the bottom half with Hank Aguirre working on a three-hitter against the Angels.

Aguirre, however, was lifted after Albie Pearson opened with a single and Dave Wickersham couldn't hold the lead. Jim Fregosi doubled Pearson home, then scored the clincher on a single by Lee Thomas.

Lose 7-5 But...

Trappers Battle Marlies

NORTH BAY (CP) — North Bay Trappers are given no chance at all in their Eastern Canada Memorial Cup semi-final series against Toronto Marlboros but the Trappers aren't giving up without a fight.

Wednesday night they battled the Marlboros gamely before bowing 7-5 to give the latter a 3-0 lead in the best-of-seven set. Toronto can wrap it up with a win in the fourth game here Friday night.

Despite the close score, Marlboros are favored to sweep the series in four games to advance to the Eastern Canada finals against Montreal NDG Maroons. The winner of that series will meet either Edmonton Oil Kings, defending Memorial Cup champions, or Estevan Bruins.

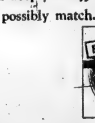
The opening two games, won 12-3 and 11-4 by Marlboros, suggested an easy time for the Toronto crew for the next two games. However, the Trappers came out fighting Wednesday and refused to quit until the final buzzer.

TWO FOR STEMKOWSKI

Peter Stemkowski led the Toronto attack with a pair of goals and Wayne Carleton, Gary Dineen, Mike Walton, Andre Champagne and Jim McKenney shared the others.

Olympic star Dineen, a centre who fired four goals and assisted on two others in the second game, also had three assists. Dineen originally planned to miss the trip north due to an upcoming school exam, but decided at the last minute to go along.

Mati Oreskovich, Bob Leduc, Bob Pallat, Marty Reynolds and Emile Angelo replied for North Bay. Oreskovich and Leduc, both of Sudbury Cubs, and Pallat of Espanola Eagles were picked up for the playoffs.



North Bay goalie Gaye Cooley, often deserted by a weak defence throughout the series, stopped 43 shots, including 21 in the third period. Gary Smith made 24 saves for Toronto.

PHILS OPTION PITCHER

PHILADELPHIA (CP)—Philadelphia Phillies of the National League Wednesday optioned 18-year-old righthander Dave Bennett to Chattanooga of the Class AA Southern League. The younger brother of Philadelphia southpaw Dennis Bennett still counts on the Phillies roster, and is subject to 24-hour recall.

WILLIE OFFERED BONUS

SACRAMENTO, Calif. (AP)— Sacramento restaurant owner Sam Gordon has offered Willie Mays a $10,000 bonus if the San Francisco Giant outfielder can hit 62 home runs this year. Mays has hit six home runs in his first eight games. Three years ago Gordon paid $5,000 for the ball Roger Maris hit for his 61st home run and gave the ball to Maris.

NHL May Name Cup For Conn. Smythe

DETROIT (CP)—It now appears certain that Conn Smythe, one of the most respected men in National Hockey League history, will be honored by having a new trophy named after him.

But, rumors to the contrary, he must wait until the league's annual meeting June 8-11 in Montreal to have it made official.

A week ago league president Clarence Campbell announced that he would propose at the meeting establishment of a trophy which would be presented to the outstanding player in the Stanley Cup final series.

However, he said the idea was in the formative stage with many details still to be ironed out. One thing was certain. The trophy would not be commercially sponsored and will carry a substantial cash award with it.

A few days later Smythe's son, Stafford, president of Toronto Maple Leafs, said he would definitely propose to the meeting that the trophy be named after his father.

He said: "I will put dad's name up and don't think there will be any difficulty. I'm sure other hockey men recognize what he has done for hockey and will be anxious to honor him in this way."

Earlier this week there was a rumor that the trophy had already been named after Smythe.

UP TO GOVERNORS

"That's untrue," said Campbell. "The league governors meet in Montreal I will propose the trophy then. It will be up to them to decide on whom to name it after."

The league governors are Walter Brown of Boston Bruins, James D. Norris of Chicago Black Hawks, Bruce Norris of Detroit Red Wings, Frank Selke of Montreal Canadiens, Bill Jennings of New York Rangers and Stafford Smythe.

Four governors, when asked by The Canadian Press, stated they would approve the trophy being named after Conn Smythe. Besides his son, they were Selke, Bruce Norris and James Norris.

Brown and Jennings were not available for comment.

Although he has no say in the matter, Murray (Muzz) Patrick, vice-president and general manager of the Rangers, struck a dissenting note.

"I would think Smythe's name would naturally be considered at the meeting. But there are many others who should be honored. For years I've wanted one named after my father, Lester Patrick. I think he's more deserving than many men who now have trophies honoring them."

Oil Kings Beaten By Estevan

ESTEVAN, Sask. (CP)—Estevan Bruins rode a two-goal second period to a 5-3 victory over Edmonton Oil Kings Wednesday to cut Edmonton's lead in the best-of-seven Western Canada Memorial Cup final to 2-1.

The two goals, by pickup Fran Huck of Regina Pats.

Don Smith, Butch Morris, and pickup Larry Mickey of Moose Jaw Canucks were the other scorers for the Saskatchewan champions. For Edmonton, defending Memorial Cup champions, Ron Anderson, Graham Longmur and Greg Tomalty did the scoring.

Giants Stop Braves

BY THE CANADIAN PRESS

Los Angeles Dodgers are in trouble.

Last year, when they won the National League pennant by six games, a healthy Sandy Koufax won 25 games—just over one-quarter of their total.

Today, Sandy's one victory represents 100 per cent of the Dodgers' output. And he's far from healthy.

The ace lefty was forced out of the game with St. Louis Cardinals after the first inning Wednesday night with an elbow inflammation and a slight muscle tear in his left forearm.

Before he left, Koufax unleashed a rare wild third strike that eventually led to Charley James' three - run homer and 7-6 victory for the Cardinals. It was the seventh straight defeat for the Dodgers.

OUT FOR WEEK

Dr. I. C. Middleman, St. Louis team physician, estimated Koufax would miss at least one or two pitching turns. He normally pitches every four days.

"Sandy told me his arm had been hurting on and off since spring training," Dr. Middleman said. "He hadn't bothered to report it, feeling he could work it out.

"He is exquisitely tender and has a swelling on the inside of his left forearm. It is rigid and just like a hot dog. He also has an inflammation of his left elbow.

"I don't think any serious damage has been done to the cartilage in his elbow, or to the slight tear apparent in his forearm. I don't expect to find any calcification or chips, but I want to see the x-ray results first.

"He was visibly hurt when he threw that wild third strike in the first. This type of disorder is tricky and can be dangerous without proper care."

SHADES OF 1962

The injury immediately recalled the 1962 season when the Dodger southpaw suffered a circulatory ailment in a finger of his pitching hand and missed half the season. The Dodgers, leading the league when Koufax was sidelined, eventually lost the pennant in a playoff with San Francisco.

Elsewhere in the National League Wednesday night, Hamilton Colts blanked Cincinnati Reds, 2-0 and San Francisco Giants stopped Milwaukee Braves 8-4. Rain halted Pittsburgh at Philadelphia and Chicago at New York.

Koufax got into trouble when Bill White swung and, missed for the third strike and the ball got by catcher John Roseboro, enabling White to reach first. Koufax then walked Ken Boyer and gave up the home run pitch to Jones.

Willie McCovey belted home runs in the first three times at bat for the Giants to overshadow two homers by the Braves' Joe Torre.

Toronto Driver On Top

By STEPHEN SCOTT

SAULT STE. MARIE, Ont. (CP)—John Merriman of Toronto is turning a pleasure trip into a lesson in driving for some of the best rally drivers in North America and Europe.

The 37-year-old former racing driver who says he is having an enjoyable journey home from a business trip is leading the 4,000-mile cross - Canada auto rally.

To maintain the lead he has had to give a performance of near perfect driving under difficult conditions—conditions that have knocked out some experienced drivers.

Merriman is driving a six-week-old Chevelle. If he maintains his leadership he will win the $1,000 first prize for overall winner and $1,000 for first privately-entered car. He would be the first entry in the four-year history of the rally to win both prizes.

Manson looked at his watch incorrectly on the first day of the rally and has a result they reported to a check point late and lost their one point.

Merriman was Canadian racing champion in the 1,000 cc class of cars in 1961 and 1962. He broke his spine in 1962 and has not raced since.

ROSS IS SECOND

Second in the rally is Klaus Ross of Toronto, an employee in the plant where Merriman is manager, who shared the leadership Tuesday. Ross, with John Bird as navigator, drove his factory-entered Volvo past a turnoff during the speed test at Sandilands Forest Reserve in Manitoba and lost a point.

Maurice Carter of Toronto and Ian Worth of Montreal, driving a Chevy II are third with six penalty points. They had been leaders earlier in the week.

Vaclav Bobek, Czechoslovakian national champion, and Jacques Quec of Hawkesbury, Ont. are fourth in a Skoda with seven points.

Bobek is the highest European, a position he took over from Belgium's Olivier Gendebien, who now has 10 penalty points and is seventh.

Fifth are Blair Bunch of St-Bruno, Que., and Robin Edwards of Fabreville, Que., in a Skoda. Scott Harvey of Dearborn Heights, Mich., and Bob Mollman of Cleveland in a Valiant, and Paul MacLennan and Arthur Dempsey of Toronto in a Falcon, all with eight points.

Trans-Canada Rally Standings

TORONTO (CP)—Here is the standing in the trans-Canada 4,000-mile Vancouver - Montreal auto rally after the fourth Winnipeg-Sault Ste. Marie leg. The standing shows in order: The drivers, home towns, make of car and penalty points):

2. Klaus Ross, John Bird, both Toronto, Volvo, 2.

Barons Nip Aces 2-1, Lead 3-0

CLEVELAND (AP) — Cleveland Barons came from behind with a goal in each of the last two periods Wednesday to beat Quebec Aces 2-1 and take a 3-0 lead in the American Hockey League's final Calder Cup playoff series.

The victory was the eighth straight in the playoffs for the Barons, who defeated Rochester two straight and then eliminated Hershey in three games to enter the series against Quebec. The Aces led the AHL Eastern Division at the end of the regular season. Cleveland finished third in the Western Division.

Ed Hoekstra, a former Baron, gave the Aces the first goal late in the first period while Cleveland's Ray Brunel was serving a hooking penalty.

Guy Rousseau's goal in the 1st minute of the second period tied the score at 1-1 and Ray Kinasewich scored the clincher early in the third.

Both goaltenders were outstanding. Jean-Guy Morissette made several spectacular saves for Cleveland and blocked a total of 29 shots Lorne (Gump) Worsley made 40 saves for the Aces.

Housewife Takes Home $84,692.20

Mrs. Helen McGrady of West Hollywood, Fla., split her winnings with her husband, John, and Sister, Afreda Ferris, of Miami, because they helped pick the numbers 7-6-3-4.

Just prior to closing time, Mrs. McGrady rushed to the Gulfstream ticket counter with her ticket and asked for two $40,000 cheques, the rest in cash.

She apologized for hurrying.

"But the children are sick. All four of them have chickenpox," she said.

She said her husband picked the first two winners—7 and 6—because their two oldest children are seven and six years old.

The payoff came on wins of Centerville, $8.40, in the fifth; Rough Territory, $22.40 in the eighth, and Expresilvo, $11.60, in the ninth.

The largest previous payoff in history, also at Gulfstream, was $84,114.20 March 5.

Allan Cup Finals

Woodstock Ousts Ottawa 8-3

OTTAWA (CP)—To nobody's surprise, Woodstock Athletics Wednesday won the Eastern Canadian senior hockey championship.

From the first game of the best-of-seven finals with Ottawa Montagnards, the handwriting was on the wall, and the Athletics finished the job in four straight games with an 8-3 victory Wednesday to advance into the Allan Cup finals against either Winnipeg Maroons or Saskatoon Quakers.

On two occasions during the final game, Monties had three-goal margins. But it wasn't enough. Woodstock punched through the Ottawa defence with remarkable regularity whenever they needed goals.

Defenceman Jack MacIntyre fired two goals for Woodstock and set up two others. Roy Mason shot another two for Athletics and playing coach Ted Power, Bob Robinson, Gerry Stringle and Ron Hergott completed the job.

TOOK 18 PENALTIES

Woodstock drew 16 of the game's 19 penalties, including a match penalty to Power.

For a time it appeared as though Ottawa was going to make a spirited bid for victory and they took little time in racking up a 3-0 lead. Woodstock trimmed the margin to 3-2 before the first period ended.

In the second, Ottawa jumped to a 5-3 lead. But in one five minute session, Woodstock rapped in four goals and went into the final frame nursing a 6-5 lead. They pumped in two insurance goals and called it a night.

The George Bolton Trophy, emblematic of the Eastern senior hockey championship, was presented to the Athletics by Jack Roxborough, past president of the Canadian Amateur Hockey Association.

POSTURE FOR PUTTING

During the putting stroke I don't want my body or my head to move even a fraction of an inch. Such movement might destroy the rhythm of my putting stroke and it will probably affect my putterface off line.

To eliminate any such movement during my stroke, I employ a posture that sort of locks me into place.

You may recall that I have advocated angling in the right knee (1) on full shots to keep weight pressure on the inside of the right foot.

In putting I carry this knee position a step further and angle both knees, as I am doing in #2. Note in this same illustration that my elbows are also locked in close to my sides.

In short, when putting, I try to keep everything steady and inward, and I do this through the posture I assume beforehand.

Leafs Win Opener At Columbus

By THE CANADIAN PRESS

A wayward gust of wind wafted Jim McKnight's fly ball just far enough to bounce off the top of the right-field fence out of the park and gave Toronto Maple Leafs a 5-3 victory over Columbus Jets.

McKnight's wrong - field homer, good for three runs, came in the top of the first inning and ruined the Jets' International League opener. The Leafs subsequently put together four singles for two more runs in the sixth inning and the home side never caught up.

The going was even rougher in Atlanta, where Syracuse Chiefs exploded for five runs in the fifth inning and went on to lag the Crackers with a 12-2 trouncing on a 20-hit assault that included a grand-slam homer by Bill Roman.

The other two home clubs fared better, although Jacksonville Suns had to go to the 10th inning before Ron Cox giggled with two out to drive in the winning run for a 2-2 victory over Rochester Red Wings. Richmond Virginians did their scoring early, piling up five runs in the first three innings to defeat Buffalo Bisons 6-4.

Fisheries Interests Against Spraying to Cut Budworm

By BEN WARD

OTTAWA (CP)—One of the most frustrating outdoors controversies in Canada is apt to take on a new dimension this year.

For some 10 years now New Brunswick's forest spraying program against the spruce budworm infestation has been a source of unresolved conflict between forestry and fisheries interests.

Hunters and naturalist groups may make it a three - way scrap.

So far the main arguments have been limited to the value of aerial DDT sprays in helping to control the tree-killing budworm — thus preserving a large forest industry—and their devastating effect on baby salmon in rivers and streams.

There has been no real investigation of DDT's effect on wild animals and birds. That blank will be filled this summer in a major field experiment by the Canadian Wildlife Service, the federal research agency, with the co-operation of the provincial department of lands and mines.

The 1964 spraying operation is scheduled to cover 1,800,000 acres in central New Brunswick. Of this area, 180,000 acres will be treated with phosphamidon, the remainder with DDT.

FIRST BIG TEST

This will be the first big test of phosphamidon, which was used on an experimental scale in 1963. It can kill budworms but is far less harmful to fish than DDT because it rapidly breaks down in water. It's also 10 times as costly as DDT and is being used only along salmon rivers.

Wildlife groups, however, are concerned about the effect of phosphamidon on mammals, particularly birds. It was sprayed on a Montana forest last year and caused a sharp drop in bird activity. Mekiany isn't using phosphamidon this year.

The chemical is produced by a Swiss firm and is an offshoot of a wartime nerve gas.

There is equal concern about the long-term effects on wildlife of DDT. Several million pounds of it have been dumped on New Brunswick forests in recent years.

How much has found its way into animal tissues? Do grouse, for instance, contain enough DDT and other chemicals to make them unfit for human consumption? Is reproduction affected?

To get some answers, the wildlife service's research team plans to cage small animals and birds at three locations —one in the phosphamidon area, one in the DDT area and the other outside the spray zone.

BIRDS TO BE CAGED

The work will be in charge of Dr. David Fowle, head of biology at Toronto's York University, and Dr. Graham Cooch, a federal biologist who has been assigned to full-time study of insecticides in wildlife. Dr. Fowle is former chief of research for the Ontario department of Lands and Forests.

Some [illegible] flying songbirds will be trapped with mistnets — so named because the fine mesh looks like mist. They will be freed in circular chicken-wire cages 50 feet in diameter, two of which are being built at each location.

Small animals will be placed in small pens, perhaps 50 in numbers. Mice, squirrels, rabbits and such will be included.

Before the June spraying begins, sample specimens will be analysed for the insecticide content of tissues. This will be compared with the post - spraying level. Mortality and fertility rates will be studied.

A detailed report will be presented next October to the interdepartmental committee on forest spraying.

The researchers will be based at a camp near Boiestown, about 40 miles north of Fredericton. This camp also will be used by forestry scientists checking the sprayed areas for budworm mortality.

'Nearest Neighbor Is Queen' Says Capt. A. Farquharson Who Owns Much of Scotland

By ROD CURRIE

INVERCAULD (CP) — Few men are quite so at ease with the possessive pronoun "my" as are the handful of wealthy lairds and clan chieftains who own much of Scotland.

The word tumbles out casually, in a manner that comes naturally only to one born to own just about everything in sight. But for the chap who doesn't own a square inch of property anywhere, there is something unreal about a conversation punctuated with "my lands . . . my mountain . . . my game-keeper . . . my river . . ."

Just such a man is Capt. Alwyn Farquharson of Invercauld, a blond giant of about 40 who owns so much of the heart of the Highlands that he himself isn't quite sure of the acreage.

Although Scottish landowners have possessions far greater than Farquharson, he has several "ups" that make him unique. For instance, he uses "my castles" in the plural because his Braemar Castle as well as Invercauld, seat of the Clan Farquharson since it was established in the 1300s.

QUEEN NEARBY

But best of all probably is "my nearest neighbor is the Queen." Her nearby Balmoral Castle sits on the 36,000 acres she owns in Aberdeenshire in addition to the 11,700 she leases.

The leading landowner in Scotland is the forestry commission, with about 900,000 acres, but the five largest private holders between them have more than 1,000,000 acres. Other big holders include brewery firms and other companies.

Despite the power of ownership, Farquharson is a charming, unpretentious, almost bashful man whose local prestige is immense. But he also has the reputation of being a shrewd businessman, as indeed he must be because mere ownership of net wealth in this neck of the woods, where the land, pock-marked with great grey stones, defies cultivation and is good only for sheep, grouse, deer and timber.

That is not to say Farquharson is hard up. He has sheep, valuable stands of timber, a small mill, collects rents and picks up a tidy sum from sports men who hunt and fish on his land.

Farquharson, like most landowners, is righteat about this last mentioned part of his business but it is known that some landlords ask £250 ($750) a week to shoot their grouse—and get it without question.

Prime Minister Sir Alec Douglas-Home, another major landlord with 30,000 acres, once turned down £47,000 ($141,000) for two miles of salmon fishing right on his Tweed River neighboring Perthshire.

New Farquharsons and his vivacious, American-born wife, a former fashion editor of Harper's Bazaar and Vogue magazines, have thrown themselves enthusiastically into community affairs, hoping not only to enrich their land but also bring a new recognition of Scotland.

He and other businessmen have put a good deal of money into a glamorous, Scandinavian-style ski lodge called the Spittle of Glenshee. And they built a modern chair-lift up the nearby mountain.

It is one of several new setups in the area in an increasingly successful bid to wig some of the business away from the more famous continental winter resorts.

Mrs. Farquharson's main preoccupations are the pair's three established several years ago in an abandoned stone church and which annually draws bigger crowds of visiting tourists, and their centers of Scottish crafts. This started as a display centre but orders for sheepskin rugs, home-knitted sweaters, knitted goods and the like poured in and now she is more or less full-time business manager handling sales to many parts of the world.

Against the rugged beauty of Scotland, they are a striking couple: He a magnificent figure in his kilt and other regalia; she a tall brunette, her flair for the dramatic demonstrated in a voluminous cape-length coat of her own design, a touch of green eyeshadow to match her green gloves and hat.

Relaxing in his lounge, in his hotel, gazing out over his land, his mountain, his river, Farquharson chats enthusiastically about the success the area has had in the tourist industry, but abouts the only industry open to it.

Someone passes a compliment about the waitresses' smart uniforms with their neat plaid aprons.

"Oh, do you like that plaid? It's mine, you know."

Only Four But Plays Chess With Expert

MOSCOW (Reuters) — Zuriko Scots is only four years old. But he already can hold his own at chess, and often defeats grown-ups.

Zuriko, youngest of five sons of a collective farmer in the little Georgian town of Gali, learned to play by watching his brothers.

One day, one of them made a wrong move with a knight. He opponent was about to go into the attack when little Zuriko pointed out the mistake. The brothers looked at each other and decided to put him to the test.

"Come on then, Zuriko, set the board," they said.

The little hands moved slowly across the board, carefully putting all the pieces in their right positions. Then the brothers set him a few elementary problems. After a little thought, he solved them all.

From then on young Zuriko became his brothers' chief opponent. The family's acknowledged chess champion, 25-year-old Nugzari, began to teach him the theory of the game.

ARRANGE MATCH

Then a well-known Georgian newspaper man from Tbilisi, also a keen chess player, visited Gali. A match was arranged with Zuriko. The boy won.

The young prodigy is not Gali's only four-year-old chess expert. Ramola Dolidze, daughter of a local schoolmaster, rivalled young Zuriko at a chess festival at Sukhumi in the su.mm of 1962. Mikhail Botvinnik, former world chess champion, heard about the two small experts and asked their parents to bring them to the festival.

While Botvinnik and other grandmasters looked on, the two played. Zuriko was obviously doing well, but so Ramola would not be upset, he was advised to offer her a draw. The boy, did so, and the two became by popular acclaim world child champions.

DOESN'T ADVISE

Income Tax Explained

By C. A. MILLER

Unwed mothers are always allowed the equivalent to married status ($1,000) on a child providing they support it and have the custody and control. It is not necessary that the child live with them. The child can be anywhere as the main factor is the support. If the child does not reside with the mother, then proof of support must be supplied.

Some of these unfortunate taxpayers will not make any claim at all for the child, as they are afraid someone in the income tax office will disclose the information shown on the return. There should be no fear in this respect as all employees of the tax department are sworn to secrecy, not just once, but periodically. Any disclosure of information on an income tax return is an extremely serious offence and the punishment is severe.

If the father of the child is compelled by the court to make periodic contributions to its support, the mother does not have to report such payments as income. On the other hand the father of the child is not allowed to deduct such payments on his return; therefore he pays the income tax on the money.

Should the mother place the child in an institution and only make token contributions to its support, such as a small gift now and then, it is doubtful if she would be allowed any claim at all on behalf of the child. The child would not be wholly dependent on her as required by the Income Tax Act. If in doubt consult the writer as I do not reside in a district where these articles are published.

For personal replies pertaining to income tax problems, please enclose a self-addressed five cent stamped envelope and 25 cents in coin for each question you wish answered.

Question: I have an illegitimate child which I board in another city but pay the clothes and pay the medical bills. Can I claim any exemption when it does not live here with me?

Answer: Yes. Claim $1,000 which is equivalent to married status and allowable under section 26 (1) of the Income Tax Act.

Question: I have an illegitimate child which is cared for by my parents...I also live with them and pay $5 per week over and above my own board. Who claims the child, my parents or myself?

Answer: You are the only person who legally has a claim for exemption on the child's behalf. Claim $1,000 for it; that is the equivalent to married status.

AT THE PARK — Peter Sellers, right, and Sterling Hayden as they appear in Stanley Kubrick's "Dr. Strangelove or: How I Learned to Stop Worrying and Love the Bomb" opening tonight for a three day engagement at the Park Theatre. Sellers plays three roles in the Columbia release which also stars George C. Scott. Co-starred in the "hot-line suspense comedy" are Keenan Wynn and Slim Pickens. Tracy Reed makes her screen debut in the film, as "Miss Foreign Affairs." Kubrick produced and directed the Columbia release. Two complete shows Thursday and Friday 7.00 and 9.15 p.m. Saturday continuous shows from 1.00 p.m.

AT THE BELLE — Elizabeth Taylor as "Cleopatra", on her triumphant entrance into Rome. The 20th Century-Fox DeLuxe Color spectacle, also stars Richard Burton as Mark Antonius. OTTAWA (CP)—Prime Minister Pearson will address a meeting of federal Liberals from Quebec at a meeting behind closed doors in Montreal Saturday, it was announced Wednesday. The meeting of Quebec Liberal MPs, defeated candidates and organizers in Quebec constituencies has been called to discuss the separation of federal and provincial Liberals in Quebec.

SUGGESTS CUT-OFF

OTTAWA (CP)—New Democratic whip Stanley Knowles suggested Wednesday a cut-off of government purchases from the George Weston Company in view of company President Garfield Weston's statements About South Africa's apartheid racial policy. He was referring in the Commons to Mr. Weston's defence of the apartheid policy at the company's annual meeting earlier this week.

Viewing Public Likes to See Favorite Actors in Flesh

By CYNTHIA LOWRY

NEW YORK (AP)—Commercial television may be free, but the viewing public is happy to spend hard cash to see their favorites in the flesh.

Result is an extremely profitable sideline in personal appearances for popular television performers.

Stars of westerns are always in demand for state and county fairs and rodeos. Ottawa-born Lorne Greene of Bonanza and James Drury of The Virginian have acts, which, like most others, involve horses, a singing group—and one number kidding Hollywood newborns.

Panelists on the more popular game shows are much in demand. Bob Cummings, Don Defore and Morey Amsterdam usually spend part of every summer in the New hat theatres. So do performers who are not considered actors by the television public, including Merv Griffin, Allan Ludden, Hugh Downs and Ed McMahon.

The New York World's Fair, officially opened Wednesday, was just too big and diverse to be handled by a 90-minute television special.

NBC did its level best Wednesday night to provide an overall look at the big show. Some of the photography was stunningly beautiful, but despite almost desperate efforts to make the tour entertaining it turned out to be a frequently boring program.

Their own Executives, 6, NBC; 10-11 EST—Suppense tale of a man on trial for killing his wife, with Hervey Berard and Dean Stockwell.

THE JOHN TAYLOR HOUSE
Opposite Kiwanis Centre

John Taylor was 16 years old when a British press gang dragged him away from his Hudson Valley farm to fight in Burgoyne's Army during the American Revolution. Seven years later, he came to Upper Canada to claim Lot 5, Concession 1 in Thurlow as compensation for his services. His farm included all the land between John and Charles Sts. and extended from the Bay to Station St. The town site of Meyer's Creek lay just over his western line fence. Before long, the little settlement was outgrowing its boundaries and John Taylor was selling parcels of land to subdividers. The Taylor farm was swallowed up by urban development, but the first Taylor farmhouse survived for 150 years. It forms the kitchen wing of the house at 135 Dundas St. East, now occupied by Mr. and Mrs. T. G. Wrightmeyer.

John Taylor had lived in New England and knew the requirements for a North American dwelling: the foundation must extend below the frost line and there must be an ample cellar for the winter storage of fruits and vegetables. The Taylor cellar has stone walls from two to six feet thick which extend down seven feet to bedrock. The floor joists were split from square timber by an ingenious method: holes were bored with an auger every twelve inches and wedges were pounded in to split the wood. The walls, both interior and exterior, consist of 1½ to 2 foot wide boards nailed horizontally to both sides of 4 x 4 square timbers with the space between filled with sawdust. The boards are tongued and grooved on the two sides and on both ends so that they lock together securely to seal out drafts. Clapboard and plaster were applied later when more money was available.

The most striking feature of the one-room house is the old fireplace and bake-oven along the south wall. In the days before stoves were available the pioneer housewife did all her cooking in iron pots suspended on a crane over the fire. The bake-oven built into the fireplace wall has a small opening into a brick-lined, domed chamber with its own flue. The cook built a fire in the oven and left it to burn until the brick was hot. Then she raked out the ashes and put the bread in to bake.

The fireplace mantle is a plain wide pine board. All the wooden trim is equally flat and simple. The only embellishment the pioneer carpenter had time or tools for was a modest bead along the edge of a board. The windows are the typical 9-paned Georgian type. A narrow, steep enclosed stairs leads up to the sleeping loft under the roof. It was here that when the local militia were mustered during the War of 1812, the men were billeted on the Taylor farm and slept in the loft.

The Taylor "wilderness Georgian" kitchen has remained virtually unaltered since it was built. It is one of Belleville's few surviving links with its pioneer past.

Time to Remove Criminals From Their Pedestals

-- Judge

QUEBEC (CP)—Judge Claude Wagner of the Montreal sessions court said Wednesday "it is high time to remove criminals from their pedestal and take them for what they are: Cowards, bandits, and murderers."

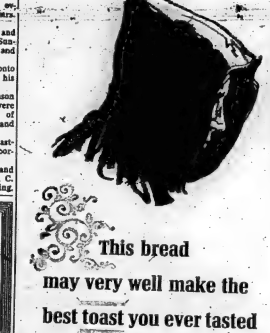
In a sharp attack on public attitudes toward crime and the administration of justice, delivered before the Quebec City Richelieu Club, he said an adult conception of the criminal is needed.

Judge Wanger, at 39 the youngest member of the bench in Quebec, said "it is high time to stop considering these guys as sick persons or oddballs who have to be cajoled while waiting to start over again.

"It is high time to lift criminals off the psychiatrist's couch and to see their deeds for anti-social acts rather than complexes and repressions."

He said an immature, short-sighted idea of what makes a criminal is one of the reasons why so many criminals are undeservedly freed or paroled and thus encouraged to commit new crimes.

"For heaven's sake, let's take off the gloves! Let us stop treating habitual criminals as the pampered part of the population who always have to be given another chance."



WINNIPEG (CP) — A Hong Kong social worker says Canadian prisons may be too much of a good thing for the prisoners.

Robert Tsang, 42, who is inspecting parole and probation services in Canada, told an interviewer Tuesday that Canadian prisoners seem too secure and too protected.

"Their food and accommodation are so good that for many it does not seem to pay to be on the outside," he said.

Many Speeding Charges Before Police Court

PICTON (Staff) — Proof positive that Chief of Police George Ditt meant what he said about stopping speeding on the streets of Picton, was evident in Magistrate's Court here Wednesday when out of 109 cases on the docket — 59 were for speeding — all of which went into the radar screen, in excess of the 30 MPH speed limit.

All of the speeding charges, but one, were settled out of court by paying varying amounts, but one man, Rev. Joseph O. Moore of Picton appeared and entered a not guilty plea to a charge of travelling on Main St. at 44 MPH.

Mr. Moore told the court that he was not arguing about the accuracy of the radar set, nor with Constable George Wright's version, but rather he pleaded for mercy stating that he knew better than to speed, but he did not want any merit against his driving record.

Magistrate T. Y. Wills, in finding him guilty said, "If I were to dismiss this case, 50 per cent of those charged in the future would come here with the same idea in mind, you were driving at 44 MPH in a 30 MPH zone, and I must impose a fine, in this court you are no different from anyone else," he added.

The fine and costs totalled $19.

Two persons were fined equal amounts when they pleaded guilty to ability impaired.

Mrs. Margaret Laroque, of Kitchener was fined a total of $106. when she pleaded guilty to the charge, which, at the request of the Crown was duced from one of drunk driving.

The charge was laid by Provincial Constable Angus Grant when he found the accused behind the wheel of a car in the ditch on Highway 33 on March 28. The accused's husband, according to the officer, had passed out and was lying on the floor of the back seat of the car.

Rodney S. Sanford, a Guardsman from Camp Picton was also fined $106 when he too was found guilty of the lesser charge. He too was originally charged with drunk driving.

Constable George Wright laid the charge when he found the accused at the scene of an accident on the army camp hill on April 18. The accused had driven his car into the ditch.

Wilfred Wannamaker, South Bay, did not fare as well as the other two. He also was charged with drunk driving, but in this case, the charge was not reduced, and when he pleaded guilty, was sent to jail for seven days.

This charge was laid by Constable Allan Marvin when he found a Dep-ot National Defense panel truck which had apparently started up the CNR tracks from Lake St. on March 21. The accused admitted driving the truck.

Nelson Struthers, Main—St. Wellington was sent to jail for 30 days, when he pleaded guilty to driving while his license was under legal suspension. This is the second time he has admitted driving while disqualified. The last time he appeared in court for the same offense, in March of this year, he was sent to jail for seven days.

"If this man feels like driving, he just drives," commented Crown Attorney Lance Metherry. "I guess he thinks the laws do not apply to him," remarked His Worship in passing sentence.

CNR Makes Appointments

MONTREAL — The appointments of Fred Phaneuf as special assistant to the vice-president, and of Emery Leblanc as public relations manager, were announced today by J. A. McDonald, vice - president, Lawrence region, Canadian National Railways.

Fred Phaneuf, 43, has been relations manager, St. Lawrence region, for the past four years and was formerly manager, French Services, in the public relations department at CN headquarters.

Emery Leblanc, 48, up to now assistant to the public relations manager, Atlantic region, Moncton, was managing editor of l'Evangeline, a Moncton French-language daily newspaper, when he joined CN in 1953.

Initial Results Give Liberals Strong Toehold

Premier Lloyd Will Not Concede Victory

REGINA (CP)—The Liberal party established a strong beachhead in its efforts to gain power in Saskatchewan with the election of 33 members on the basis of initial results in Wednesday's general election.

But Premier Woodrow Lloyd says he will not concede the Liberals victory until an estimated 25,000 absentee, advance and declared ballots are counted May 13 and the final results for all 59 seats are announced.

Until then the CCF administration, in power for 20 years in North America's only socialist government, will continue to hold office, says Mr. Lloyd.

	1964	1960
Liberals	33	17
CCF	25	38
PC	1	4
Totals	59	55

CCF held 34 seats and the Liberals 21 when the legislature was dissolved March 18. Redistribution increased the size of the house to 59 members.

Victory margins in at least nine constituencies — five held by the Liberals and four by CCF members—ranged between six and 92 votes with the possibility of recounts looming.

WILL REMAIN

Mr. Lloyd said if the final outcome was defeat for his government, he would remain as opposition leader if his party desired and would begin building for the next election. His cabinet was to meet today.

Mr. Thatcher, speaking at a press conference, said the results dealt a "crushing blow" to socialism in Canada.

"Socialism was born in this province. The people have had it in writing after 20 years. I would expect the NDP to go the way of the old Progressive party. It will fade into oblivion."

He said details of changes a Liberal government would introduce had not jelled. But added:

A Liberal government's first priority would be to eliminate axe-grinding in government operations. The next step would be to call a full session of the legislature.

He added civil servants unable to perform useful functions would be warned to be fired, but more familiar with the system, the number would be small.

Two Million Yet To File Tax Returns

By DON HANRIGHT

OTTAWA (CP)—With seven days to deadline, some 2,000,000 of the estimated 6,000,000 Canadians who must file income tax returns still had not done so up to Thursday.

This, despite the revenue department's new "file now, pay later" plan under which those owing the government money could post-date cheques up to April 30, the last day before late-filing penalties are imposed.

Department officials said it thus appeared that in its first year, at least, the early-filing campaign had not succeeded as much as they had hoped in overcoming the individual's natural tendency to wait until the last minute to pay debts. They look for better results next year.

Now they are preparing for a flood of mail. On deadline-day last year, the post office dumped 500 bags of mail containing roughly 500,000 income tax returns into the revenue department's data-processing centre here.

Legally, all returns must be in the mail and postmarked before midnight next Thursday, April 30. If not, the taxpayer is automatically charged a penalty of five per cent of his unpaid tax plus interest at the rate of six per cent a year.

The department expects that only about 60,000 Canadians will fail to beat April 30 deadline.

Meanwhile, accuracy of the returns has improved sharply. Last year about 1,000,000 persons made mistakes on their tax forms that officials estimate that this year the error rate has been cut in half.

They attribute this in part to the Robert Martin guides sent to all Canadian households, explaining how that mythical fellow went about calculating his tax.

Another factor in the improvement was that this was the second year in which taxpayers had to calculate separately the provincial and federal shares of taxes, and thus were more familiar with the system.

Until then the CCF administration, in power for 20 years in North America's only socialist government, will continue to hold office, says Mr. Lloyd.

	1964	1960

Leaving New Act For Week

OTTAWA (CP) — After three days of butting against a Conservative stone wall, the government has called it quits temporarily to its efforts to write non-partisan ground rules for redrawing electoral constituency boundaries.

When the Commons adjourned Thursday night, a bill to establish independent commissions to do this job was no further advanced than a week earlier after debate last Friday, Wednesday and Thursday.

Justice Minister Favreau, government House leader, announced the Commons would turn to other business today and early next week. He expressed hope the Opposition would "feel in a better mood" then.

Today the House debates agriculture spending estimates.

Complained Grant Deachman (L — Vancouver Burrard): "We've been whooping it up over this issue for three days. I hope they'll bring it to a vote pretty soon."

SPEEDS PROCEDURE

The clause he referred to is one spelling out procedure for appointing members of the four-member commissions—one for each province—who will redistribute constituencies on the basis of the 1961 population census. Hitherto this politically-sensitive job has been done by Parliament itself.

The bill as written by the government would have two of the four members nominated by the prime minister and opposition leader.

An amendment submitted a week ago by Stanley Knowles, NDP whip, would have the appointments made by provincial chief justices to remove all appearance of political partisanship.

The irony of the situation is that the bill's sponsor, Transport Minister Pickersgill, and Justice Minister Favreau, support the Knowles amendment. A long succession of Conservative members have spoken to support the government's original version.

Moreover, debate hasn't yet reached the most controversial section which will impose limits on the difference in population "weight" between rural and urban constituencies.

The bill's provision, allowing a maximum 20-per-cent population variation above or below the provincial average, is strongly opposed by Conservatives who want an even larger leeway for rural ridings, traditionally smaller in population than city ridings.

Two Socred Members Shift Allegiance to PC Party

OTTAWA (CP)—Two Quebec MPs shifted their party allegiance Thursday from Social Credit to the Progressive Conservatives.

Gerard Girouard (Labelle) and Gerard Ouellet (Richmond), elected to Parliament for the first time a year ago, rose in the Commons to announce their decision and formally request seats in the Conservative ranks.

Their departure reduced Social Credit Leader Thompson's group to nine MPs and caused a fresh shift in the unstable balance of forces in the 265-seat House and these are due to be filled after by-elections in Nipissing (Ont.) and Saskatoon (Sask.) on June 22.

In recent weeks Mr. Thompson has almost invariably lined up his followers on the side of the minority Liberal government in crucial confidence votes.

Mr. Girouard, 31 - year - old Mont Laurier lawyer, told the House he was switching because the Social Credit party has "committed suicide" in Quebec "by its internal disputes" and its hopeless division."

Mr. Ouellet, 51-year-old dairy farmer, said he agreed with those statements and was making a similar decision.

Mr. Thompson, admitting his disappointment, issued a statement criticizing "the hidden persuaders" behind the shift-tion. He blamed the Creditistes for "destroying" Social Credit in Quebec.

The defections were the third and fourth in recent years on the federal scene.

Ross Thatcher, with led the Liberals to victory in the Saskatchewan provincial election Wednesday, resigned from the CCF in 1955 and later joined the Liberals.

Hazen Argue, former national leader of the CCF, went to the Liberals in 1962.

Ask Committee to Approve New Sections of Police Act

TORONTO (CP) — Attorney-General William Wishart Thursday asked the legislature's legal bills committee to approve a new section for the Police Amendment Act that would give witnesses the right before the Police Commission the same rights as if they appeared in court.

He said the powers now suggested for the commission, replacing those of Section 14 of the controversial Bill 99, were designed taking into consideration every possible legal safeguard for witnesses.

The original Section 14, which led the bill to be come known as Ontario's "police state" legislation last month, would have allowed the commission to question anyone in secret and, "if they refused to answer, to put them in jail until they agreed to co-operate.

The section was deleted from the bill formally by the committee, as it had been ordered by the legislature in March after public protest and a debate in the legislature. Mr. Wishart said other sections of Bill 99 also will be deleted.

Frederick Cass, who introduced the bill into the legislature while admitting it was dangerous and terrible, resigned as attorney-general shortly afterwards.

Under the new amendments, the police commission still will be allowed to subpoena witnesses, but witnesses will be entitled to legal counsel, habeas corpus, the protection of the Evidence Act and other rights under the law.

Want SIU Officers Removed

By ROBERT RICE

MONTREAL—(CP)—Removal of the unusual officers of the Seafarers' International Union of Canada (Ind.) was laid down Thursday as the price of SIU admission to the Canadian Labor Congress, the 1,100,000-member central body of organized labor.

William Dodge, CLC executive vice-president, stated the CLC terms when union delegates to the big CLC convention here claimed that gangsterism still plagues the Great Lakes shipping industry.

"We will never accept into the CLC a union that has as officers the kind of people who now are the officials of that organization," said Mr. Dodge.

"We will never capitulate to the kind of gangsterism that permeates the SIU."

The 1,600 trade unionists voted overwhelmingly for continuing co-operation with the government's merit system in trustees in their three-year program of restoring democratic controls to the SIU after the reign of deposed SIU president Hal C. Banks.

AGREE WITH HAL

The trustees have agreed with Paul Hall, United States chief of the SIU, in that the SIU constitution take effect on the replacement for Mr. Banks, thus saving the way for Leonard J. McLaughlin, SIU executive vice-president, to step up to the top post in the Seafarers' Union.

In return, Mr. Hall has called off union harassment of Canadian ships manned by non-SIU crews in U.S. lake ports.

As the situation now stands, the trustees will get co-operation from the CLC in cleaning up the SIU under their powers of a trusteeship. law passed by the Canadian Parliament October 1. This law gives to overhaul the SIU constitution, ensure free elections and restore membership control of the union.

Charles Millard, one of the three trustees who has moved into the SIU headquarters here as full - time administrative plans to work with SIU officials —including those in power during Mr. Banks' reign—in an effort to clean out lawlessness and convert the union to democratic views.

He and the other trustees have been given labor's pledge of co-operation—plus the time to implement some of the trustees' far-reaching programs.

GIVES VIEW

He said later that he did not believe that Mr. Dodge was speaking for the CLC when he laid down the conditions for the SIU's affiliation. Mr. Millard

Municipalities Will Get Share Of Uniform Levy

Increase to 6 Per Cent Is Temporary Measure

QUEBEC (CP) — Premier Jean Lesage today announced that sales taxes will become a standard six per cent across the province of Quebec, effective at midnight tonight.

He made the announcement in the legislative assembly during his 1964-65 budget speech, which made no changes in personal or corporation income taxes for the current fiscal year.

The sales-tax field now is occupied by both the province and municipalities. The province has a basic rate of two per cent. Some municipalities collect an additional two per cent and others, such as Montreal and Quebec City, collect an additional four per cent.

Mr. Lesage said the extension of the sales tax is a temporary measure which will apply for the current fiscal year only. It followed a recommendation by the provincial royal commission on taxation, which said the step would provide a partial solution to taxation problems in rural regions.

The measure would be applied pending a full report from the royal commission, said Mr. Lesage.

EXEMPTION INCREASED

The premier also announced an increase in the basic exemption on succession duties in the province. The exemption would be increased to $20,000 from $10,000 on estates of less than $200,000, retroactive to April 1.

He said the measure will help farmers and small wage earners most. It would mean a reduction of about $2,000,000 in revenue from death duties.

The premier also Quebec's finance minister, announced changes in duties on pari-mutuels at race tracks.

Duties now range from 3½ per cent to 9½. Effective at midnight tonight, they will be seven per cent on bets for single races and nine per cent on bets for multiple-horse races, such as the daily double and quinella.

Considering his fourth budget speech, Mr. Lesage said that making the sales taxes uniform would help provincialities meet their pressing financial needs.

Mr. Lesage said it will "permit a substantial easing of real estate taxes "because many municipalities will have their revenues increased from 25 to 50 per cent.

The money will be collected by the province and redistributed. Each municipality will get a mini-

Farris Gets 9 Months For Perjury

TORONTO (CP) — Ralph K. Farris, president of Northern Ontario Natural Gas Company, today was sentenced to nine months definite and three months indefinite imprisonment after conviction for perjury.

Mr. Justice Dalton Wells, imposing sentence, said he issued a relatively light penalty because it seemed to him the offence was "perjury of a minor nature."

The judge said the charge—on which Farris was convicted by a jury Thursday night—resulted from a casual answer to a very casual question at an Ontario government investigation in 1958.

The 53-year-old Vancouver financier was found guilty of lying at this inquiry into distribution of NONG stock by saying that he did not know of the disposition of 14,000 shares in a special brokerage account.

The maximum sentence for the offence is 14 years.

The Supreme Court jury, after the 12-day trial, acquitted Farris of a second perjury charge. A third was judged by the Crown was thrown out at the preliminary hearing.

LAWYERS APPEAL

After Farris was sentenced, defence counsel Joseph Sedgwick informed the court he has launched an appeal against the conviction with the Ontario Court of Appeal.

Farris, who had been free on $2,500 bail up to this point, was placed temporarily in custody of a sheriff's officer until the higher court issues an order for the bail of $5,000.

In sentencing Farris, Mr. Justice Wells, whose final instructions to the jury Thursday had suggested acquittal on both counts—indicated today he disagreed with the conviction.

He told the defendant, whom he addressed as "Mr. Farris," that he had to impose a sentence "irrespective of my own views."

He said he agreed to some extent with Mr. Sedgwick's representation that the offence was "not under all the circumstances perjury of a very serious character."

He also agreed with Mr. Sedg-

Alfie Shrubb, Longboat's Rival, Dies at Bowmanville at Age 85

BOWMANVILLE, Ont. (CP)—Alfie Shrubb, one-time holder of 26 world track records and coach of track teams in Britain and the United States, died in hospital here. He was 85.

Mr. Shrubb had been ill in hospital for two weeks.

Mr. Shrubb, who was 51 when he ran and won his final race, set records by the bundle and when human competition got scarce, he was likely to turn up in a race with a horse.

His amazing career began in Horsham, Sussex, in 1899 in an unofficial race with a fire wagon and ended in Toronto 32 year. later. He pounded the cinder track in 33 countries.

He came to Bowmanville with his wife, the former Ada Brown, in 1946. His wife died that year and Mr. Shrubb had lived here since. They were married in 1906 in Sussex and moved to the United States the following year.

Mr. Shrubb once took on a relay team over 10 miles and won. In 1907, when he and his wife first came to Canada, he began a 10 - year professional career that included a marathon—Longboat's favorite distance — at the old Madison Square Garden in New York in 1910. Mr. Shrubb had a comfortable lead for 23 miles but the smoke-filled air nauseated him and he was compelled to retire.

In their last race, after which both runners had retired, Mr. Shrubb, then 51, defeated the 40-year-old Longboat in a 5-mile event at the Canadian National Exhibition in Toronto.

Only Few Teeth Transplants Have Failed Says U. S. Dentist

PHILADELPHIA (AP) — "Well, I had a youngster who was losing teeth, and another youngster who had extra teeth. I had to remove one for orthodontic reasons. It seemed a pity to just throw it out."

So Dr. Ralph R. Mezrow, 43, a Philadelphia dentist decided to plant the left - over tooth from one child in the mouth of the other patient who needed it. The transplant worked.

That was five years ago. Since then Dr. Mezrow has planted another five teeth in the mouth of that first patient, the last in the middle of March.

He and his associates at Philadelphia's Albert Einstein Medical Centre have planted 95 teeth in a total of about 70 patients. Only a few of the transplants have failed.

As Mezrow says, "the worst that can happen is that the tooth just comes loose. The funny thing is that if that happens, the people who had the transplant always want to try again."

Three types of persons usually take part in tooth transplants: Persons who were, through some quirk of nature, born without teeth and never had any; Persons who lost teeth in auto accidents; and persons who can't tolerate dentures.

Why do the transplant work at all?

Science has found that the human body has a natural defence called the immune reaction, with which the body rejects foreign substances. This reaction also rejects healthy tissue used in a graft or transplant.

Certain specific materials low in blood vessels, such as bone and the cornea of the eye, seem to arouse little reaction and have been successfully transplanted for years. Are teeth in the same category?

Descendants Seeking Information

Does anyone in the Belleville area know of any local descendants of the Crysdale family which settled at United Empire Loyalists in Sidney township back in 1790? The family name could be spelled as above or as Chrysdale.

Mr. J. H. Crysdale, Ottawa, a great-great-great- grandson of the original John Crysdale is looking for possible family descendants in the Belleville area. Joshua Crysdale, a son of the original settler moved to Thurlow while his son John (the great-great-grandfather of the Ottawa man) moved to Napanee in 1842.

Anyone knowing of any Crysdale descendants still living in the Belleville area are asked to get in touch with J. H. Crysdale, 233 Semic Ave., Ottawa 3, or with Mrs. Wilfred Chase, Corbyville, Ont.

Hospital Directors Hold Annual Meeting Despite Challenge of Their Right

TRENTON — The 13th annual meeting of the Trenton Memorial Hospital Board of Directors was held in the hospital board room last night with a "capacity audience" at the meeting—the best attendance ever.

The meeting was conducted by board chairman S. G. Graham and reports were heard from secretary G. R. Williamson; hospital administrator Miss Hazel Naudett; Mrs. L. H. Bearne, president of the Women's Auxiliary, Mrs. F. R. Hatch of the RCAF Auxiliary, and Dr. W. L. Griffiths of the medical staff.

The meeting was opened by a prayer by Capt. James Johnston of the Salvation Army Corps and following the invocation, Dr. J. Y. Byrne challenged the right of the board to hold the meeting at that time as he said the obligation of the board to notify the public of the annual meeting two weeks before the meeting had not been fulfilled.

However, Mr. Graham pointed out that the meeting had been advertised twice in the local newspaper, once each week preceding the meeting. "I think this meeting is legally constituted," said Mr. Graham. "I will carry on."

In his opening address Mr. Graham welcomed those present and thanked the press for coverage during the past year. He stressed the need of the hospital for "public relations" as opposing "publicity".

Mr. Graham said that he thought the system of trusteeship for hospitals was "outmoded" and trustees would find their actions increasingly controlled by central government agencies in the future or a system of rule by "remote control", but he said "reports control" of Trenton hospital was safely in the near future. He said that trustees should stand on their own feet and make their own decisions as a sure formula for failure was to try to "please everyone."

TO BUILD ADDITION

Mr. Williamson said that the board, after due consideration, had decided to build an addition onto the front of the hospital and that this work would be done in 1965. More space for waiting relatives and friends of the patients will be provided downstairs and the second storey of the addition will be used for a sun porch for ambulatory patients.

Mr. Williamson said also that the recently constructed pathology department, which has cost $30,000 to date, would cost another $15,000 before completed. He pointed out that it had cost $27,777 to operate the hospital in 1963, while $271,032 had been taken in, and this was made up for from most part of $761,043 from the Ontario Hospital Services Commission. However, money from the commission cannot be used to finance capital expenditures and this is carried out with half the differential between basic ward allowances and semi-private and private charges. Hence, donations from the public were welcomed, Mr. Williamson said, as these could be applied to capital improvements and additions.

Miss Naudett said that 1963 had been a very successful year. The average daily population had been 106, compared with 104 in 1962. During the year, 6,397 adults and children were admitted and 936 babies born. The average length stay in the hospital was 7.9 days. Patients had been served 52,694 meals and the hospital had "lost" five cents on each of these meals, as it costs 85 cents a day to feed one patient, while the allowance for this is 90 cents. One patient costs $14.70 per day for care; ten work hours per day for each every patient and two employees are required to look after the wants of every patient.

Mrs. Bearne said that the women's auxiliary, with a membership of 317 had put in 1800 hours of voluntary work during the year.

From money raised at a tea, Rose Tag Days and Fiesta Day last year, the hospital auxiliary supplied such things as a TV set for the children's lounge, toys, games, etc., for the children, and comforts for adult patients. Auxiliary members operate a gift shop from which patients may buy such things as candy, gum, nuts paper and other "little necessities" at reduced prices. Mrs. Bearne praised the work of the RCAF auxiliary in assisting the hospital auxiliary in every way.

Mrs. Hatch said that the RCAF auxiliary membership was growing and that the body hoped to be able to assist the hospital auxiliary in a more concrete way in 1964.

Dr. Griffiths said that 1963 had been a busy year, but the most eventful year" in the hospital's history. He said that while the new addition would only been opened around two years ago, the board would soon have to start building for years of expansion. In 1961, 3,000 outpatients were treated — in 1963, 9,000.

Miss Naudett and Mrs. Bearne echoed Mr. Graham's plea that what was needed was good "public relations and not "publicity."

Mrs. Hatch, the last meeting were touched on by Mr. Williamson, who said that a hospital was quite small — they do make it put out. Mr. Graham said that what the patient and his relatives must forget was that a patient's diet is prescribed by his doctor. He challenged anyone present to come up to the hospital dining room and order a 55 cent meal and compare it with anything he could get elsewhere.

Mr. Graham also said that the "cost system" by which only two visitors at a time are allowed to visit the patient, presented problems, but he pointed out that the patient was in the institution to be made well, and not to visit with friends, who wouldn't visit them when they were well and in their own homes.

Rev. D. Wilson Elected Director of Heart Society

TRENTON — Rev. Douglas Wilson of Marmora Street, Trenton, was Wednesday night elected director of the Trenton chapter of the Ontario Heart Foundation. Immediate past president is charter president Douglas Rushbrid; vice-president, Ralph Weaver; treasurer, Douglas Adams; public relations, Daniel Swift.

At the annual meeting, Murray Robertson, executive director of the foundation at provincial level, told the chapter that the foundation expects to spend upwards of $800,000 this year in Ontario for clinical and other research into the cause and a cure for various types of heart disease. Mr. Rob ertson said that of the monies collected by public subscription throughout the province, 86 per cent goes for research; 14 per cent for administrative costs of maintaining the foundation. In the Trenton area, $1,700 was raised this year.

Accompanying Mr. Robertson were Miss Esther Richards, the foundation's public relations officer for Ontario and Mrs. Eleanor Hunter, district and co-ordinator for the province.

On display at the meeting were surgical instruments used in modern heart surgery. Money raised by the foundation has gone towards the development of such things as plastic valves for the aorta and nylon arteries.

Mr. Senik said today the local chapter would concentrate today on public education by the press, radio and TV before local groups the problems of heart disease and how they can be solved in Canada, and throughout the world.

Boy and Dog Just Took Little Stroll

TRENTON — Danny Gallant and his dog "Chipper" slept well last night. They should have because they took a two-mile stroll before bedding down.

Danny is the son of Mr. and Mrs. John Gallant of Skyview Heights, off the Belleville-Trenton Road. He was out playing with Chipper in the afternoon and wasn't allowed supper until after his parents and the neighbors searched the immediate neighborhood, then notified Trenton police, who immediately started an intensive search of the bayside area. Meanwhile, Danny and Chipper had got up as far as Marmora St., in the vicinity of Gilmour and Thera, before they were seen by an alert Gould Park driver, Ronald Griffiths, the father of a small family himself.

Ron thought it "funny" that such a young child was out walking around unattended at 4:30 p.m., and when he had delivered his fare returned to Danny, who had got as far as West St. (and Chipper too) by this time. Danny and Chipper were picked up, the police notified and the two vagabonds returned home to worried parents.

Bill Farrar Thanked by Hockey Team

TRENTON—When the St. Thomas' Juvenilla "A" Hockey Team was in Trenton early this month, taking part in playoff games with the Trenton Legion team, Bill Farrar appointed himself a committee of one to "show the boys 'Roe town," and take the visitors on a tour. This included a trip to the top of Mount Pelion, a conducted tour through the OMC division of the Outboard Marine plant, and a "flying" visit to RCAF Station Trenton and No. 6 Repair Depot.

This week, Bill received a heartfelt letter of thanks from the team's public relations' officer, who appreciated the public relations' gesture made by Bill.

In the advertisement of R. F. Kuntar and Sons Ltd. which appeared Thursday, April 23rd, the description of the "Layfayette" should have read six speakers instead of four.

Three Members of Hospital Board Given 3-Year Terms

TRENTON — At last night's 13th annual meeting of the Trenton Memorial Hospital Board of Directors, S. G. Graham, present board chairman, and, in his own words, "the prime instigator of the hospital," was re-elected to the board for a three-year term. Also re-elected for similar terms were board members Mrs. Nellis Bain and O. M. Newton.

The hospital board room was crowded to an almost uncomfortable state for the election and when Mr. Graham explained that only those who had purchased a life membership (at the cost of $100) were eligible to vote for directors, this was challenged by Grant Rathbun, who said that he was a life member. Mr. Rathbun said that it seemed a strange procedure that a ratepayer and others were "invited" to attend the annual meeting through the press, and upon arriving at the meeting found that they were unable to vote.

"It seems undemocratic to me," said Mr. Rathbun, "the board is still responsible to the benture debt for this hospital — hence the ratepayers are contributing. If they don't have a vote, unless they pay out more of their own money for the private people, such as auxiliary members, have put a lot of voluntary work into the hospital, but they don't have a vote. Others have contributed financially in the past — they have helped — yet they don't have a vote."

Mr. Graham explained further that the system of voting had been set up when the board was formed, approved by the then Department of Health and later by the Ontario Hospital Services Commission. He said that only one who had purchased a life membership outright or anyone who had bought one over a four-year period or anyone who had contributed $25 thirty days before the annual meeting were eligible voters.

Mr. Rathbun said that the present board should pass legislation to make it possible for all ratepayers to vote.

STORM OF PROTEST

Following the conversation between Mr. Graham and Mr. Rathbun, Secretary G. R. Williamson announced ballots would be handed out to everyone in the room, but that these must be signed before being passed back for counting.

This announcement raised a storm of protest.

"I never heard of anyone signing a ballot," said Clyde Mason. "I challenge you now to ask anyone to sign a ballot," said Mr. Rathbun.

Following a host of suggestions as to how the vote could be conducted without the signing of ballots — and still making sure that no unauthorized person handed in a ballot, Mr. Williamson agreed to the signing of their ballots unsigned, provided each person handing in a folded ballot was first checked off his list of life members.

At the insistence of many, Mr. Williamson then read aloud a lengthy list of life members . . . many of whom are now deceased.

And Hugh B. Simmons were the names of D. R. Fraser entered to oppose the three all-time candidates, Mr. Graham, Mr. Newton and Mrs. Bain.

When the votes were counted, the three sitting members had been returned to office. Mr. Fraser immediately offered his congratulations to the new board, followed by Mr. Simmons.

"The attendance at this meeting and a contest for election has been a good thing," said Mr. Fraser. "I hope so many people show up next year and that more people stand for election to the board. In the while, this has been a vote of confidence in the elected members."

B and B Board Hears Of Third Group in West

By RONALD LEBEL

EDMONTON (CP)—The royal commission inquiry into bilingualism and biculturalism took on a third dimension Thursday in its first contact with the West, where every ethnic group is a minority.

For the first time since the commission launched a cross-Canada tour of novel informal conferences a month ago, it heard the case for the ethnic groups other than British and French argued in detail.

An eloquent plea for this segment of the population was made at a seminar by Dr. Bohdan Bociurkiw, 38, Ukrainian-born political science professor at the University of Alberta.

He said schools, universities, the federal government and the CBC should devote more attention to the language and cultures of the smaller ethnic groups.

This approach would contribute to the distinctive national character of Canada, enrich cultural and social life, give Canada more influence in world affairs and promote more tolerance and understanding between Canadians of various backgrounds.

ISN'T WANTED

The concepts of a single or a dual melting - pot society in which Canadians of other origins were to lose their cultural heritage was not desirable.

He said only English and French should be recognized as official languages at the federal government level and that the situation was markedly different at the regional level, particularly on the Prairies.

He noted that persons of British origin do not constitute an absolute majority in any of the Prairie provinces. This group represented 45 per cent of the Alberta population, 40 per cent in Saskatchewan and 43 per cent in Manitoba.

"Other Canadians made up only seven per cent of the total population in the three provinces. The remainder were mostly of central European and Scandinavian stock, apart from Indians.

Prof. Bociurkiw made four specific proposals:

—Languages of the "third" ethnic groups should be taught from the earliest grades in elementary schools as a credited subject on an optional basis where there was sufficient demand;

—Western universities should train teachers of European languages and offer courses on the culture and history of the "third" groups and their contributions to Canadian life;

—CBC broadcast the National Film Board and the Canada Council should devote greater attention to the artistic accomplishments of the "third" groups and —School textbooks and government publications and exhibits abroad all should include details of information about the "third" groups to dispel biases.

Spring Fever Strikes

More than likely you, like many others, are getting that spring urge to get out to the lakes to do some fishing, or possibly to get back to your cottage and get it open for the summer time. Transportation may be a temporary problem you may have, but can be easily remedied by Canadian Tire's new trailer rental service. Box trailers are as low as $2.00 per day and also for that once or twice a year, boat trailers are also available.

Speaking of trailers, Canadian Tire has added to their stock, two new types of Canyers' Trailers, selling for less than $300.00. There's sleeping room for 6 people, a real compact model to save motel bills, and enjoy any location you want to for swimming, fishing and campings. For those who possibly aren't sure that this type of holiday would appeal to them, we have a rental service to Try Before You Buy. Just think, no money down on sales or rentals. Keep your ready cash to enjoy your holidays the most.

Better make a reservation now, as the number of trailers is limited.

Witnesses Tell How Four Died In Rectory

OTTAWA (CP)—Two Crown witnesses Thursday described to an Ontario Supreme Court jury how four persons died in a church rectory here Dec. 22.

Miss Hendine Bechard, 61, and John Edward Horner were testifying at the capital murder trial of 18-year-old Reginald Binette, charged with the shooting of Paul Mercier, 22, one of the four who died.

Miss Bechard, a sciatics patient, was brought into the courtroom on a hospital stretcher. She broke down in tears a number of times as she described the shooting of her sister, Doraline, 65, and Miss Alberte Guindon, 45.

Miss Bechard, who was wounded in the hand by one of the 12 shots fired by two men who burst into the Christ the King Roman Catholic rectory, identified Binette as one of the intruders.

Miss Bechard said that Binette was another man with him carried guns.

TOOK OWN LIFE

The second was identified earlier by police as Binette's brother, Roger, 22, who shot himself.

Miss Bechard said after the two women had been shot she and Horner were put his guns to his temple and shoot himself.

Miss Bechard also testified that the accused twice attempted to shoot himself after seeing his brother commit suicide.

Mr. Horner said he entered the rectory in response to a cry for help from Mrs. Agathe Jensen, who lived on the third floor of the rectory. He said he entered the rectory with Mercier and Binette, Willis is therefore parish priest.

"When we came into the building . . . we headed for the stairs," he said. "We got up three or four stairs and he was waiting for us."

'SHOOT THEM'

Mr. Horner said that Reginald Binette was joined by another man who said in French "We have no choice, shoot them."

Mr. Horner said both he and Paul Mercier put their hands over their heads.

"He looked at me for a second or two and a shot came out," he said. "I was stunned. I fell to the floor at another shot and he did Mercier."

Mrs. Jensen, also a resident of the rectory, who insisted on testifying in French although she understands and speaks English, said she panicked when she heard the shooting.

At one point in her brief testimony Mrs. Jensen lapsed into a few words of English and the judge, speaking French, promptly ordered "in French please."

COLLECTS TEETH

WEST VANCOUVER (CP)—The local school board is collecting the baby teeth of elementary school students so they can be examined for traces of strontium 90 fallout as part of a national survey.

THROUGH THIS HOLE surveyed by Dick Beare of Cook's Wholesale, went $12,000 in cigarettes this morning. The theft is believed the work of gang operating Ontario-wide.

$12,000 Worth of Cigarets Taken From Cook's Wholesale

A gang of thieves neatly abseiled through the roof of a Belleville wholesale warehouse early today and smoothly boosted out $12,000 in cigarets to a waiting truck.

Scene of the early-morning theft was the Everett Street premises of Bill Cook's Wholesale.

Police say the crime was the work of a gang, probably based in Toronto and operating across Ontario. It follows the pattern of similar thefts in Napanee, Smiths Falls, Brockville and other provincial centres.

A total of 360,000 cigarets, packed in 80 cardboard cases were missing this morning from the warehouse.

"They knew what they wanted," said Cook's manager Dick Beare. "They took only the so-called 'popular brands.'"

The whole operation centred around a small hole — 30-inches by 27 inches — sawn in the tar-covered roof of the single storey warehouse. On route through the roof the thieves also smoothly cut through a heavy 6 x 3 beam.

Some of the gang then dropped about 12 feet to the inside and began the task of selection among the stocked warehouse shelves. Other members hoisted the cases through the hole in the roof and passed them down to a parked truck.

Exact time of the burglary was not known. The method used by the gang reduces the hazards of discovery by police patrols checking windows and doors during the night.

Prince Philip Takes Part In Celebration

By DOUG MARSHALL

STRATFORD ON AVON (CP) It was almost impossible to forget William Shakespeare in Britain Thursday.

Festivals and exhibitions in honor of the playwright's 400th birthday were in full swing up and down the land.

The actor's April 23 was rich with bardic quips, choirs of angelic schoolboys and Shakespearean sonnets in Westminster Abbey and troops of actors chanted iambic pentameters.

And every other British newspaper that "speaks the tongue that Shakespeare spake" rises to the occasion with a comment of some sort.

Only in the quiet little Leicestershire town of Ashby-de-la-Zouch does Shakespeare appear to have been forgotten. Out of joint with the rest of the nation, the townsfolk there are devoting this week to a festival of Gilbert and Sullivan operas.

CENTRES AT STRATFORD

Prince Philip flew by helicopter from Windsor Castle to join the celebrations, toured the new £500,000 Shakespeare Centre and the evening exhibition he and stayed on to watch a performance of the first part of King Henry IV at the Shakespeare Memorial Theatre.

Ambassadors and diplomats from more than 100 nations went in procession to lay flowers on Shakespeare's grave in Stratford's Holy Trinity Church. A wreath carried by the Russian ambassador was made entirely of rosemary.

Meanwhile enthusiasts were queuing up at post offices throughout the country for the Shakespeare memorial stamps, the first ever issued in Britain to carry a head other than the monarch's.

And stopping everybody in a bardolatry" was a Watford restaurant owner who put a sign in his window: "In honor of Shakespeare's 400th birthday bacon will not be served here today."

FAMILY PLANNING

India, Pakistan and C... Nationalist China were the only developing countries before 1960 in which governments adopted national family planning policies.

MOSTLY BY HAND

Early in the 19th century, virtually the only labor-saving devices in North American households were spinning wheels and spice mills.

Young People of Presbyteries Hold Hi-C Weekend Conference

Starting on Friday evening, April 17th and continuing until Sunday, 500 youths from Oshawa, Peterborough, Cobourg, Lindsay and Renfrew Presbyteries attended a Hi-C convention in Belleville. Guest speaker was Rev. J. Alistair Haig, principal of Albert College who spoke on the theme, "Where Are We Going?"

Boys and girls from out of town were welcomed into the homes of the United church congregations.

After registrations on Friday the youths gathered in Tabernacle United Church for a camp-re-union and singsong led by Mr. Purden. Saturday morning was started with a worship service and an address by the guest speaker, after which groups were formed to discuss the theme and speeches. Lunch was provided by the ladies of Bridge Street church.

A turkey dinner on Saturday evening made a hit with everyone. A highlight of the conference was the dance held at R.C.I.V.S. with music supplied by the recreation committee. The evening closed with Vespers.

On Sunday morning a service was held at Tabernacle church. Rev. Gregg Richardson of Athens, Ontario and Rev. M. G. McFarlane conducted a special communion service.

After lunch at Bridge Street church, and a few words from the host and organizers the weekend was brought to a close.

Thanks were expressed to Bridge Street and Trinity Church. A wreath carried by the Russian ambassador was made entirely of rosemary.

Meanwhile enthusiasts were queuing up at post offices throughout the country for the Shakespeare memorial stamps, the first ever issued in Britain to carry a head other than the monarch's.

And stopping everybody in a "bardolatry" was a Watford restaurant owner who put a sign in his window: "In honor of Shakespeare's 400th birthday bacon will not be served here today."

Y's Activites

West Hill program leaders have started the organization of youth dances at the YMCA for members and non-members alike. For the past three weeks, the music has been by records but this week a new band is making its debut. The group is know as the Valiants. They will be playing rock and roll and Beattle hits, so a larger crowd is expected to be in attendance. Their next appearance will be at Club Carsa on May 2nd. The dances are held on Friday evenings and refreshments will be available.

How Does One Deal With This Filth?

Sunday evening CBC television aired a thought-provoking and conscience-disturbing discussion, "The Fences of Freedom."

A panel of four men, with Frank Willis as moderator, discussed the slimy anti-Semitic and anti-Negro literature which has recently been distributed in Canada from a Scarborough address.

The panel appeared evenly divided. Two men, one of whom at least was a Jew, wanted special legislation to prevent this poisonous garbage from being circulated. The other two, one a psychiatrist and the other a lawyer, feared that any such legislation could be used to suppress legitimate opinions.

The psychiatrist argued that people who hold such prejudiced views pay little attention to the facts but that the mass of people are not likely to be affected by such drivel. It is a comforting theory—until one remembers Hitler. The psychiatrist's answer to this objection is that such falsehoods have an effect only if the propagation of rebuttals is forbidden. Once again a very comforting explanation—until one remembers that the Nazis managed to amass a tremendous number of votes while freedom of speech and of press was still a fact under the Weimar constitution.

Still, on the whole, we think that the opponents of special legislation against such hatemongering probably had the better of the debate. The difficulty is that, to many Canadians, this is not an academic question, but a practical and cruelly pressing problem. One wondered whether the opponents of legislation would have been able to be so cool-headed had they happened to be Jews, or Negroes.

It ought to be possible to draft legislation against such dangerous filth in such a manner that it could not be used to silence legitimate criticisms of racial, ethnic, religious, economic or political groups.

This would provide some comfort for those groups which are being so viciously attacked. Whether this would really be a kindness to them is another matter, for it might create a false feeling of security.

One of this continent's great judges, the late Learned Hand of the U.S., had this to say about another, but analogous problem: "I often wonder whether we do not rest our hopes too much upon constitutions, upon law and upon courts. These are false hopes; believe me, these are false hopes. Liberty lies in the hearts of men and women; when it dies there, no constitution, no law, no court can save it; no constitution, no law, no court can even help it. While it lies there, it needs no constitution, no law, no court to save it."

What is true of liberty is also true of common decency and of a respect for justice. As long as the hearts of the great majority of men and women are repelled by anti-Semitic and anti-Negro propaganda, the Jew and the Negro really need no special legislation to protect them from such attacks, for their fellow-countrymen will treat such attacks with the scorn which they deserve. Once such legislation is really needed, it will not be sufficient protection, for the very fact that it is needed will be proof that Jew and Negro are objects of hatred for a large sector of the population.

Common-Sense Vs. Law

The U.S. has formally notified Cuba that it intends to continue reconnaissance flights over that island.

This—or rather the circumstances which led to this announcement—creates a new Caribbean crisis. Ironically, it arises from the fact that the Russians are leaving Cuba. When they leave, they will turn over to Castro short-range groundto-air defensive missiles. With these, Castro could shoot down U.S. reconnaissance planes. The Russians, while they had charge of the missiles, refrained from doing so, a restraint which was part and parcel of Khrushchev's backing away from war in his showdown with Kennedy over the earlier missile crisis.

The missiles which remain on Cuba are no threat to the U.S. But the U.S. is determined to make sure that no long-range missiles are installed. Thus it will insist on continued reconnaissance, although this is contrary to international law.

Law would be on Castro's side if he shot down the U.S. planes—but common-sense is on the side of the U.S. The reconnaissance flights are essential to the safety of the U.S. They constitute no additional threat to Cuba, whose continued existence depends on U.S. forebearance in any case.

Invitation to Join Elite

By John Gould in The Christian Science Monitor.

My leading philanthropy of late has been mostly to put the terms from becoming delinquent, and as I look at the annual town report I can see that I am supporting a number of socially prominent families. I belong to clubs, entertain, send their children to good schools, and keep a horse. I mention this with reluctance because I am extremely sensitive about my fiscal generosity and try to maintain a low degree of modesty. On the other hand, I have just been invited to include my name in the next edition of "The National Social Directory," and their communication speaks of my philanthropies in particular. Also my dignity.

I cannot express the great pride that welled up when I found this invitation in my mailbox. I had been involved in a perplexing business problem all morning. The front wheels of my tractor had dropped through a hole in the slush-ice of spring and I had to get them out. This happens, and the backing thrust of a good farm tractor is such that while it will remove mountains it sometimes comes out of it its own way. The front wheels, dug in, hold, and are trigged against the enormous power of the rear wheels, and the latter spin idly exuberantly but without effect.

So I assembled my rubber boots, a long maple pole, two heavy planks, a log for fulcrum, a shovel and a rope, attaching to the knee-deep vernal runoff, I arranged the ax and shovel so I could get them, and, with the pole and the planks, I lifted the wheel out of the aching and held it suspended in the atmosphere while it drained.

Persons of low status who wish, by following my example, to get into the social directory will want to know what you do next. You have two choices. You can put the pole down on the pole with your hand and reach over with one foot to fit the rope into the wheel, primus. Or, secundus, you can stand on the pole and reach over with the rope and with your hands. Either way fills for the maximum of social grace and aplomb, and a great deal of dignity. If you succeed, you simply tie the rope single with the other wheel, and may then drive the tractor away and continue with your philanthropies.

The invitation to appear in The National Social Directory is based on accomplishments like this in the fields of trade and science, business and professions, charitable works, and service and welfare of our way of life in general. The book lists 18,000 folks like myself who have attained social distinction in getting out tractors of one kind and another. Soaking wet, I was extremely triumphant. I drove the tractor, dripping mud, up into the dooryard and mailed to the mailbox to receive this exciting news.

One does not lightly regard such an honor. The pulses of the social graces, centred on Madison Avenue, are stirred by my efforts, and the thought is awesome. In my cutaway and ascot, carefully selected to feed to the hens, my ebony walking stick looped over my wrist I am not entirely free of pangs of recognition. I am asked to list my clubs, and I hardly know where to begin.

The dignity of our way of life, in the country, is what gets me. I doubt if anybody in cities around wears his hip boots in the park with greater dignity than I. When my wife (they would like her maiden name, and if married before her married names) and I go out to change two feet of litter in the laying pens, there is a genteel approach which I suppose is unknown in the parlors and dining rooms of the beau monde. This is where we shine. Whenever a pig jumps a fence, we caress him in a fashion that fairly reeks with class.

I notice the invitation asks me to list both my summer and winter addresses, and telephone numbers. I would not care to do this, because I have gone to great lengths with both the post office and the telephone company to keep details remain the same the year round. I would not want to appear as the only person in 18,000 to belabor the gaudiness of this arrangement. I think it might be mis-assessed as pretention, and would reflect on my good taste.

I would not want to be the only person in the whole book to flaunt this preferment.

I shall, of course, pass up this wonderful opportunity, but not wholly because the book costs $18. I think a dollar per thousand is a reasonable price for social recognition. I am glad 17,982 other people are in my category, and no doubt in concert we might exert a tremendous influence for good. But every so often my tractor bogs down, and I would not want to be invited to a soiree and regret that my front wheels were down. I shall, however, continue my philanthropies in space, promote the arts, and remain dignified in general.

Improve Can, Not Contents

By Jim Short in New York Herald Tribune Review

Walking to work through the college campus these mornings, I am mockotonously conscious of the many new Ken of Americas decorating the curbstone litter. Tiny pieces of metal with backed on fire and seem to reproduce themselves from day to day, for their size and flatness, under the sanitized rounds of the steel brothel street sweeping machines.

These sequins are the toss-away tabs of our newest packaging fashions — the self-opening beer can.

The keystone - shaped pendant will be with us for a long time, I fear. The new can was smiled upon by the wizards of multinational marketing and applauded in test marketing surveys.

Yet how costly and futile the metallurgy, the engineering, the retooling that must have gone into the creation of a most ingenious paradox.

For the fact is that all this effort went toward facilitating access to what still remains the world's worst can opener.

Somewhere way back there between Heidelberg and Ellis Island, the can opener of today's brewers must have mislaid the formula.

The tricks of foreign brew we get (at outrageous prices) confirms that somewhere, in, and has for a long time been, awry.

We have grown accustomed by default to a brew that suggests a combination of ginger ale, vinegar, and just a soupçon of alum for flavor. We have come to "a light, dry beer."

But no muscle - bound Clydesdale brewer, frolicking Indian maidens, or cute cutups on the Chesapeake Bay can alter the flavor.

The ad men have been put to it these days to boost beer consumption in the United States has inched along a plateau of thirty gallons per year per year and with exasperating slowness.

I sympathize with them for the fables they are forced to invent (for a mere 10 per cent of the low-brow market) are just to keep the cerve from drooping. Doing something about the taste, alas, is not in their hands.

Today's Youth Conservative

Halifax Chronicle-Herald

If memory serves correctly, it was a prominent French politician of the 19th century who said that young people should hold radical views, moderating these though the years so that they die confirmed conservatives.

If a weekend mock parliament held in Dartmouth is indicative, students of the capital of Nova Scotia are about as radical as is Francisco Franco today.

For example, the participants passed a resolution favoring no less than a federal committee to censor movies. No doubt many stodgy old dads were jarred to find their offspring holding political views severe degrees to the right of their own.

James M. O'Bryan of Belleville has been appointed regional supervisor for the ground observer corps in this area the R.C.A.F. announced today. Mr. O'Bryan will set up in a voluntary capacity will be responsible for organizing observation or aircraft spotter posts at locations situated at Belleville, Frankford, Hoard's Station and Holloway.

The ground observer corps commenced operation in many strategic areas of Canada last summer. The purpose of the corps is to supplement Canada's radar screen. Emergency during the past few months volunteers of the corps have been highly instrumental in effecting rescues of aircraft in distress and have actually reported aircraft in flight which later crashed. This resulted in aircraft that would in the past have been out of Ontario being found in a matter of hours rather than days. Lengthy searches involve numerous search aircraft which are costly to operate let alone thousands of man hours used, sometimes fruitlessly.

The corps functions on the principle that observation posts spaced approximately eight miles apart and report aircraft to a central ventilation centre or filter centre. Here, corps volunteer plot the courses of aircraft and pass all information to an associated radar station or search and rescue unit. All observation posts are manned by civilian volunteers who are trained by RCAF officers. They will be available for full time being only during a period of live training exercises, or during an alert sudden as an aircraft lost in the area. The filter centre for this area is to be located at Peterborough.

40 YEARS AGO

April 24th, 1924.

While digging near the pump house of the Imperial Oil Company here, Bert Noakes, age five years, went out of his depth and fell into the water about seven feet in depth. His cousin, Jack Noakes, a few years, reached the spot just in time to grasp him as he was going down the second time and pulled him to safety. Had the Grills boy not possessed presence of mind and coolness it is probable that the younger boy would have drowned.

Mrs. Fenwick of Victoria Avenue; has returned home from Southern Pines, North California, where she spent the winter.

When Medicine to Be Taken Depends on Medication

By JOSEPH G. MOLNER, M.D.

Dear Dr. Molner: What factors determine whether medications should be taken before, during or after meals? — T. C. M.

A sane, sensible question! It depends on the purpose of the medicine, sometimes on the irritating qualities (its side effects") and others.

Aspirin, for example, taken on an empty stomach can irritate the membranes of that organ to the point of bleeding. Not much, but a little. Taken with or after meals, it is less likely to do this. Aspirin is a good drug, but it can have its bad points, so we guard against them. That's true of nearly any medicine.

Preparations designed to stimulate the appetite are taken before a meal. Those designed to aid digestion (such as diluite hydrochloric acid for a few people, or digestive enzymes) are taken with a meal.

In cases of hyperacidity (excess acid in the stomach, a common problem with ulcers), a drug to neutralize acid is most effective when taken one or two hours after a meal, because the stomach is then empty and the stomach is nearly empty.

Drugs to reduce spasm in relation to eating are taken either one or other way, there is no choice depends on when the patient gets the best results.

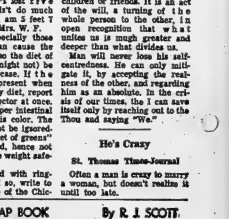
In some forms, penicillin is taken by mouth, and is more effectively absorbed with an empty stomach, or before a meal.

Meals are used for the timing of medicines, though they can be spaced four to six hours apart. Thus "taken at mealtimes" or "four times a day" is no more than a convenient way of remembering when to take them.

When a medicine is to be prescribed daily and continuously, breakfast is a good time to take it. Digitalis is an example of drugs are best taken in the morning so the parties is not inconvenienced by nocturnal urination at night.

These are the main considerations but obviously there can be other special cases. So follow the doctor directions, even if, on occasion, it does pose is just to help you build a habit of taking the medication at a certain time.

Dear Dr. Molner: Does sinus trouble cause distress in back of the eyes and at the temple. I sneeze 20 cents to coin and a self-addressed envelope and a copy of your booklet, "You Can Stop Sinus Trouble." — Mrs. I. H.



Yes, those areas, particularly the temple, are common sites of pain caused by congested sinuses. The booklet explains all about sinus trouble.

Dear Dr. Molner: Is there something wrong when the stool is black. Or specifically, I am 64 and have not felt up to par in recent months. I have pain in the upper part of the stomach, chest and back. I am not fat, but I went on a diet of cottage cheese and fruit, and my stomach shrank. I lost five pounds, but it didn't do much for my stomach. I am 5 feet 7 and weigh 135. — Mrs. W. F.

Some foods, especially those containing iron, can cause the stool to be black, so the diet of cottage cheese might not be the cause in your case. If the blackish color is present when you have only cottage cheese, this fact to your doctor at once. Bleeding in the upper intestinal tract can cause this color. The symptom should not be ignored. (Incidentally, a "diet of greens" is not self-balancing, and may not be best way to lose weight safely.)

Are you bothered with ringing in the ears? If so, write to Dr. Molner in care of the Chic-

Man's Way Of Remaining Self-Centered

By SYDNEY J. HARRIS

Everyone is at the centre of his own universe, like a spider sitting at the heart of his web. This is a precious condition of man, to be self-centred, in the most literal sense of the word.

And when we engage ourselves with another person, our own existence seems necessary to the absolute, while the other's existence seems contingent and relative. We are essential to our world; he is not.

Yet, while this is our deep emotional conviction, on the intellectual level, we know it is not true. Every person is just as real as we are. He, too, is the centre of the universe; he is necessary and absolute to himself.

Treating ourselves as absolute and others as relative is, of course, the primal sin. It condemns persons into things to be manipulated, used and discarded; into means for our own ends, not for their own sake. In Buber's terms, it turns a Thou into an It.

But when a Thou becomes an It — when the createdness of the other person is not viewed as a mystery as great as our own, there is no reason (beyond expediency) to treat the other as a person. Justice and mercy cease to be necessary, and even civility come, basically, from this distorted view of reality.

Seen in this light, the great commandment "Love thy neighbor as thyself" becomes something more than a sentimental injunction or a pious wish — or even a purely religious precept. It becomes an imperative for mankind — a self - protective measure to keep us from wiping out one another, as we seem about to do on a global scale today.

The great commandment means that our neighbor, however he differs from us, is as real, just as worthy and as worthless, just as much the centre of creation, as we are; that the only way we can like some people is by loving them — by loving not the accidents of their personality, but the essential createdness of them, the residual humanity that makes us all much more alike than we are different.

The kind of love we are commanded to have is not a feeling, in the ordinary sense of the word. Nobody could be "commanded" to love his neighbor as he loves his mother, his sister or children or friends. It is an act of the will, a turning of the whole personality — and in open recognition that what unites us is much greater and deeper than what divides us.

Man will never lose his self-centredness. He can neither create it, by accepting the realness of the other, and regarding love as an absolute, in the eyes of our times, the I can save itself only by reaching out to the Thou and saying "We."

Toronto Stocks

TORONTO (CP) — The wind appeared to have been taken from the sails of the speculative market as the price of penny stocks eased and trading barely edged over the 2,000,000-share level in morning trading on the stock market today.

Analysts termed the Texas Gulf announcement Thursday as "inconclusive" and said trading will probably die down for the time being.

Belleterre fell five cents to 57 cents, Bunker Hill five cents to 71 cents, Yukon four cents to 15 cents, PCE Explorations four cents to 68 cents, Glenn Uranium four to 30 cents and Gulf Lead two cents to 23 cents.

Junior Oils, which threatened Thursday to replace penny mines as investor favorites, were relatively quiet. Union Oil rose one point to 15¾ while Dome Petroleum slipped ¼ and Hudson Bay Oil and Gas ¼ among senior oils.

Chartered banks led an industrial rise. Toronto-Dominion up one point to 65, Imperial Bank of Commerce ¾, Nova Scotia and Royal ½, Montbridge ¾ and International Nickel ⅛ in senior metals.

The exchange index advanced .26 to 142.89, industrials .35 to 157.49 and base metals .16 to 66.63. Golds fell .23 to 122.40 and western oils 1.39 to 99.70. Volume at 11 a.m. was 3,058,000 shares compared with 6,297,000 at the same time Thursday.

The market was in a turmoil Thursday.

Investors and brokers alike had been waiting impatiently for the annual meeting of Texas Gulf in the hopes of new information—but all that was said in Houston Thursday was a confirmation that the Timmins ore strike is in excess of 25,000,000 tons and that production will begin next year.

The size of the ore body already mentioned to exceed the given figure and the gyrations of Texas Gulf in the New York market—faithfully reflected by penny stocks in Toronto—mirrored the indecision of investors.

To add to the confusion, speculators started to turn from the mining market and pour their money into low-priced Western oil issues. Reports of oil strikes in northern Alberta have already been confirmed, but gossip of a further strike by Pacific Petroleums sent the stock jumping 1¼ to close at 15 on 103,348 shares.

BUNKER HILL DROPS

In speculative mines, Bunker Hill fell 18 cents to 76 cents, PCE Explorations 16 cents to 72 cents, Glenn Uranium 10 cents to 34 cents and Gulf Lead six cents to 25 cents.

Industrials eased on index, pulled down by a drop of 2¼ by International Nickel, but most sectors of the board advanced strongly.

Among selected issues, Canada Packers A rose three points to 80, Imperial Bank of Commerce 2¼ to 65¼, Canada Cement 43¾, Canadian Tire 1¼ to 46¼, Royal Bank 1¼ to 74¼ and Bowaters Mersey, Canada Packers B and Bank of Montreal one point each.

International Nickel closed at 85¼ and Falconbridge was ahead 1¼ at 71¾.

Volume for the day was 18,-267,000 shares, third highest figure on record. Turnover Wednesday was 15,450,000 shares.

The exchange index was up .03 to 142.63, Western oils 3.62 to 101.00—almost at the 1953-55 golds 1.48 to 122.63, industrials eased .14 to 152.14 and base metals .03 to 66.47.

CONDEMNS SANCTIONS

GENEVA (AP)—Cuba called on the United Trade and development conference Friday to condemn economic sanctions as a violation of the UN charter and the principles of international law. A resolution presented to the conference by deputy Trade Minister Raul Leon Torras did not mention the United States but clearly was aimed at the American trade embargo against Cuba.

He will succeed Major William Remple who will be posted to the Directorate of Personnel (Infantry) at Army Headquarters, Ottawa.

Sewer Line Being Encased In Cement

Actual removal of the tracks is possibly still many weeks away, but preliminary work necessary before the Pinnacle St. tracks can be lifted, was this week started by the city public works department.

The work being done involves encasing in concrete a sewer line which serves the Pinnacle Street area immediately south of the CPR tracks.

Before the Pinnacle Street tracks can be removed switching facilities to allow cars to be moved from the CPR tracks onto the CN tracks leading to South Front Street coal and oil dealers, must be installed.

This switching spur will pass over the city sewer serving Hawkins Ltd. and other area buildings and one of the requirements is that sewers passing under railway tracks must be encased in concrete.

City Engineer William Purcell said today the sewer job was now completed and that backfilling of the trench was being done.

With the removal of the Pinnacle Street tracks railway cars being switched from the CNR yards at the north end of the city will be routed east of the city down the Canada Cement company spur line and back into the south end of the city by way of the CPR line.

said he felt the CLC would abide by the wishes of the SIU membership in choosing their leaders.

Informed of Mr. Millard's comments, Mr. Dodge said his statement was supported by the executive council and was not challenged by the convention.

"Even if it wasn't our position before, it sure is our position now," said Mr. Dodge.

The trustees have been plain in blunt words that the CLC will not permit integration of the rival unions in the maritime field until the SIU is reaffiliated with the congress.

And the price of readmission to the CLC is removal of the leaders from the Banks group. Mr. McLaughlin and others described as henchmen of Mr. Banks in the report of Mr. Justice T. G. Norris following a year-long investigation of Great Lakes labor violence.

WILL MAKE EFFORT

Mr. Millard has made it clear he plans to try to work with Mr. McLaughlin and other SIU officials to inject democracy into the seafarers' union.

"If democracy in the SIU cannot be worked out under Mr. McLaughlin and the SIU constitution, it will be the responsibility of the trustees to change the officers and the constitution," he told a reporter after the CLC closed.

"I'm sure the trustees certainly would not hesitate to do their duty under the act."

Mr. Millard, former Canadian chief of the United Steelworkers of America, was at the CLC convention as delegates debated the SIU problem.

Board Elroy Robinson, vice-president of the Canadian Brotherhood of Railway, Transport and General Workers, also criticism at the trustees for keeping Mr. McLaughlin and others in power.

"You can't pick a hole out of the air and put it around gangsters and say they're changed," said Mr. Robson.

Murray Ross, a delegate from the Toronto labor council, described the ousted SIU president as a "pimple on a large body of infection which still remains."

Richard Greaves, president of the National Association of Marine Engineers, said seame are "laughing" at trustees because they feel Mr. Banks is still running the union.

Max Caraco, a CBRT representative, said replacing Mr. Banks with Mr. McLaughlin is like replacing "Capone with a Machine-Gun Kelly."

Use Your Room Dividers To Provide, Set Off Space

In multi-purpose areas room dividers provide an excellent way to separate functions without "boxing-in" space. Additionally, valuable storage areas in the form of shelves and cupboards are gained.

Wood panelling, wood built-ins and accessories, play an important part in diversifying living areas when rooms must change personalities with functions. Built-in dividers of Western Pine lumber can be designed along any lines and to harmonize with any decorative style you choose.

Plan cabinets, shelves and dressers built right into your decor — be it traditional or contemporary.

If your front door opens directly into the living room, a divider can create the illusion of an entrance foyer. Build a free-standing closet-divider for guest coat storage. This provides a decorative screen from icy blasts of weather as well as privacy from strangers at the front door. It will not interfere with flow of space and traffic — merely define passage ways.

Between a kitchen and a dining room or family room, a unit may have a waist-high top consisting of cabinets opening on either or both sides. Above, there could be a counter with a pass-through, for serving and open shelving running to the ceiling.

The side facing the kitchen may have built - ins for utensils and dishes, while the dining room side might have storage space for linens and silverware.

A unit serving a family room may contain a built-in TV set, hi-fi, bookcases or drawers for hobby supplies.

Planters may be built into room dividers for an added decorative touch.

Brighten Up Home With Windows

There's almost nothing that can transform a house from dreary to cheery like new windows. They let in light and air, make the outdoors part of your home, and add a sense of spaciousness.

With a wide variety of stock wood windows available at lumber supply dealers, it's easy to choose the right ones for any room in any house — Colonial or contemporary.

Many of today's wood windows, made of sturdy ponderosa pine, have small panes — diamond shaped or rectangular — to suit traditional architecture. Others have grilles that can be removed when windows are washed.

Double-hung: opens up from the bottom and down from the top. Like all the other types of modern wood windows, today's double-hung units open easily, close tightly, and are fully weather-stripped to prevent the filtration of cold air.

Casement: opens out to the side like a door to permit full ventilation and easy window washing. It is particularly useful in hard - to - reach places such as over the sink because it opens so easily.

Sliding: slides open at a touch and closes tightly for year - round comfort. Several often are used together to form a wall of windows between a living room or dining room and the patio.

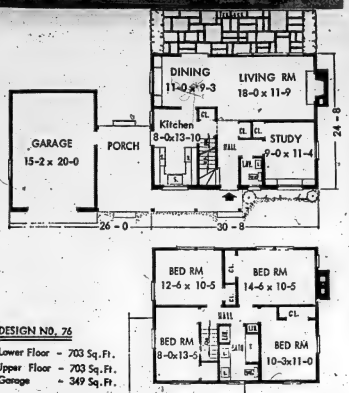
Awning and hopper: similar in design, but awning windows open up and out, giving protection from rain, while hopper windows open in and down, directing breezes upward to prevent drafts. Awning or hopper windows frequently are grouped in banks to make up one large window.

Hey and bow: both of these windows project out from the wall, giving a greater feeling of space to a room.

Fir Plywood a Key To Exciting Shapes

Fir plywood, once thought of just as a space covering material, is now being used to carry loads as well. Fir plywood is getting the full glamour treatment and today is the key to some of the most exciting structural uses of wood in modern buildings.

The hot pressed phenolic resin gluing techniques perfected during the second world war have made fir plywood a versatile material. The way plywood is made with wood grain running at right angles in alternate layers, plus the strength of the glue line, makes the material able to handle stresses in any direction of its own plane. It's this load distributing faculty that makes fir plywood a suitable as a building component in its own right.



Load carrying components of fir plywood such as barrel vaults, folded plates, panel arches, stressed skin panels and box beams are being used with increasing frequency by building designers across Canada.

Soaring roofs of fir plywood arches, panels and beams are graphic evidence of the attractive new engineered components that are possible with fir plywood. Research is continually going forward, developing new structural uses that utilize fir plywood's great dimensional stability and strength properties.

While today's emphasis is on fir plywood structural uses, the other important roles it plays in the construction industry are not being forgotten. Fir plywood is used in all phases of construction, from the forms for a concrete foundation to the walls, floors, roofs, and built-in cupboards. Using fir plywood a contractor can save time and money without any sacrifice of quality. Fir plywood is truly the most versatile member of construction materials family.

Maintenance Is Home Owner's Responsibility

There are many component parts in a modern home. The home owner should know something about these since he will be responsible for the maintenance of his home. Trouble signs that are detected early can usually be attended to before too much damage occurs. Water that seeps into the basement, a faulty heating unit adjustment, a roof leak, these are items that should be looked after at the first opportunity. Other defects such as hairline cracks in plaster, unglued tiles and stiff doors and windows, though probably have appeared naturally falls of a minor nature. This does not mean that minor defects should be ignored. Your house represents a big financial investment that should be carefully protected. A home maintained in good repair inside and out is a source of satisfaction for the occupants and an asset to the neighborhood. Your house will eventually show signs of age. This is inevitable. However neglect greatly hastens deterioration.

Open 'New Doors' for Home

... is it a door that's a window — or a window that's a door? Any way you look at it — or through it — a new sliding glass door framed in wood will double the delights of outdoor living in summer and indoor living in winter.

Sliding glass doors not only give easy access to patio or porch, but can make a living room appear as big as all outdoors — all year 'round.

The new sliding doors made of ponderosa pine, with insulating glass and built in weather stripping, will eliminate the drafts, cold spots and condensation that used to plague glass-door owners in cold weather.

Factory-made sliding wood patio doors, which come in six and eight foot lengths, have been welcomed by families who prefer wood frames because they suit traditional as well as contemporary homes.

Some are available with removable wood grilles in a diamond or rectangular patterns to blend with Colonial or other period architecture. The grilles snap out easily for window washing.

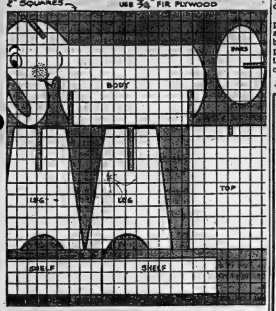
Despite their generous size, modern sliding wood - framed glass doors open and close at a touch.

The wood in these precision-made doors is chemically treated at the factory for weather resistance and durability. When delivered, the doors are ready to be painted, stained or varnished.

STOP STICKING

Prevent paint from hardening in grooves between sliding sash and frame of outside window by moving window up and down a few times after paint is partly dry. Any finger marks left on paint can be touched up later.

Experts Can Assist Home-Owner



Purchasing a new home is probably the biggest single undertaking most of us will have to face, though some of us will be doing it more than once in a life-time. In this important venture the assistance that the expert can give is invaluable — the architect, the builder, the lawyer, the realtor, are all specialists engaged in some aspect of building and property transactions. Their knowledge can save you time, trouble and very often money as well. The lender too is in a position to give you wise counsel and direction. It is to his advantage as well as yours to make sure you do not take on a bigger obligation than you can safely handle. Attempting to by-pass the experts in the hope of saving a few dollars often invites trouble resulting in additional expense, sometimes far beyond the savings expected. There is no substitute for professional advice. The experience of the expert is usually offered at a very reasonable cost. Your own experience could cost you a great deal more.

Bedside Table Out of Half Panel of Plywood

Here is a project for Dad for the room of a small son or daughter. One night's work and very few dollars for paint and fir plywood should be all that is necessary.

Mark a 4' x 4' sheet of ¾" thick fir plywood into two inch squares. Not that the diagram actually shows a little margin of two inches. By closing up the shelf and leg sections vertically and the top and leg sections horizontally, you can easily get the shapes into the specified panel size.

These shapes can be cut with an ordinary hand saw. Curved shapes can be cut with a keyhole saw or made with straight cuts then rounded with a rasp. Waterproof glue fir plywood is best for the job. It is sanded ready to take the paint colors of your choice.

EXTRA TILES

If you have a tile floor, it is a good idea to buy a few extra tiles and keep them in reserve in case other tiles should be damaged.

Rheumatic Disease Unit To Open Soon at Kingston, Third of Its Kind in Ontario

The Board of the Quinte Branch of The Canadian Arthritis and Rheumatism Society held their April meeting at the YMCA, Thursday evening, Mr. R. Freeman, president, was in the chair.

Mr. George Brown, representative from the society on the board of The United Appeal, reported on the general meeting held recently of this organization.

The budget for the branch for 1965 was presented, discussed and adopted by the directors.

An encouraging report was received from Mrs. D. C. Brown, staff physiotherapist, on the operation of the arthritis treatment centre held Tuesday and Thursday evening at the Belleville General Hospital. Her patients from the area, referred by their family doctor, may receive treatment, with 58 treatments given in February and 46 treatments given in March.

On April 10, Mrs. Brown spoke to a group of Red Cross Homemakers on the care and treatment of arthritis. She also attended a symposium on arthritis in Toronto, April 17-18, sponsored by the Ontario division of The Canadian Arthritis and Rheumatism Society.

CONSULTATION CLINIC

Mr. Freeman announced that the second consultation clinic will be held at the physiotherapy department Belleville General Hospital, May 8. Only patients referred by their family doctor will be seen at this clinic.

Dr. Jack Smyth will be the rheumatologist in charge. Miss Ann Winter, supervisor of physiotherapy, and Miss Winifred Herrington, director of social work from the Ontario Division office, Toronto, will assist Dr. Smyth.

A consultation clinic was held recently at Trenton Memorial Hospital and one is planned for Bancroft in the near future.

These clinics are planned to continue at three monthly intervals.

Miss Hilda Cobber, president of the Women's Auxiliary told of the work of this group and their plans for the next few months.

Mrs. K. David who had represented the local branch at the annual meeting of the Ontario Division of the Canadian Arthritis and Rheumatism Society held recently in Toronto, gave an interesting account of the accomplishment of the Society in the past year and the plans for the months ahead.

OPEN FIRST UNIT

In 1948 when the Canadian Arthritis and Rheumatism Society was first formed, the need was recognized for 1,000 beds for long term treatment and care of arthritis, but with no insurance plan available at that time this was an impossibility. In 1960 when Ontario Hospital Services came into being, this plan became closer to being a reality though far from the original objective, the first rheumatic disease unit was opened in 1961, The University of Toronto Rheumatic Disease Unit at Queen Elizabeth Hospital with 25 beds for male patients and 25 beds for female patients.

These centres provide a focal point for clinical research, professional education and a mean for long term evaluation and treatment of cases presenting difficulties of diagnosis and handling.

The second unit was opened in Hamilton, January 15, 1964 to serve the city and area surrounding Hamilton.

Of special interest to the Quinte Branch is the announcement of the Queen's University Rheumatic Disease Unit at Kingston to be opened shortly. June 1st is the expected date that this Unit will be opened. This will provide long term active treatment of patients suffering from any of the arthritic diseases. Patients are admitted only on request of their family doctor. This unit will service the counties of Hastings, Prince Edward, Lennox and Addington, Frontenac and Leeds.

EIGHT AREAS

The province will be divided in eight areas. A unit will be set up in local points to serve each area. Where possible it will be located in University cities.

In addition to these three now organized, there will be one in Ottawa serving the Ottawa Valley; in London for the Western Ontario Region; in Sudbury serving Northern Ontario; with another at the Lakehead for the North Western part of the province and one in Kawartha area. The units at Ottawa and London is hoped will be opened in the next year, but it is likely to be sometime before the other three units will be organized.

The local branch is pleased that the Queen's University Unit will be ready to serve this area soon. The members feel that they are fortunate to have the third unit to be organized in the province.

The Quinte Branch of the Canadian Arthritis and Rheumatism Society is a participating agency of the Belleville United Appeal.

WEDDING

HALL — ARMSTRONG

Potted Easter lilies formed the background setting in Eastminster United Church, Belleville, recently when Patricia Anne Armstrong, daughter of Mrs. Gerald Howis, Bedneyville and the late Mr. Gerald Armstrong was united in marriage to John George Hall, son of Mr. and Mrs. William Alock Hall, Belleville. The Rev. Alexander McDowell, minister of the church officiated at the double-ring ceremony.

Mr. Bruce Johnston of Belleville played traditional wedding music.

The bride, given in marriage by her cousin Mr. Robert Nesbitt of Edmonton, wore a bridal gown of tulle and lace over taffeta. Featuring a Sweetheart neckline of lace dipped to a point at the front and long bishop sleeves. The skirt was highlighted with tiers of lace at the sides. Her multi-tier bouffant veil flowed from a rosette of tulle adorned with sequins and pearls. She carried a bouquet of white and red gerbera centred with a solitaire yellow orchid and mingled with trailing ivy.

Miss Sandra Harvey attended the bride wearing a daffodil yellow taffeta gown over taffeta with a matching headdress of flowerets and veil. She carried a bouquet consisting of three large white 'mums tied with ivory ribbon.

Mr. Douglas Rose, Belleville was groomsman, while Mr. David Burn, Belleville and Mr. James Nesbitt, cousin of the bride of Brampton were ushers.

The reception was held at the bride's home in Redneyville where refreshments were served buffet style from an attractively appointed table with white lilies and candles centred with traditional wedding cake. The bride's mother received the guests wearing a pink double-knit suit with matching flowered hat and corsage of deep pink roses. The bridegroom's mother assisted wearing a beige linen suit with contrasting hat and beige lizard hat and a corsage of pink rosebuds.

For the wedding trip to points west the bride chose a white three-piece bouclé suit with matching pillbox hat, yellow accessories and a solitaire white orchid centred with yellow.

Guests were present from Toronto, London, Lindsay, Peterborough, Frankford, Trenton and Tweed.

Previous to the marriage the bride was honored at a presentation by the staff of the Bank of Montreal, Belleville at which time she was the recipient of a toaster oven and an electric clock; also at a miscellaneous shower held at the home of Mrs. Maude Stickle, Foster Avenue.

Mr. and Mrs. Hall are residing at 150 Godfrey Drive, Loudon, Ontario.

Canadian Artist's Studio Set in Dank Basement

VICTORIA (CP) — A beautiful brunette produces grim-looking art from an unladylike clatter of metal plates, steaming acid and a clanking, cumbersome press.

No airy, skylighted garrett for Pat Martin Bates. Her studio is a dank basement and the atmosphere is odoriferous with varnish and paints and acid.

"I don't even enjoy doing it," she says in the messier moments. "I keep asking myself what I'm doing here."

What she's doing is engraving zinc and copper plates with pictures and designs, inking and running off her creations as prints on the 150-pound press.

Five of her prints were among the Canadian entry that won top prize a few months ago at the Primera Bienal de Grabado show in Chile.

The Canadian Embassy in Peru later mounted an exhibition of her work in Lima and she was represented at the 25th national exhibition of printmakers at the Smithsonian Institute in Washington in arch.

FIRST ONE-MAN SHOW

She has exhibited widely in Canada and had her first one-man show in April at Montreal's Gallery 1640.

Mrs. Bates, wife of Lieut. C. A. Bates of the Queen's Own Rifles, is as widely travelled as her prints.

Born in Saint John, N.B., Pat began taking art classes at the age of 12 at Mount Allison University in Sackville, N.B. Later she studied in Moncton, N.B., went to Europe and in 1957 graduated from the Academie des Beaux Arts in Antwerp as the first Canadian member of the Belgian academy's institute.

She has also studied at l'Academie de Grand Chaumier in Paris. As an army wife, she has moved around in Canada from the Maritimes to Ottawa, Alberta and recently to Victoria. She has a 14-year-old son and a nine-year-old daughter. Mrs. Bates works also in oils and with pencil—"sometimes I draw a lot to renew myself, just do pencil work, and get away from color"—but she became so involved in print making that she now spends most of her time working in this "exciting medium."

For subjects, she is fascinated by the changing shapes and colors of things seen under water or through a microscope. "Rounds" in particular attract her.

"So many interesting things are round," she says.

Successful Living

No Set Age When Children Become Party-Going Adults

DEAR DORIS — I would like to know at what age you should start wearing nylons, lipsticks, heels, also when you can start going to parties? I'm 12.

I would like to know at what age you should start "washing floors"—ANXIOUS.

DORIS CLARK

DEAR ANXIOUS — Far be it from me to set a day and an hour in the life of a girl after which she is required to wear nylons, only the hussies wore makeup lipstick, heels and so on. Not many years ago, only the hussies wore make-up; only grown women wore high heels. Mothers and fathers make the individual rules, and these usually depend on what is the accepted thing where you are.

As for parties, many families take every conceivable occasion to celebrate, from babyhood up, mixed or unmixed Some girls are readier for socializing with boys at an earlier age because they are used to brothers.

The sooner you learn to produce a spanking clean floor and be proud of it, the luckier you are. In the best of families, everybody carries part of the load.

DEAR DORIS — I was deserted by my wife in 1952. She left three times before and I took her back but it's no use trying again; she is a man hater, and a part mental case.

Being alone is ruining my health. I am a highly served person, and going without affects my whole nervous system. I have tried everywhere to get a housekeeper with the hope of living common law but no luck so far.

I don't think people were meant to live alone and I think I have a right to protect my health.— HOME LOVING.

DEAR HOME LOVING — Few of us can live alone and like it; and it is normal to want the physical expression which is possible in a good marriage.

But has it occurred to you that many persons with just as strong, healthy urges as your own have learned to live with them; to live good, satisfying lives? And without benefit of marriage rights?

Such is the human frame that we can re-channel this reservoir of energy into creative work and recreation. It's amazing what plunging into absorbing activities on behalf of others can do to stop us brooding and make us feel fulfilled. Try it.

(Doris knows Canadian resources and can guide you to the help you need. Write to her in care of this newspaper, enclosing a five-cent-stamped, self-addressed envelope for private reply.)

Teachers Meet at Massassaga

The April meeting of F.W.T.A.O. Wellington Unit, was held at Massassaga School with Mackenzie Reid, Principal, Miss Gilles and Welsh as hostesses.

The president, Mrs. Marjorie Faulkner called the meeting to order and after routine opening procedures the minutes of the last meeting were read by Mrs. Joan Fawcett. On May 7 a joint meeting of the two F.W.T.A.O. groups of Prince Edward will be held at Cherry Valley United Church hall. Husbands are invited; also the men teachers and their wives.

Mr. David A. Otes, assistant superintendent of Curriculum for the Department of Education will be the speaker and has chosen the topic "Some practical ideas for the teaching of geography in the elementary school". The spring regional assembly will be held at Collins Bay on May 3. Mrs. Ronald Giles is to be a voting delegate and several visitors will attend. Mrs. Faulkner briefly outlined the important items from the "Minutes". Delegates to the February conference in the Westbury Hotel were Mrs. Edna Welsh, Mrs. Mina Ebbie and Miss Mary Hoff on the planning committee.

ENCOURAGE PUBLIC SPEAKING

Mrs. Rabbie gave some points from the "Guide to Oral and drama in the schools" and stated "Even though today is an age of communication many people are unable to express themselves well, orally or in written work. Canada should be concerned over the teaching English. Children should be started right at the primary level to listen carefully and express themselves. Story telling in most instances is the method we can start by re-telling parts of the story. Classes in public speaking could be encouraged, as well as choral speaking, in an endeavor to develop good speech habits."

The next portion of the conference was led by Mrs. Welsh who demonstrated the "dramatization" of ballet given by ten or twelve girls at one time with the National Ballet in Toronto. These students gave a wonderful performance with each motion explained by the teacher.

GUEST SPEAKER

At luncheon the delegates were divided into groups and Mrs. Welsh's group was addressed by Mr. Ken Pollard who spoke on creative painting stating "Painting must come from the heart". He then answered questions from the group.

The after dinner speaker was Mr. David Gardner, at one time a writer for the Globe and Mail, worked with the Crest Theatre group, the Stratford group, Channel V, and at the present is with the CBC as television director of drama. His subject was based on the familiar quotation, "A funny thing happened to me on the way to the theatre," which dealt with a collection of theatrical anecdotes which had happened to him during his time spent with a travelling theatre group.

At the Sunday breakfast on Sunday the gathering was addressed by Rev. Honeyman, registrar and professor in Crest at the Toronto Bible College.

It was decided to have the annual dinner dance for the year at Maple Inn on June 2. A new secretary to be appointed at the present secretary, Mrs. Fawcett, and Mr. Fawcett will be leaving Wellington in September.

Mrs. Faulkner spoke briefly re salary negotiations, which was one of the subjects discussed at the conference which she had attended recently in London. Mrs. Graydon Calnan spoke regarding the Folk School to be held at Lake-on-the-Mountain, May 15 to 18.

Lunch was served and a time of visiting was enjoyed after which the Massassaga teachers and the lunch assistants were tendered a vote of thanks.

MOTION DISMISSED

TORONTO (CP) — A motion by the Ontario Typesetting Company for an injunction restraining activities by International Typographical Union (CLC) strikers at the company plant was dismissed at Osgoode Hall Wednesday with the consent of both parties. Six members of Local 87 have been on strike since April 14 and picketed the premises to back demands for a contract with the firm, which publishes the Sarnia Gazette, a weekly newspaper.

A few smooth, clean pebbles, nails and a plastic juice funnel or other household items are all you need for "washing machines" for glasses, bottles or small articles.

SPEAKING of MANNERS

PATRICIA LEWIS

WHAT'S YOUR E. Q.?

Must a man always stand when a woman enters a room? This business of when to stand and when to remain seated often is a puzzler. For instance, should a man stand:

1. When a woman enters a room?

2. When he's being introduced?

3. When he has to shake hands with an acquaintance?

4. When someone stops at his table?

5. When a woman arrives late and dines in under way?

6. When a visitor enters his office?

7 When his secretary enters his office?

8. When late arrivals have to past to get to their seats in the theatre?

9. When he's helping a woman off with her wraps?

10. When a woman arrives at, or leaves, the table?

Answers:

1. He should, if he's alone or one of a few in the room. At a big cocktail party it's unnecessary to stand whenever a woman comes in.

2. Yes, at all times.

3. Yes, whether the acquaintance is male or female.

4. Yes, but he may sit down after a minute or so if the stopper - by is male and if circumstances enough to prolong the conversation. If it's a woman, then he should remain standing until she leaves.

5. The man to be, right rises and helps her be seated. It's also necessary for the other men at the table to stand.

6. Yes, as a gesture of welcome.

7. No.

8. Yes. Women also should rise to let others pass and get seated with the least difficulty.

9. At a table in a restaurant, yes, but in the theatre he can just reach over and hold the collar of the coat while she slips out of it.

10. In a restaurant or night club, yes in both directions.

Ann Landers

Kellys' Dog Fastidious About Our Dietary Laws

DEAR ANN LANDERS — This is a true story, so help me.

Our next door neighbors, the Kellys, went to Europe for three weeks. They left their cocker spaniel, "Lucky" with us. The first week Lucky didn't eat much. He was homesick for the Kellys. The second week his appetite perked up, but then on Friday he wouldn't eat pieces of left-over roast. He just drank his water.

The next day Lucky ate fine and continued to eat well all through the week. When Friday came around he turned up his nose at the hamburger and refused to touch it.

Jokingly, my husband said, "You know, ANN LANDERS that darned dog eats like the Kellys — no meat on Friday." We all laughed. Just for the heck of it I opened a can of sardines and put it down for Lucky. He cleaned up the tin.

Now, I ask you, Ann Landers can a dog know when it is Friday. I wouldn't have believed it was possible, but I'm not so sure now. Comment, please. — ASTONISHED.

DEAR ASTONISHED — Dogs do not know when it is Friday. Perhaps there is a logical explanation for this fastidious story, but I don't know what it is. Maybe the Kellys will be able to come up with the answer when they get home.

DEAR ANN LANDERS — Our teen-age daughter just told us she is pregnant. She says the boy will not marry her. I don't believe she knows who the father of the child is. She wants to go to a home for unwed mothers and put the child up for adoption.

My husband and I want her to stay home and have the baby. If she doesn't want the baby after it is born, we would like to adopt it. The only thing that worries me is that I am in my middle fifties and not in the best of health. This daughter was a terribly nervous. I'm not sure I have the patience and strength to take on the responsibilities of a newborn baby.

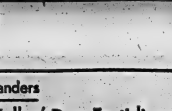
You seem to be able to solve most things clearly, Ann. Will you kindly tell me what to do? — JUST HEARTSICK.

DEAR JUST HEARTSICK — Please, for the sake of everyone involved (particularly the unborn child) let your daughter make this decision.

In my opinion, it would be far better if the girl followed her plan. Your proposal could mean disaster for all of you.

DEAR ANN LANDERS — My daughter was asked to be a bridesmaid at the wedding of a girl she does not know very well. If my daughter says "yes" this will be the seventh wedding in the past nine months and she has only been asked to be a bridesmaid at the first one.

I know it is an honor, but it is also a heavy financial burden for middle-income people. Gwendolyn is in college, not a working girl, so you can see that the expenses are piling up.



Bridesmaids gowns, as you know, are selected by the bride and her mother. The girls have to pay for them whether they like them or not. Then there are shoes, head-pieces and gloves to buy. Only one of the six gowns Gwendolyn has bought looked good enough to wear elsewhere.

I am writing to ask if you feel it would be a step in the face to the girl if Gwendolyn refused to serve? Does she have a voice in the selection of the dresses. May we hear from you? — IRRITATED MOTHER.

DEAR MOTHER — Better Gwendolyn should say she is unable to serve — and be honest about the reason.

The bride and her mother do indeed (and should) select the bridesmaids' gowns. Gwendolyn would be way out of line if she asked for a voice in the selection.

Ann Landers' frank and informative new book, "Teen-Agers and Sex" ($2.95), is now available to help you with your problems. Send them to her in care of this newspaper, enclosing a stamped, self-addressed envelope.

NOTE:

On March 25th a letter in this column from Mrs. G. S. M. asked if the Devonshire potato cakes using suet in the ingredients. Since I was not familiar with them I asked you gals to come to my rescue. It was a man who answered my S.O.S.

FRIDAY

Dinner Menu

Broiled Halibut Steak or Pickerel Fillets with Lemon Butter or Swiss Tartare; Buttered Turnip Dice (add a little sugar); Chopped Spinach with Shaved Brazils; Tender Sweet Rolls (see Thursday); Citrus Fruit Cup; Coffee.

LETTER:

POTATO CAKES (courtesy S. Grigg — for Mrs. G. S. M.):

"My mother used to make these and I never knew how she made them myself now. (I am a man from Devon.): One cup of chopped suet, 2 cups of flour and a little more than 2 cups mashed potatoes. Mix suet, flour and ½ teaspoon of baking powder and then add potatoes and bake (see below) in a good dish until brown. Another way is to roll out and put on pie plate like an open pie and pop in a few tabs of butter on. Also sometimes I add currants to the cakes which goes good when hot with jam or syrup or butter . . . Welcome! S. Grigg."

ANSWER:

Thank you sir. After I saw your recipe I recognized the recipe as what is sometimes called "slithery". If not I could help at any time with your interesting cooking if you would be glad to hear from you.

Important Note to Mrs. G. S. M. and Other Readers: I would suggest baking these Potato Cakes at 400 deg. Fahr. until suet is cooked and mixture is puffed and golden. If Mrs. G. S. M. prefers she can substitute a smaller amount of cooked salt pork for the suet in above. The pork mixture could be shaped into small cakes and pan-fried.

QUESTION:

My family likes ready-mixed mustard sauce which I buy in a 4-oz. jar. Could you give me a recipe for it. Mother Knows I could make myself? It seems to have brown sugar in it. — Jean Mck.

ANSWER:

The recipe I have is used by Marjie Hill in her cooking section to their Fall bazaar. She packs it in the little jars and it sells like hot cakes.

MARJIE'S MUSTARD SAUCE:

Mix together: 1 cup brown sugar, ½ cup dry mustard, 2 tablespoons flour, ½ teaspoon salt. Dissolve 1 beef bouillon cube in ½ cup hot water. Add with ½ cup vinegar to dry ingredients. Mix well. Add 3 beaten eggs and cook, stirring, in double boiler over hot water until cooked like a soft custard. Pour into sterile jar with cover. Keeps well unrefrigerated.

He dealt with the question of coming to certainty about a call to the ministry.

Following a brief break Dr. S. R. Lang (a former medical missionary) began a notable address on the general theme, "Christian Faith and Vocation." His speech demonstrated the fact that there are highly trained men, who, although convinced Christians, have found it impossible to live life in the world, with the flesh and against the devil." His talk on the "Christian attitude to sexual life was probably the frankest and most authoritative utterance that the conference members had ever heard," stated Rev. O. Barrow. He concluded on this theme by reminding of the Beatles that he used to express the theme in modern speech, "All you knowest excellent are nothing without charity."

CLOSING SESSION

After lunch the conference went into open session. Dr. Stackhouse and Dr. Lang answered questions from the delegates. This was followed by brief comments from the Rev. M. F. Poole, Rural Dean of Peterborough and by Archdeacon Walker, Dr. Lang and Dr. Stackhouse, the preacher.

Says Women Were Dropped After Election

TORONTO (CP) — Donald C. MacDonald, Ontario, New Democratic Party leader, said Thursday the government harnessed thousands of unsuspecting women into a "magnificent pull for a good machine" before the Sept. 25, 1963 provincial election by leading them to believe they were aiding Ontario's economy.

Immediately after the Conservative election victory the women were dropped by the government and the Ontario Federation, the Conference of Women "settled into limbo," he charged.

Mr. MacDonald said the conference of women, which numbered 500,000-members of various women's groups, was formed three days after the vote in conjunction with the Ontario government's trade crusade by Hendon Macaulay, products. Mr. MacDonald then minister of economics and development.

The women were urged to "Look for the Label"—buy Canadian goods. Macaulay said 6,000 invitations went out to women to join in the organization. A banquet was held in Toronto in February, with 3,200 women attending.

WERE CHALLENGED

The NDP leader said the women felt they were being challenged to do a job for the good of the province.

But r. acDonald said, all their efforts went down the drain, for the executive council of the group met only once — before the election — and never thereafter.

He said this showed how the government had used the 500,000 women for its own purposes "and then dropped them in a most callous manner."

Economics Minister Randall said there was no foundation to the NDP leader's charges. The women played a large role in Ontario's trade crusade, co-ordinating their work with consumers' groups, he said.

Mrs. Thatcher Not Interested In Politics

MOOSE JAW, Sask. (CP)— Mrs. Peggy Thatcher, the attractive, charming wife of the man who may be next premier of Saskatchewan, is unimpressed by the world of politics.

"I did stick my head into a caucus meeting once for five seconds," she says, "but I don't know what goes on in there. That's the inner sanctum.

"Politics really doesn't do anything to me."

Mrs. Thatcher's husband, provincial Liberal Leader Ross Thatcher, is perfectly happy with that approach.

During the provincial election campaign that ended with voting Wednesday, she accompanied her husband to all but two of his many campaign meetings.

Mrs. Thatcher is a five-foot-seven brunette with a brilliant smile and a predilection for "fairly casual" clothes. She was born in Worthing, England, of Scottish parents—her maiden name is McNaughton — and came to Moose Jaw as a little girl. Before her schooling ended at Grade 12 she had met her future husband at city-based minion court.

They were married in 1938. Son Colin was married two years ago and manages the Thatcher ranch at Caron.

The Thatcher residence in Moose Jaw is an "oldish" five-bedroom home at the edge of which is Mrs. Thatcher's major occupation.

"We have a sort of disorganized life," she says now.

Legion L.A. Plans to Attend Rally

At the recent meeting of Branch 99 Canadian Legion Ladies' Auxiliary, 47 members were present with visitors from Bancroft, Lindsay and Toronto also in attendance. Five new members were initiated at this time.

To open the business various reports were given and these included a report of several banquets to be catered to in the near future. It was stressed that much help is needed in the kitchen. A minstrel show is planned for the early part of May, but a dance for this month has been cancelled. A bake sale is also in the offing with Mabel Green as convener. Mrs. Moore Jeer and Mrs. Reed were appointed for the ways and means committee.

A motor rally is planned for May 26 in Bancroft and members wishing to attend are asked to contact Mrs. Moore before May 1st in regards to tickets and other details in formation. Comrade Hendry recommended that the next zone rally be held in Belleville; this to be brought up at the event.

Zone Commander Comrade Delays of Bancroft spoke briefly and remarked on the splendid co-operation of the Branch and of the fine meeting. She was presented with a lovely cup and saucer.

At the conclusion of the meeting a draw on bath towel and wash cloth set was made with Comrade Delyea of Bancroft as winner.

Witness Asked To Spy During Coffin Trial

By STRAUN METHESON

MONTREAL (CP)—The Coffin inquiry has returned to investigating events in the Gaspe peninsula following the killing of three United States bear hunters in 1953.

Vincent Patterson of Toronto, working with Wilbert Coffin shortly before the killings, testified before a Quebec royal commissioner Wednesday that provincial police asked him to spy for them during the 1954 trial of Wilbert Coffin, the Gaspe prospector charged with murdering one of the victims.

Previous testimony heard this month at the Montreal hearings concentrated on the 1953 Miami confession to the killings of Mohawk Indian Francis Thompson who later retracted the admission, saying it was a ruse to escape jail where he was being held on a theft charge.

Mr. Patterson said two QPP officers talked to him in Toronto in 1954 about the Coffin incident. He was called as a witness a short time later and given $150 in expense money to travel to the Gaspe while the prospector was on trial.

REFUSED OFFER

Once there, he said QPP Capt. Paul Wilkie gave him about $25 and asked him to talk to Donald Coffin, the accused's brother, to obtain information. The witness said he refused because he wasn't on that close terms with Donald Coffin.

Two days later, he was given expense money to return to Toronto and never did testify at the trial.

Coffin was hanged for the murder in 1956. The Coffin inquiry was set up following the publication of Jacques les Assassins de Coffin, (Accuse Assassins de Coffin,) by Montreal author Roger Motut who maintained the prospector was innocent and did not receive a fair trial.

Mr. Patterson was asked what type of information the QPP officers wanted him to obtain from Donald Coffin.

"It would seem to me as though I was asked to talk to Coffin in the hopes he might tell me—let's say, what his opinion of Judge Owen was," the witness said.

Sunday School Lesson

A Neighborhood World

By CLARENCE W. CRANFORD

There is a popular play called, "Stop the World, I Want to Get Off." But we can't get off until death itself decides to remove us. We have to live on a world that gets smaller and more crowded by the minute. Science has already made the world a neighborhood. It is now literally possible to eat breakfast in Berlin, lunch in New York, and supper in Los Angeles on the same day due to the change in time and the speed of jet travel. The question is, how can we make the world a brotherhood in which men can live together in unity and peace, or must we go on with age-old hatreds that have taken on vast new dangers.

The Uniform Sunday School lesson for April 26: The Christian and His Neighbors," Luke 10:25-37; John 4:7-9; 1 John 4:16 through 5:3.

Brotherhood is not a luxury, it is a necessity if mankind is to survive. The tragedy is that communism, and other divisive forces, raise new barriers in a world in which, due to science, the fences of distance and lack of communication are coming down.

This, of course, is an age-old problem. It existed in Jesus' days, when the Jews had no dealings with the Samaritan. It existed thousands of years before that. The amazing thing is that even in the very beginning of Biblical times men knew the answer, for as far back as the days of Leviticus, men of God were saying, "You shall love your neighbor as yours elf." (Leviticus 19:18 RSV)

THE LAWYER'S QUESTIONS

This problem came to a focus in Jesus' teachings when a lawyer asked Him, "What shall I do to inherit eternal life?" (Luke 10:25) Jesus replied, "What is written in the law?" and the lawyer answered, "You shall love the Lord your God with all your heart, and with all your soul, and with all your strength, and with all your mind; and your neighbor as yours elf." (Luke 10:26 RSV)

Then the lawyer asked, "And who is my neighbor?" Jesus told the parable of the Good Samaritan. A man was beaten, and left half-dead, by robbers on the road from Jerusalem to Jericho. Two men, a priest and a Levite, saw the man, but "passed by on the other side." A Samaritan, when he saw him, "had compassion," gave him first aid, and arranged for him to have further medical care at a nearby inn. Jesus' question to the lawyer was a pointed one, "Which of these three, do you think, proved neighbor to the man who fell among robbers?" And the lawyer replied, "The one who showed mercy on him." (Luke 10:37) His reply cut across his own prejudice. Undoubtedly, he looked down on Samaritans, but he recognized the point of Jesus' story. Jesus had pushed back the limits surrounding the word "neighbor" and let everybody in.

Jesus was not the first to do so. In the time the law was first written, one's neighbor was pretty much defined as "the sons of your own people." (Leviticus 19:18) Undoubtedly the prophet Jonah reflected something of this attitude, for when God told Jonah to preach at Nineveh, he tried to run away. But God turned him around, and in order to live with his conscience, he went and preached in Nineveh. One day, examining a withering gourd vine, God's truth flashed in him. As he was concerned about a gourd vine, so God was concerned about everyone, including Nineveh.

It was this truth Jesus reflected so perfectly in His own life. To Jesus, the word "neighbor" had no national or geographic connotations. Race or nation had nothing to do with it. A neighbor is anyone who needs our friendship and respect — anyone who is also the object of God's love and concern.

WHY SO LITTLE BROTHERHOOD?

Why is there so much enmity in the world, and so little brotherhood? Often it is because of our pride and preoccupation with our own affairs.

So often fear is at the basis of personal and of world tensions. The Russians fear the Germans and we fear the Russians. Fear leads to barriers and mounting armaments. It leads to distrust, and finally, to hate.

One thing the Bible makes very clear. We cannot love God and hate our neighbor. Christianity cannot be measured by a shrub line. It must be measured by a tri-square. That is, it is not enough to give devotion to God. We must show our love for God by the way we love our neighbor. If the entrance to our heart is clogged by hate toward anyone, God cannot get in. Only as we are willing to let love and concern flow toward others can God's love flow into our own hearts.

But this is our problem. We cannot make ourselves love by an act of the will. We cannot love another just by determining to do so. We must be willing for God to take over, and let His love flow through us to others. The more we do this, the less we are afraid, for as 1 John 4:18 tells us, "perfect love casts out fear."

Desegregation More Difficult Where Negroes Are Majority

By DON McKEE

ATLANTA (CP) — Violence climaxed a desegregation drive in Jacksonville, Fla. One person was killed and more than a score were injured.

Little more than 350 miles to the west in the same latitude, racial changes have been taking place in Mobile, Ala., for 10 years with little trouble.

In Macon, Ga., a white church admitted into membership a Negro student from Ghana. In Jackson, Miss., all efforts at integrating churches have failed.

Conditions like these are evident every where in the South.

Why? The answer is as complex as the problem, which covers the spectrum of society. And each community has its own set of issues and conditions.

MAY AFFECT ...

Yet some of the more apparent factors which may abet or deter peaceful change include:

—Attitudes of government, businesses, churches, integration leaders and segregationists.

—Size and nature of the community, whether urban or rural, industrial or agricultural.

—Economic conditions.

—Percentage of Negroes and their voting power.

—Rate of change and desegregation.

BARS LOWERED

Much of Georgia's college and university system is desegregated; racial bars have been lowered in public schools, some theatres, restaurants and hotels, lunch counters and libraries in most major cities.

Change has been made easier by the moderate course of Governor Carl E. Sanders, elected with the help of the Negro vote —about 14 per cent in Georgia.

Desegregation is most difficult in areas of the South where Negroes are a majority in the population.

Eleven school districts in Arkansas are desegregated. Most of them are in Little Rock where federal troops enforced a court decree in 1957.

Little Rock theatres, many downtown lunch counters and restaurants are desegregated. But in the delta area of east Arkansas, where Negroes are heavily concentrated, there are no signs of integration.

In Selma, Ala., where Negroes outnumber white residents, attemps to integrate lunch counters and city facilities have failed. To the north, at Huntsville, where the Negro population is small, a biracial committee is functioning. Eight schools and the University Extension Centre, public recreational facilities and some motels are desegregated.

Desegregation has spread to public accommodations in major Texas cities, although east Texas remains largely segregated.

SPREAD QUIETLY

Mobile, Ala., began desegregation quietly in 1954 with addition of Negro officers to the police force. It spread quietly to city buses, downtown lunch counters, the municipal golf course and, last fall, a white high school.

The Mobile city commission, eyeing racial troubles in Birmingham, set up last summer a biracial commission and also a 27-member biracial committee.

Biracial bargaining, with an attitude of compromise on both sides, has keynoted much of the peaceful desegregation, surveys by The Associated Press have shown.

A "retrogress" in one city often results in other cities facing up to racial issues and making voluntary changes. In four years, desegregation of schools has spread to five Georgia cities and two more are preparing for integration.

Quiet change has been the rule in Knoxville, Tenn., which has a committee for peaceful and orderly desegregation. Its schools will be fully desegregated this fall and most other phases of public life are on an unsegregated basis.

Tennessee appears well on the way toward complete desegregation.

Voluntary removal of racial restrictions has a note of caution change in North Carolina's big cities. In the last several months four or five of Charlotte's larger restaurants voluntarily desegregated, joining a large group of hotels and other facilities.

RESISTANCE STRONG

Despite these advances, Negroes still meet strong white resistance to any changes in the rural areas of the state and in other parts of the South.

Job gains for Negroes have been made quietly in New Orleans and Baton Rouge, La., Atlanta and other cities.

In Tampa, Fla., 18 stores agreed last summer to hire Negroes as white collar workers. A special training program was set up.

In Virginia, the trend is toward desegregation in metropolitan areas, mostly on a token basis.

In South Carolina and Mississippi, little desegregation has taken place — and none voluntarily.

Laos Premier Agrees to Stay In Office

CP from AP-Reuters

VIENTIANE — Premier Souvanna Phouma announced today that he and his cabinet have agreed to conditions laid down by right-wing rebels for settlement of the Laotian crisis. But coup leaders said they would not relinquish control of Vientiane until formation of a government they approve.

The rightist military leaders, who seized control of the capital Sunday and put Prince Souvanna under house arrest, demanded that he enlarge his government. They demanded that he add to it "qualified personalities" — meaning right wingers — recommended by the rebels.

Prince Souvanna said the coalition cabinet of neutralists, rightists and pro - Communists "accepted various points" of the demand and therefore "considers that there is a continuity in the exercise of its government powers."

The cabinet "has accepted all clauses included in our motion," Gen. Kouprasith Abhay, the leader of the coup, told a press conference. But his deputy, Gen. Phoumi Nosavan, said: "We will maintain military control of the city of Vientiane until the formation of a government according to our wishes."

It was by no means certain that the agreements between Souvanna and the rightists would be approved by the pro-Communist Pathet Lao, an informal member of the coalition government. Its army controls a large part of Laos.

The cabinet meeting today was attended by two Pathet Lao secretaries of state, but they have no power to override their faction on such a major matter. The decision must come from the Pathet Lao headquarters in Khang Khay, where Prince Souphanouvong, Pathet Lao leader and deputy premier, has holed up since he began a boycott of the government 14 months ago.

Municipalities

...ment of $2.50 per resident, based on the federal government's estimate.

TO YIELD $20,000,000

A government spokesman said the standard rate will yield about $20,000,000 more a year, to be distributed among municipalities. It would also apply to towns along the Quebec - Ontario border, some of which have been permitted to levy a six-per-cent tax on liquor commission sales alone. Until now, retail sales taxes had been four per cent at Hull, Buckingham and Point Gatineau to allow merchants in these communities to meet competition from neighboring Ontario centres, where sales taxes are only three per cent.

Mr Lesage estimated government revenues will reach $1,650,335,000 for the current fiscal year, the first time revenues have passed the $1,000,000,000-mark in Quebec's history.

Ordinary expenses will be some $957,353,200 and cost of servicing the provincial debt $5 525,400. This would leave a surplus on ordinary expenditures of $35,476,400.

But, with capital expenses estimated at $274,000,000, the government would have an over-all deficit of $179,023,600 for the year.

The province's net consolidated debt at March 31 was $644,962,317, an increase of $128,-896,523 over last year.

BIG BROWS $350,000,000

Mr. Lesage estimated government borrowing at $350,000,000. This includes government-guaranteed borrowing by the autoroutes board, a special program for university construction and other agencies. The Quebec Hydro Electric Commission will borrow another $200,000,000, also with the government's guarantee.

The premier defended his government's increased spending as "investments which enrich the community."

Some parts of the population, he said, may worry that government spending is reaching a level where it could "run risks of a financial and economic order."

But there was no real need to worry. Government spending was increasing almost everywhere in Canada.

Mr Lesage said 1963 had seen "a satisfactory evolution" in Quebec's economy. The gross value of industrial production had increased by 4.3 per cent to some $15,000,000,000 and other economic indices were up.

Part-Time Farmers Beef Against Act

PETERBOROUGE (CP) — Peterborough County Federation of Agriculture directors Wednesday charged there is "absolute discrimination" against part - time farmers who have other jobs.

The charges arose from the case of Rogue Hanbridge, a farmer at Ida, near here, who obtained a job as a truck driver to supplement his farm income. In this job he was required to pay unemployment insurance.

He was laid off after 30 weeks and received unemployment insurance benefits.

As a result, he was fined $9 on 10 different counts of having received benefits to which he was not entitled.

The benefits amounted to $200 which he was ordered to repay to the unemployment insurance commission.

An inspector for the UIC said Hanbridge, when applying for benefits, did not report having received sales from his cattle which amounted to between $900 and $1,000 a month.

SAYS LAW WRONG

Clifford Johnston, secretary of the Peterborough County Federation of Agriculture, said:

"The magistrate was not wrong in levying the fine, he was right.

"In 1961, 30 per cent of farmers in this county found their incomes were so low they had to get other jobs. They have to pay unemployment insurance, yet they have little hope of ever receiving the benefits of this as long as they have any gross income from the farm."

The federation unanimously passed a resolution which was presented at the Ontario Federation of Agriculture meeting Thursday that this situation be corrected.

Leaving

With the House in committee stage on the second hour no division bells to summon more members for the vote—the Liberals turned off the adjournment motion by a vote of 43 to 42. Last-minute support from two Social Credit MPs tipped the scale.

Mr. Starr charged that "there's some sort of setup" in connection with the redistribution measure.

He said the work of the 10 commissions has already been done by Representation Commissioner Nelson Castonguay, who will be a member of each provincial commission. He said Mr. Castonguay has prepared constituency maps on the basis of a 30-per-cent population variation.

Mr. Pickersgill said Mr. Castonguay is doing preparatory work as authorized by Parliament last year. Tentative sketch maps were being prepared on the basis of variations of 10, 20 and 25 per cent.

The minister rejected Opposition demands that the maps be made public, but said opposition parties were free to delegate members to look at them.

Mr. Pickersgill said he couldn't understand Conservative arguments that politicians ought to be on the commissions.

"The purpose of this bill is to keep us politicians out of redistribution," he said.

PLAN CONTEST

TALKS OF DISCOVERY — Claude O. Stephens, left at microphone, president of Texas Gulf Sulphur Co., gestures with finger as he makes a point about the mineral discovery north of Timmins. Stephens told stock holders at their annual meeting the discovery contains excellent values of zinc, copper and silver. Weston Invited To Public Debate On Statement

TORONTO (CP) — Flood king Garfield Weston has been invited to a public debate to clarify his defence of South Africa's apartheid policies.

The invitation was sent by a group which calls itself the Anti-Weston Action Committee, a body that threatened to picket Weston - owned Loblaw supermarkets unless a retraction is published.

Meanwhile, Mr. Weston got some support from Sydney Williams, president of the Canadian Association for the Advancement of Colored People.

Mr. Williams endorsed Mr. Weston's condemnation of the United Nations move to give Negroes control of South Africa.

He said there was some merit in Mr. Weston's statement, although disagreed violently with Mr. Weston's pro-apartheid remarks.

Mr. Williams said he agreed that it would be ridiculous to turn leadership of South Africa over to untrained and uneducated colored people. But he said it is time the South African whites for denying the country's Negroes the necessary training and opportunity.

The Anti-Weston Committee said Wednesday enough volunteers have been collected to make picketing effective Picketing at all city Loblaw stories is scheduled for Saturday.

OTTAWA (CP) — The synod of the Anglican diocese of Ottawa said Thursday that apartheid in South Africa is one of the most oppressive forms of discrimination.

The annual meeting of the synod approved a motion which "sincerely regretted" a statement by Canadian food millions.

...ire Garfield Weston supports apartheid in South Africa.

War Criminal Flees Prison

CP from AP-Reuters

NORDHORN — War criminal Hans Walter Zech - Nennhoff, who escaped from a Brunswick jail Thursday, flew from Nordhorn to Basel, Switzerland, an airport spokesman said today in this West German town near the Dutch border.

Zech-Nennhoff, 47, was convicted Monday of taking part in the murder of Jews in Nazi-occupied Poland.

The former SS (elite guard) lieutenant had to pass through six locked doors to get out of the prison.

Brunswick police arrested a prison guard alleged to have confessed to helping Zech-Nennhoff escape.

The guard, 47-year-old Dietrich Zeeman, who faces a possible five-year prison term, said he got no money for his action but was promised a job in Zech-Nennhoff's firm, the public prosecutor said today.

NAMED CHAIRMAN

TORONTO (CP) — Magistrate J. R. H. Kirkpatrick of Kitchener has been appointed chairman of the Ontario Cancer Treatment and Research Foundation, Premier Robarts announced Thursday. He succeeds Rhys M. Sale.

PLANS HEAVY SPENDING

Trans World Airlines plans to spend more than $1,300,000,000 for jet aircraft and support equipment in the next 10 years, stockholders were told Thursday in Kansas City. The program includes both expected and current orders for subsonic jets as well as commitments for supersonic jets.

Farris

...wick that the single question at the 1958 secret inquiry session on which the charge was based was "vague and ambiguous."

Mr. Justice Wells said there was nothing in the way the question was worded to bring to Farris' mind what the investigation was seeking.

The judge also commented that nothing had been brought out before him indicated there had been corruption in Farris' dealings with Ontario municipal officials and former officials who received NONG stock.

"I have not found any evidence that indicates in the slightest that, whatever benefits were given, there was anything that in any way affected (municipal gas distribution) franchises."

In his address to the jury Thursday, Mr. Justice Wells said it should avoid having its decision affected by the extraneous elements of suggestion of municipal corruption.

If the Crown wished to deal with this matter, he said, then it could do so with other charges.

"At times it almost seemed an attempt was being made to establish guilt by association," he told the jury. "There is no place in our law for this sort of thing. I want you to be careful not to let that sort of feld atmosphere that has surrounded much of the evidence in this case affect you."

Evidence at the 30-day trial was that 600 shares from the Convesto account were distributed to officials of Orillia, Bracebridge and Gravenhurst after the Ontario municipalities had agreed to NONG franchises.

Another 7,500 shares were received by Ontario Supreme Court Justice Leo Landreville, mayor of Sudbury when that city granted a municipal gas franchise to NONG in 1956.

The court was also told 800 shares were allocated to Stewart Smith who in 1957 was supervisor of brokers for the British Columbia government.

Said Mr. Justice Wells: "There is no room for any theory that because there is wrongdoing of one sort, a man can be accused of wrongdoing of another sort."

He stressed the necessity of the Crown to provide convincing evidence in a perjury-trial. No conviction would be possible if there was any reasonable doubt of guilt.

When the verdict was read, the judge told the jury members he was certain they had done their best with the prolonged trial.

Farris, quietly dressed in a dark blue suit, left the courtroom alone immediately after the hearing was adjourned.

MR. MELTZER ON REAL ESTATE
"What's Your Problem?"

By BERNARD C. MELTZER

Unscrupulous home improvement operators have many devices, schemes and approaches. Their biggest asset — as for the swindler in any field — is the "something for nothing" ambition of their victims. The demonstration house gambit is a good example of this.

* * *

Dear Mr. Meltzer: In a way you are my problem. I have a chance for a terrific deal to get my house re-sided free, but since reading your column, my wife won't sign anything without advice.

Even though the present siding is still good, my house, because of its prominent location and attractive setting, was selected by a new home improvement company to display its product. They will install siding on my house and show it to other prospects as a sales demonstration.

They will give me $50 for each prospect who signs up. Their survey shows the market is very big and not only will I quickly get back my $1,200 'good faith' money, but will undoubtedly make a lot of money besides.

I still can't convince my wife that it is a good idea, but maybe you can. Please hurry before they choose another house. — R. S. T.

Answer: I recently delivered a lecture entitled "How much does it cost if it's free?" In your case, the answer is $1,200; the cost of installing your "free" siding. It has been my observation of similar arrangements that you would have to sign contracts or 50 dollar bills, and your $1,200 "good faith" money would probably be several times the value of the job received.

The "New Company" is probably old in business and using the unwary. It is subject to disappearance on collection of your money, only to reappear as a new "New Company," elsewhere.

* * *

Dear Mr. Meltzer: I'll bet you won't print this. I took your advice and regret it. I learned of a lot for sale at a terrific bargain. But did I jump in and buy it, without asking any questions? I did not! Following your suggestion, I asked a neighbor who owns a great deal of real estate for his advice. He agreed it was a bargain.

In fact, he was so impressed with my discovery that he bought it himself before I had a chance to get back to close the deal. Look before you leap, huh? My new motto is "He who hesitates is lost."— M. J. V.

Answer: Instead of trying to choose a better motto you should start choosing better friends. More seriously, next time choose for your advice a professional real estate man who is bound by regulations and by ethics to act solely in your interests. If you are still in the market for a month's time I'll consider: "A professional's advice for a fee is better than friend's for free."

* * *

Dear Mr. Meltzer: Is it better to have a written lease? I am getting ready to rent an apartment (my first) and the landlord says he doesn't care one way or another about a written lease. What do you think I should do? — C. A. J.

Answer: It has been my experience that if you are a reasonable person it is better to reduce the terms and conditions of your lease to writing. I have seen countless lawsuits as a result of misunderstandings or misinterpretations of oral agreements. Contrary to popular opinion, a written lease is as much protection for the tenant as it is for the landlord.

* * *

Dear Mr. Meltzer: Three years ago I inherited my father's house. It is worth about $20,000 and I rented it out for $150 per month. After I pay all expenses, taxes, insurance, repairs, management, etc., I have been averaging about $40 per month clear. This is less than 3 per cent return on my $20,000 investment.

I thought houses were a good investment. Please tell me what I am doing wrong. — Mrs. B. K. F.

Answer: A house is a good family investment to live in, enjoy, to save money through equity increases, and even as a hedge against inflation. As an income investment, however, houses — except for the cheapest ones — usually yield a poor investment return unless the owner is willing to be his own manager, repairman, painter, carpenter, etc., and ignores depreciation.

Realtors classify homes as "amenity properties" — that is non-investment types of real estate that derive their principal value from their services to the owners or users.

You are doing nothing wrong, but if you are hot in the position to manage and maintain this property yourself, you would be better advised to sell it and invest in something else.

Mr. Meltzer welcomes your letters and comments. Unfortunately he is unable to enter into personal correspondence with readers, but will attempt to answer as many letters as possible through his column.

New Drilling Has Confirmed Earlier Indications of Rich Ore Discovery at Timmins

HOUSTON (CP-AP) — Continued drilling has confirmed earlier indications of Texas Gulf Sulphur Company's rich mineral discovery in Northern Ontario's Timmins area, the company president told stockholders Thursday.

Claude O. Stephens, who announced the Texas Gulf zinc-copper — silver discovery last week, said additional data has confirmed "the earlier indication of a rich deposit in excess of 25,000,000 tons."

Open-pit mining, production on the deposit would begin in 1965.

"However," Stephens added, "it is much too early to determine the final direction Texas Gulf will take in developing this ore body.

"Until we have had more time and data, there seems to be little value in estimating how much the discovery will contribute to earnings."

Stephens spoke to a standing, room-only annual meeting of stockholders here one week after his announcement in New York that the major ore body had been found.

NO NEW FINDS

He made no mention of any new discoveries on or near the Texas Gulf, rumors of which have stirred renewed activity in mining stocks across the U.S. and into Stock Exchange.

He said eight tests now have been drilled on the property in Kidd Township, 10 miles north of Timmins, depositis in excess of 25,000,000 tons. However, the full extent of the ore body remains undetermined.

Stephens emphasized that cores taken from only one of the eight tests have been analysed so far.

Charles F. Fogarty, executive-vice-president, later told reporters that visual examinations indicate the samples from the eight tests "are generally very similar to the samples already assayed."

There are drilling three more tests now and moving out 200 feet at a time while trying to define the over-all size of the discovery," Fogarty said. "We'll continue to move out with further tests until we fail to find similar samples or the ore body runs into more tests will be needed at present."

BIG FUTURE PREDICTED

While Stephens, Fogarty and other officials described the discovery cautiously, a recorded commentary that accompanied the showing of color slides of the Timmins discovery operation left the impression that it will develop into one of Canada's major zinc and copper producing mines — and "rates with Canada's more spectacular mineral finds."

Shot in Back, Turk Is Killed Crossing Street

CP from AP-Reuters

NICOSIA — A Turkish - Cypriot was killed outside Nicosia today as the UN peace force braced for fresh violence on Cyprus.

Gunfire continued at several points on the troubled island.

The man was the second Turkish-Cypriot killed in a Nicosia suburb in two days.

A British officer manning a United Nations post only a few yards from the spot where the Turk was killed told reporters he saw the 65-year-old man shot twice in the back as he was crossing the street, the gunfire coming from a Greek - Cypriot advance post 25 yards away.

Heavy firing also greeted Maj.-Gen. Richard Carver, commander of the British contingent of the peace force, when he visited Agios Theodhoros, a mixed Greek-Turkish village 30 miles south of Nicosia, at dawn today.

The village, between Larnaca and Limassol, was the scene of mass killings Thursday between the hostile communities. One Turkish-Cypriot was wounded.

FEAR MORE TROUBLE

Further trouble was feared between Greek - Cypriots and Turkish - Cypriots of the UN force. Scores of Greeks brawled with 50 British soldiers in Nicosia Thursday night.

The two sides kicked, punched and stoned each other in a half-hour fight. Greek - Cypriot government statement said the British soldiers had been drinking and began the fight among themselves.

A short while after UN military police quelled the fracas, a Greek-Cypriot gun emplacement opened fire up by a plastic bomb. No one was hurt. A Greek - Cypriot national guardsman and two British soldiers hurled the bomb.

Observers Feel Liberals Sold People on Need for Change in Strong Campaign

REGINA (CP)—There are many theories but few clear-cut explanations for the downfall of Saskatchewan's CCF government in a general election after 20 years of uninterrupted rule.

Some observers felt the Liberals won Wednesday because they sold the people on the need for a change—a selling campaign that the CCF and other opponents termed high-powered campaign progress.

Social Credit Premier E. C. Manning of neighboring Alberta said the defeat signifies disillusionment of the people with Socialism.

The Liberals' program was: Attract more industry, reduce taxes, help the farmer.

Liberal Leader Ross Thatcher, a former CCFer, concentrated on his party's platform. He did not rip apart his opponents.

"In past elections we have attacked the government and we were always on the defence," he said. "This time we stayed with our own policies and the government had to answer to us and go on the defensive."

WENT DEFENSIVE

It appeared to some that the government went on the defensive mid-way in the campaign and apparently didn't know how to react to this unfamiliar role. On top of this was a new leader fighting his first general election campaign. Premier Woodrow Lloyd took over in 1961 but is no political novice. He was in the first CCF cabinet in 1944.

The government fought the election on its long record which includes the introduction in 1947 of a government hospital insurance plan, first in Canada, and implementation two years ago of a compulsory medical care insurance scheme, first of its kind in North America.

For the first time the government went to the electorate without a record. Its last election it was medical care insurance, bitterly opposed then by doctors and opposition parties.

The CCF, organized during the depression years, defeated a Liberal administration in 1944 when historians believe was an agrarian protest vote.

Crops were bad, farmers couldn't sell their grain, drought memories lingered and debts mounted.

NEW VENTURES

The government got in a variety of business ventures, including a shoe factory and a paper box factory.

Some were dropped, some grew. Biggest government enterprise is the Saskatchewan Power Corporation which supplies electricity and natural gas across the province. There is also a compulsory, government-operated automobile insurance plan.

The Liberals were better prepared for the election campaign. The party claimed a record membership of 25,000 and paid it had $135,000 in the kitty from dues alone.

Economic conditions were thought by some to be favorable to the CCF at the start of the campaign but they did not carry as much weight as expected. Saskatchewan's economy is booming with returns from big grain export sales which followed last year's bumper wheat crop.

In 1961, when the CCF nationally became the New Democratic Party, the CCF in Saskatchewan adopted the name: the CCF, Saskatchewan section of the New Democratic Party. T. C. Douglas, then premier, became leader of the new party and turned over the reins in Saskatchewan to Mr. Lloyd.

ALLIANCE NOT POPULAR

Observers said the alliance with labor in the NDP was not popular in Saskatchewan, especially when labor union unrest threatened movement of export grain.

In the 1963 federal election, the NDP ran candidates in all Saskatchewan constituencies. All were defeated. A candidate who ran as CCF-NDP in a byelection to fill the Weyburn seat vacated by Mr. Douglas was defeated.

In Wednesday's election, only two of the 59 government candidates listed themselves as CCF-NDP. The others called themselves CCF. Both were defeated in bids for re-election.

The Liberals scored their victory with rural support and Mr. Thatcher said he believes his candidates received vote support from Social Credit and some Progressive Conservatives.

PLAN SUPPORTED

There was doubt whether the 1962 medical care crisis played much of a part in the CCF defeat. Both opposition parties supported the plan this time and the Saskatchewan medical profession — which withdrew normal medical services for 23 days two years ago to protest the plan—remained silent.

Health Minister A. R. Blakeney, minister in charge of the medical care insurance plan, was returned by a Regina seat but Liberal Walter Erb was defeated.

Mr. Erb piloted the medical care insurance scheme through the legislature in 1961 and then resigned from the government and CCF party over compulsory features of the plan. Later he joined the Liberals.

Whooping Crane Eggs Under Bantam Hens

WASHINGTON (AP)—Two little bantam hens in Louisiana have been given one of the biggest jobs ever handed out by the U.S. government.

The interior department disclosed Thursday that the hens, Patience and Petulance, have been placed aboard a couple of whooping crane eggs that weigh about as much as they do and instructed to sit there until the eggs hatch.

If the U.S. fish and wildlife service experiment succeeds, the two little bantams may some day look with astonishment on the results of their work.

The whooping crane is the tallest of North American waterbirds, reaching a height of five feet, with wing spreads of seven feet.

Patience and Petulance weigh slightly more than one pound each.

The eggs they have been sitting on since Easter morning are about four inches long, 2¼ inches in diameter, and weigh about half a pound.

The fish and wildlife people, who have been disturbed for years by the dwindling number of wild whoopers, there are only 32 left—gave the whoopers the hatching assignment because they are "good sitters" and also because they are much lighter-weights that they cannot harm the eggs.

If the eggs show signs of hatching they will be taken away from the little foster mothers and placed in incubators to protect the chicks from possible injury or contamination.

Nuclear Plants Shut Down May Be Converted Into Huge Civilian Electric Projects

WASHINGTON (AP) — Nuclear explosives plants shut down by President Johnson's cut in weapons production may be converted into huge civilian electric power plants.

The U.S. Atomic Energy Commission considers the conversion to be technically feasible and has invited utility firms to undertake studies, at their own expense, of the economic and engineering problems involved.

Two reactors soon to be withdrawn from producing plutonium—one at AEC's Hanford, Wash., installation and the other at Savannah River, S.C. — have been offered for commercial power generation.

An AEC official said the two have the capability of delivering "many hundreds of megawatts" of electric power—that is, many hundreds of millions of watts—if the shift to peaceful use can be worked through.

This would suggest a capacity larger than any of the 31 nuclear plants now producing commercial power, and perhaps comparing with the electricity output of the huge NPR (new production reactor) soon to begin full-scale operation at Hanford. The NPR will provide, as a by-product to its output of fissionable plutonium, steam sufficient in generate 800,000,000 watts of electric energy for homes and industries.

At Savannah River, one group of 11 southern utility companies is already at work planning for the AEC to invest $300,000 to $400,000 in studying the feasibility of taking over the plant and making it reactor scheduled to be shut down about July 1.

Parliament At a Glance

BY THE CANADIAN PRESS

THURSDAY, April 22, 1964

Two Quebec MPs — Gerard Girouard, Labelle, and Doutlet, Rimouski — announced they were leaving the Social Credit party and joining the Progressive Conservatives.

Defence Minister Hellyer said Canadian troops were sent to Cyprus with the clear understanding from the government they would remain there as long as required.

The Liberals, with NDP and Social Credit help, defeated 46 to 42 a Conservative procedural move during study of the redistribution bill.

Michael Starr (PC — Ontario) charged the redistribution work of the proposed independent electoral commissions already is prepared, before passage of the bill.

Transport Minister Pickersgill replied that the work of the transport and communication commissioner Castonguay's staff is merely preliminary.

Says States Must Pursue Present Policy

KOANOKE, Va. (AP) — Undersecretary of State George W. Ball says U.S. policy toward Communist Cuba must fall within a narrow limit—between war, which would destroy the hemisphere, and appeasement, which is not the question.

Speaking here, Ball said Thursday night, the U.S. government must pursue its present line of action with strength and skill. American nations to resist red subversion and (2) reduce Havana's power to export communism through means short of war.

Ball chose the Omicron Delta Kappa Society Convention for what announced to a ringing endorsement of President Johnson's icy and a spirited defence of the efficacy of the embargo the United States has imposed against the island.

Ball said his objective was to clear up "misapprehensions and "confusion" that have been created by public debate over the United States' Cuban policy.

Civil Servants Request Talks

TORONTO (CP) — The Civil Service Association of Ontario asked the provincial government Thursday to appoint a full - time team of competent persons to negotiate working conditions for civil servants with the association.

In a brief to Premier Robarts, the association said such a team should be ordered immediately to begin a package contract covering wages and working conditions in the civil service.

sion for the demonstrators and speed for the Senate legislation is probably answer, however, he cannot expect any Senate speed without application of drastic political pressure. Some civil rights supporters wonder whether he will dare risk full pressure in this election year when he wants the support of both the South and the North.

Despite Johnson's Support Civil Rights Bill Stalled

By HAROLD MORRISON
Canadian Press Staff Writer

Seven weeks ago the U.S. Senate began debate on the historic measure to provide Negroes with more of their citizenship rights amid predictions the legislation would get passage if it obtained the full support of President Johnson, a Texan with fairly wide southern appeal.

But despite Johnson's frequent and fervent endorsements the legislation is still stalled in the Senate with filibuster digging in for a filibuster that promises a long hot summer or debate with no passage unless proposals are sharply modified.

Meanwhile, Alabama's Governor George Wallace is continuing to pick up marginal and yet significant political strength in some northern states giving heart to the southern segregationist as they realize they are not alone in their struggle to keep the Negro separate and equal.

SUPPORTED WALLACE

The Wisconsin primary was the eye - opener. Every reputable prognosticator predicted Wisconsin would shun Wallace, the man who defied the late president Kennedy, the U.S. constitution and the courts in attempting to block integration of Alabama schools. Yet out of some 1,000,000 persons who voted in the state's Republican-Democratic primaries, about 260,000 said they would prefer Wallace for president.

It is small wonder, under circumstances which exist, that the leaders of the militant factions of militant Negro groups are resorting once again to direct legislation to vent their frustration.

The Negro plan to stall automobiles on the road to the New York world's fair was a flop. But some still used it to cause disruption and embarrassment, especially in heckling Johnson's campaign speech. White civil rights supporters predicted the Negro, in taking to the streets, are merely cutting his own throat.

Filibustering segregationists have threatened to "clear the" pressions of violence as argument that the Negro still cannot be trusted with full citizenship. And, undoubtedly, the more the filibusters dig in, the more the Negroes will be tempted to seek stronger measures of protest.

EXPLOSIVE PROBLEM

The Johnson administration is well aware of the explosive nature of the problem ahead. Officials acknowledge that as long as the Negroes must take to the streets in protest, there will be trouble.

Sporadic incidents of a violent nature have occurred this year in the Deep South, perhaps the beginning of repetition of bloodshed and deaths that marked the demonstrations of the last two years.

Parliamentary Notebook

OTTAWA (CP) — It's clear now that there will be no federal general election in June and probably not until the autumn at the earliest.

Opposition Leader Diefenbaker clearly counts the main contender for Prime Minister Pearson's office. has conceded that it will be after Canada's centennial year.

The conference is to take place in London July 8 to 15.

When Mr. Pearson made this announcement in the House of Commons this week, Mr. Diefenbaker rose to welcome the fact the date has been set.

Then, speaking as he said on behalf of all members, the Progressive Conservative leader extended to Mr. Pearson "every good wish in discharging the great responsibilities that will come to him in that capacity (as prime minister) at that conference."

The remark is regarded as significant because on such occasions Mr. Diefenbaker, according to past performance, isn't given to making loose statements in off-hand fashion.

Election talk is always in the wind on Parliament Hill when a government is in a minority position in the Commons. The combined Opposition of 94 Conservatives, 17 New Democrats, 13 Creditistes and 11 Social Creditors—135 — could unseat the 128 Liberals in any crucial non-confidence vote.

Moreover, and government in such a position is always on the lookout for the best opportunity to call an election and give a clear majority.

Nearly two weeks ago, Mr. Pearson said in the Commons his government "has no intention, nor has it had any intention" of going along with "those who want to force an election."

This was greeted with general applause, particularly strong in the ranks of the Liberal backbench. Mr. Pearson's remarks on that occasion there was general agreement with the prime minister's statement — but he didn't make it clear whether he joined in that general agreement.

Under federal election law, as a rule of thumb, it takes eight weeks for the ponderous machinery to complete its work. Even if an election were called today, voting could not take place before June 22.

June is a traditional month for elections, usually giving good campaign weather across the country and catching voters before they become involved in their July and August vacations. 18 elections since the turn of the century, four have been in June. The 1957 and 1962 elections were held in June.

Mark ti on your calendar: the next most popular month is October.

Thatcher Changed Political Tactics in Win for Liberals

REGINA (CP) — Ross Thatcher changed his political tactics this year and today he stands on the threshold of becoming Saskatchewan's ninth premier and the sixth to head a Liberal government.

On the basis of election night returns, Mr. Thatcher and 31 other Liberals were elected. He will be the youngest premier the time the final chapter of Wednesday's voting will be written.

He turned out the CCF, a party he once represented, and defeated the 20-year-old North America's only socialist government. The CCF won 25 seats while the Liberals gained five active-elected one and one seat was undecided.

The eggs show signs of hatching they will be taken away from the little foster mothers and placed in incubators to protect the chicks from possible injury or contamination.

A former hardware merchant and cattle breeder, he has an easy-going personality. He enjoys a story, even if he is the brunt of the joke.

SUPPER CLUBS

Mr. Thatcher frankly admits, on the basis of loss of other party members, both provincial and federal, in his bid to revitalize the Liberal party he also took over the leadership in 1959.

"We (Liberal supporters) didn't have the right image and a healthy sign. But decisions in caucus are by a majority vote."

Mr. Thatcher frankly admits, too, the Liberals hired an advertising firm to help in the provincial and plan the April 22 campaign, "but this is nothing new for Saskatchewan parties both the NDP and the Progressive Conservatives used similar help and have used such help in previous campaigns."

But what was new in the Liberal campaign was Mr. Thatcher's personal image. He displayed a new humor, didn't rip apart his opponents with a fiery tirade, but concentrated only on his own party platform.

He readily tells of the strength of the party organization available to all Liberal candidates in the campaign. "In 1960 we had 57 seats and only a few candidate to fight the election and many of our candidates were really only token opposition.

DIFFERENT THIS TIME

"This time we had $135,000 from membership dues alone and no one had less than $200 to use. This doesn't include contributions from other sources.

Mr. Thatcher was accused of "buckshotting" but he drew large crowds, the largest 6,000 in an April 15 rally in Regina, which he later described as the turning point in his campaign. Mr. Thatcher, born June 24, 1917, at Neville, Sask., first was elected to the House of Commons in 1945 as CCF member for Moose Jaw-Lake Centre. Seven years later he began to drift away from the party he extreme leftist influences.

He resigned from the CCF in 1959 to sit as an independent and joined the Liberals in 1958. He said later opposition to the CCF stemmed from "bitter personal experience."

Between his defection from the CCF and his election as Saskatchewan Liberal leader, Mr. Thatcher lost in federal elections to CCFer, Hazen Argue, his former Commons desk mate, and later followed him into the Liberal party.

Quebec Going Scientific

MONTREAL (CP) — Quebec's students, traditionally inclined toward the arts and humanities, are showing an increasing interest in science, if enrolment at the province's 14 French-language University of Montreal are any indication.

The university's faculty of science has recorded a 60-per-cent rise in enrolment in the last four years to 1,150 students from 750.

Professor Marcel Bourgeau, the faculty's director of admissions, says the present figure will more than double in the next four years with the continuation of current trends.

Indications also are that many graduates of classical colleges in Quebec are switching to science from what once were their main interests—the humanities, the Roman Catholic priesthood and the professions.

Such colleges, which provide the equivalent of up to second-year college instruction, supplied more than 36 per cent of the science enrolment at the University of Montreal in 1964, compared with 22 per cent in 1960.

Officials are predicting a continued increase as more classical college graduates in the arts courses with optional instruction in science and mathematics.

Prof. Bourgeau says the science faculty's courses and degrees have improved so that they can be readily acknowledged in the English-speaking world as well as in French.

"Our degrees now are accepted at face value by all the leading American universities," he says, "even if that sounds like boasting, it is nevertheless quite an achievement."

Political Ferment in Ranks Of Quebec Liberals Expected To Come to Head at Parley

By KEN KELLY

OTTAWA (CP)—Growing political ferment in the ranks of Quebec Liberals is expected to come to a head later this month.

Relations between federal and provincial wings of the Liberal party will be considered April 23-25 at a Montreal meeting attended by Quebec Liberal MPs, constituency officers and representatives of party organizations. There appear to be three distinct trends of thought.

Political observers here say the central issue is whether two wings of the Liberal party will operate through separate associations, working together on matters of mutual political interest through a joint committee.

In favor of this idea are two segments of the party—one centred in the Quebec caucus of Liberal MPs, the other provincially centred. Other than this they appear to have little in common.

A third group is closely allied to political philosophy with the federal Liberal group and includes some of the Quebec MPs. This group seems to prefer a drive to capture the Quebec Liberal Federation from within rather than a divorce of the two main wings of Quebec Liberalism.

Some Liberals here see Quebec Liberalism grouped in two broad wings—one federalist in outlook, the other provincialist with shadings of Quebec nationalist and separatist.

DIVIDING LINE FUZZY

But the federalists aren't exclusively in the federal field of politics.

They claim Premier Jean Lesage, while seeming to take a provincialist line of federal-provincial relations, is actually closer to their outlook than he is to the Quebec wing, of which provincial Resources Minister Rene Levesque is the best-known exponent.

The federalists contend Mr. Lesage is driven to public positions contrary to his personal federalist philosophy by the threat to his leadership from the provincialists wing.

They say the provincialists have a strong hold on the party organization in Quebec and exert a steady pressure on Premier Lesage to follow courses of action closer to their Quebec-first philosophy than Mr. Lesage is personally inclined to be.

As evidence they cite opinions of federal negotiators at the recent federal - provincial conference in Quebec City who report Mr. Lesage was far more co-operative behind the closed conference doors than he was in his post-conference public statements.

WANT TO SEPARATE

The exponent of this situation has led Federal Liberals to support for an idea first promoted by the provincialist wing, particularly Mr. Levesque who called in 1963 for separate organizations for provincial and federal Liberals in Quebec.

The proposal was rejected at the 1962 Quebec Liberal Federation convention but Mr. Levesque has continued to press for it among Liberal constituency organizations.

Other group of federal Liberals, said to include Justice Minister Guy Favreau, has proposed that the federalist wing now take up the idea.

They argue its advantages are two - fold. First, they say, it would provide within Quebec a federalist Liberal focus for the Quebec voter. Second, it would make it possible to argue, especially outside the province, that the federal Liberals shouldn't be identified with extreme Quebec nationalism.

A further advantage in the eyes of federal Liberals lies in their belief that divorce of the provincial and federal organizations would isolate provincialist leaders.

This, they say, would siphon off rank-and-file support, and thus strengthen Mr. Lesage in resisting their pressure.

This line of action is opposed by another group among federal Liberals. They contend such a course would drive the Quebec Liberal Federation further along the road to Quebec-first thinking.

Their proposed alternative is that federal Liberals and their federalist supporters in the Quebec Liberal Federation deliberately set out to defeat the provincialists at the September convention of the federation.

They maintain the Levesque group has a weaker hold on the federation than is realized and that if a showdown the Quebec first elements could be routed by mobilizing the party membership.

It is the divergent views of the two federalist groups that will be thrashed out at the Montreal meeting.

Publicly, Prime Minister Pearson has remained aloof. At a press conference he was asked about separate provincial and federal organizations in Quebec and replied:

"I do not think I can very profitably comment on that. I would say this, that there are two areas in which there are two Liberal organizations, federal and provincial, and they have to co-operate because they may have separate organizations.

"I am quite certain that what ever happens in Quebec in the organization sense, all Liberals will work together."

RARE, MEDIUM, WELL-DONE

By Geo. H. Carver, Sports Editor

They tell me if you hold a smelt in one hand and a freshly-cut cucumber in the other—and smell one after the other you cannot tell the difference.

From this sports desk I can see the lower stretch of the Moira between the lower city bridge and the CPR abridgement.

There are at least three smelt nets or traps—strictly legal—nestling in the water.

The tasty fish should be running any day now—if not already. From now until early May the thousands of hardheads and gaspereau with the "smelting" is a popular spring attraction, will be out with hand nets, scoops, and other receptacles for dipping up the small, slender silvery herring-like fish that have the odor of fresh cucumbers.

Department of Lands and Forests officials tell me that if the weather turns warmer with a touch of warm rainfall there should be reasonably good smelt fishing along the north shore of Lake Ontario this weekend.

That includes the Bay of Quinte. Veteran fishermen here state the run of smelt in the Moira and other Quinte waters has decreased to an alarming extent over the past few years.

Time was when we could drop a bucket or pail from the rear room windows and come up with a half-bushel of the tasty little things. Or for 25 cents you could coax a bagful from an overloaded (fish, that is), smelter.

Ontario residents may take smelt for personal use without a license in March, April and May by use of dip nets not larger than six feet by six feet or, if circular, six feet in diameter. A $1 resident license is available for taking smelt for personal use with a seine not larger than 6 by 6 feet, but not larger than twenty feet by six feet.

"The fine flavor of the smelt and their comparative low cost are factors that give them a high rating as a food fish, and creates a popular demand for them" says Dr. K. M. MacKay, former head of the Lands and Forests Department Fisheries Section. "They are marketed not only by commercial fishermen, but, also, by dip-netters. Small fishing during the spawning season is a large source of smelt production."

Dr. MacKay also points out: "In the Great Lakes, lake trout and walleyes feed extensively on smelt and burbot and yellow perch commonly. Nearly every fish-eating fish in the Great Lakes will eat smelt if given the opportunity. On the other hand, the smelt competes for food with other desirable species, for example, lake trout, herring and whitefish and may prey upon the young of these species."

In his recent book, published by the Department of Lands and Forests, Dr. MacKay describes the smelt as "a small, slender, silvery fish with a translucent, greenish back. It resembles the lake herring in shape and coloration. It has thin and moderately large smooth scales, (the scales of the male smelt at spawning time are rough to the touch because of the presence of small tubercles), a deeply forked tail and sharp, strong teeth on the jaws, tongue and roof of the mouth. The mouth is large and its opening extends to a point behind the middle of the eye.

"It is claimed that the name 'smelt' is a contraction of the words 'smell it,' the reference being to the fish's peculiar odor which is not unlike that of fresh cucumbers. In another sense, the name is appropriate because it is the English form of the Anglo-Saxon name 'smoelt' which means smooth or shining."

DANGER AHEAD!

More water accidents occur in the month of May than any other time, due perhaps to the long winter lay-off in boating manners. With the pickerel season only a few days away there will be a mad rush to get everything ship-shape in time.

The Ontario Federation of Anglers and Hunters asks that you always operate your boat in a common sense manner with care and courtesy towards all others on the water. Be sure you have boat, motor and all equipment in seaworthy condition. Have only government-approved life jackets for each person and the necessary boat essentials. Watch weather and at first indication of bad weather go ashore or seek sheltered water immediately.

In 1963, 243 persons drowned in Ontario an increase of 20.4 per cent over 1962. The terrifying part is that 18 drowned from canoes and in all fatalities no one was wearing a government approved life jacket in good condition.

Pulford Pair Sparks Leafs' 4-3 Win

By DAVE BETTS

DETROIT (CP) — "Home ice," says Robert Pulford, "doesn't mean much of an advantage."

He should know. Pulford scored two goals and was credited with an assist on the overtime winner Thursday night as Toronto Maple Leafs forced the Stanley Cup final to seven games.

"The Detroit crowd doesn't bother me and I don't think it gets to many of the other fellows," said Pulford as he basked in the unaccustomed sun of his team's 4-3 win over the surprising Red Wings.

To tie the series at three games apiece, the Wings won two in Toronto where they must venture again Saturday night, and the Leafs picked up two wins here.

After three sweat - soaked periods Thursday night, defenceman Bob Baun, better known for his crippling hitting than for his artistry around the net, provided the anti-climactic finish at 1:43 of the first overtime period. He shot a rising puck from the right boards which ticked off defenceman Bill Gadsby's stick and over Terry Sawchuk's shoulder.

Both Detroit defenders said they did not see it until it was too late—but it probably too late to allow the Wings to win their first cup since 1955.

WINGS FOOLED EXPERTS

The amazing Wings, an assortment of youth, age, spirit and ability, fooled the experts by rising from a fourth-place finish to push the world-champion Leafs to a deciding game in the finals.

Rookies Paul Henderson and Pit Martin, the go-getter early in the second period to lift the Wings to a 2-1 lead, and Gordie Howe, the ageless all-star master craftsman, punched in his ninth goal of the playoffs, to become the all-time highest series scorer in history.

His 17th point of the year broke a tie with Bernie (Boom Boom) Geoffrion and brought Howe one step closer to the record 26 set by Maurice (Rocket) Richard, ex-Canadiens superstar.

Toronto's only goal was scored by professional benchsitter Billy Harris, who was on hand long enough Thursday to tip in a rebound from George Armstrong.

The series now faces the possibility of an unprecedented eight games, which would be necessary if Toronto's curfew laws were to stop an overtime game at 11:30 p.m. Saturday.

It would be almost too much for players and fans whose hearts have thumped through 14 semi-final games, two overtime wins in the finals and two other final games decided in the last minute.

PUNCH HAS BEEF

Manager-coach Punch Imlach of Toronto, who is usually mom short-tempered after a loss than after a win, complained Thursday that "everything was against me—the officials, the ice and my own team."

Imlach was bitter about Howe's action just before his goal, saying he had tripped Tim Horton to take the puck.

The officials have two sets of rules in this league, one for Howe and one for the rest," he said.

To amplify his complaint, he cited the incident which removed left-winger Red Kelly from the game. Kelly limped off with a damaged knee when he was hit simultaneously by Gadsby and Howe.

"Kelly might be out for the rest of the series the way Howe cracked him," moaned Imlach, "and from behind, mind you."

Baun was a stretcher case in the third period but looked like a spring chicken when he potted the overtime winner. Baun said his leg went dead when he was struck by a puck, but the feeling returned in time for him to sink his second goal of the playoffs.

Imlach used Harris, Jim Pappin, Ed Litzenberger and Eddie Shack at various times to replace Don McKenney, who was knocked out of the series Tuesday when checked by Al Langlois.

ABEL OPTIMISTIC

Sid Abel, genial managercoach of the Wings, was optimistic about chances in the deciding game and said his team should have had the series by now.

"We deserved it on the play, but in these games the breaks and the bounces can mean as much as playing good hockey."

The Wings had history on their side Thursday night. Exactly 14 years ago Pete Babando scored in overtime of the seventh game of a cup final against New York Rangers.

Abel threw four lines at Toronto Thursday, giving plenty of ice time to his young third and fourth units, a move that paid dividends for the first two goals.

But the Leafs continued their weird pattern of wailing for the crucial time before throwing the knockout punch. In the third period, Johnny Bower in the Toronto net had to stop 16 drives and in overtime he was tested once before Baun turned off the pressure.

This was the 130th playoff overtime since the National League started its records in 1926. Both semi-finals this year went to seven games to push the entire playoff to a record 21 games, healthy for the ticket sellers but tough on the tickers of the fans.

The Leafs travelled back to Toronto by train immediately after the game, and the Wings will fly from Windsor, Ont., this afternoon after an overnight rest in Detroit.

The biggest and older Leafs started off fast in the first period Thursday and tired considerably as Abel kept sending fresh young contingents against them. The Wings became faster and fresher as the game progressed and appeared shocked by the sudden ending.

Referee Vern Buffey, the object of Imlach's ire, handed out four minor penalties to Toronto and two to Detroit. Litzenberger and Martin were given 10-minute misconducts for using any side, everybody is against me, but we'll win it if we have the best everybody in this house."

Pulford Disclaims 'Helper'

DETROIT (CP)—Bobby Pulford, an unpolished hero in Toronto Maple Leafs 4-3 overtime conquest of Detroit Red Wings Thursday night, modestly disclaims the assist he was given on the goal that kept the Leafs in the Stanley Cup playoffs.

Pulford, who scored two goals earlier in the game, suggested afterwards that he got the assist on Bobby Baun's winning goal "possibly because I'm so good looking." He was sitting on the bench when the Leaf defenceman banked the shot into the net off Detroit defenceman Bill Gadsby's stick.

Carl Brewer, George Armstrong, Dave Keon and Billy Harris were the other Leafs on the ice at the time. It appeared to eyewitnesses that Keon worked the puck loose behind the net and passed to Armstrong, who relayed it to Baun.

The official scorer also appeared to have difficulty with the play on which Harris made it 2-2 late in the second period. He gave assists to Armstrong and Baun.

"I'll take the point," the Leaf Captain said. "But it belonged to (Ron) Stewart. He'd come on to replace me before it was scored."

An unofficial press box jury awarded the points to Stewart and Keon on that one.

COACH DENIES SWITCH

EDMONTON (CP) — The coach of Edmonton Oil Kings has denied a report that he was seeking a coaching job with Regina Pats of the Saskatchewan Junior Hockey League. Buster Brayshaw, coach of the Oil Kings since 1960, termed the report from Regina "ridiculous."

Belleville District Softball
Four Teams Enter League

The "new-look" Belleville and District Softball League named four definite starters for the 1964 season last night, climaxing more than a month of uncertainty for the district's senior softball body.

Faced with an "enter or fold" situation at last night's emergency meeting, the four clubs lost no time in turning their entry fees over to league treasurer Al Ellis.

The four clubs entered are Trudeau Motors and the Junkers, of Belleville, plus Trenton Lombanks and Trenton Commercial Printers. Only the Trudeau Motors team is returning from last season, the other three all new entries. Gone from 1963 are Joyce Realty, the Bobcats and Trenton RCAF Flyers.

Joyce Realty, expected to return for the season right up until last weekend, officially bowed in the towel last night. Team manager Bill Shaw gave no reason for the club's failure to operate this year but hinted that Joyces may be back next season.

The league schedule, somewhere between 12 and 18 games in length, will open on the holiday weekend of May 18.

Daylight games will be played in Belleville and Trenton but night ball is almost a certainty in Trenton. Expected home nights will be Mondays for Tweed, Tuesdays for Trudeaus, Wednesdays for Trenton and Thursdays for the Belleville Juniors. Once again the loop hopes to use Saturday nights to play postponed games.

The league will affiliate with the OASA and-all clubs are expected to enter playdowns in their various divisions.

There was some thought that perhaps the Tweed team would play its home games against Trenton in Belleville but this was not settled. It is expected Trenton might have trouble arriving in Tweed for 6.45 p.m. games.

Final games will be completed and a league schedule adopted when the league meets again on Sunday, May 3. The meeting will be held at Club Canara, at two o'clock and all clubs are asked to have representation.

Plante Takes Up Lacrosse Goalkeeping

MONTREAL (CP)—Jacques Plante, National Hockey League goaltending star, is trying out a new form of missile-stopping—goaltending in lacrosse.

Plante worked out with Rosemont in Montreal's Senior Lacrosse League last Saturday and has since obtained permission from his employers, New York Rangers, to play the game this summer.

An attempt is being made to revive lacrosse here and one of Plante's reasons for taking part in it is to help keep in shape.

Colts' Hurler Has No-Hitter-Loses

Errors Did It

By THE CANADIAN PRESS

You get used to losing well-pitched games when you're a rookie pitcher with a weak defensive team for Houston Colts. It happens to Ken Johnson all the time.

But Johnson, who ranked in the National League's top 10 in earned-run average last season and had an 11-17 record to show for it, will never drop a tougher one than he did Thursday night.

The Colts, who haven't finished higher than eighth in their two years of existence, lost 1-0 to Cincinnati Reds and made Johnson the first major league pitcher to lose a game without allowing the opposition a single base hit.

The 30-year-old knuckleball specialist who came to Houston from the Reds three years ago, helped bring about his own downfall when he committed the first of two errors by the Colts in the ninth inning, a wild throw that permitted Pete Rose to get to second base on a bunt.

Second-baseman Nellie Fox completed the damage one batter by messing up a ground ball as Rose scampered home with the game's only run.

END LOSING STREAK

In other games, Los Angeles Dodgers ended their seven-game losing streak by defeating St. Louis Cardinals 7-5, Philadelphia Phillies n'pped Pittsburgh Pirates 6-5 and Chicago Cubs bombed New York Mets 5-1.

Johnson wasn't the first man to pitch nine innings of no-hit ball and lose. But previous victims the latest was Pittsburgh's Harvey Haddix in 1959 — lost their no-hitter as well as their game in extra innings.

Johnson pitched the best game of his life," Johnson said afterward, "and I feel bad because I lost it.

In the dressing room he has tried to point out the key scrap when the Colts acquired from Chicago White Sox this spring.

"I told Nellie it wasn't his fault," Johnson told reporters. "I put the gun (lose) on base and I have no one to blame but myself."

Rookie John Werhas singled home two runs in the eighth inning to end the Dodgers' victory drought after Frank Howard and Curt Flood of the Cardinals had traded earlier home runs.

TAYLOR IS LOSER

The double was given up by Bobby Shantz but the loss went to Ron Taylor, the left from Leaside, Ont., who had walked the two men whom Werhas drove in. The victory was the first of the season for Ron Perranoski, the Dodgers' ace reliever, who took over from Don Drysdale in the eighth.

The Phillies spotted the Pirates a 5-0 lead after two innings and began their uphill climb with a two-run homer by young Richie Allen, his fourth of the year, in the fourth inning. John Herrnstein broke it open in the ninth with two out when he doubled home two runs to climax a four-run rally.

It was the fifth win in six starts for the Phillies, who took over the league leadership from the idle San Francisco Giants.

The Cubs collected 15 hits but needed three unearned runs in the second inning to subdue the Mets. Winner Dick Ellsworth gave up seven safeties including Ron Hunt's eighth-inning homer.

Orioles Split With Bosox

Pitchers' 'Hits' Give Tribe Win

By THE CANADIAN PRESS

Some hitting pitchers help to win their own games. Others lose them. It all depends on whether they hit baseballs or batsmen.

An example of both types cropped up Thursday night. Cleveland's Dick Donovan singled home the Indians' first two runs at Los Angeles. Then Ken McBride of the Angels hit two batsmen to force in the third and give the Tribe a 3-2 victory.

McBride's ninth-inning marksmanship, together with a couple of earlier lapses, gave him four hit batsmen for the evening, tying an American League record.

He got into the ninth-inning jam on singles by Fred Whitfield and Tito Francona, who collected the 1,000th hit of his major league career. Leader in the game, McBride then hit Johnny Romano and Woody Held in succession, forcing in the tie-breaking run.

SPLIT TWIN BILL

Baltimore Orioles gained a doubleheader split with Boston Red Sox, winning the nightcap of a twi-night twin bill-header 10-9 behind the pitching of Robin Roberts after a 3-0 opening game loss.

In the opener, the Orioles lost the services of Steve Barber, Baltimore 20-game ace-hurler since the club rejoined the league 10 years ago.

Barber pulled a muscle under his left shoulder blade in the pre-game warmup, was tagged for two runs in the first inning and then forced to leave. There was no word on how long Barber would be sidelined.

Only one other game was scheduled in the AL. In that, Bill Skowron drove in the winning run with a single in the eighth inning as Washington Senators won over Minnesota Twins 5-4.

The Angels pulled ahead of the Indians 2-0 in the fourth on a triple by Jim Fregosi, an infield out, an error, a stolen base and Bob Rodgers' single. The Indians tied it in the fifth when Whitfield doubled, Francona singled for his 1,000th hit and Donovan singled both home.

WIN IN FIRST

The Red Sox put the opener away against the ailing Barber in the first inning, scoring twice on a single by Ed Bressoud, a walk, Frank Malzone's single and a double by Dick Stuart. Carl Yastrzemski homered in the third for the other run.

Jack Lamabe, a reliever last year, won his second consecutive start with help from Dick Radatz.

In the second game, Roberts scattered nine Red Sox hits for his first victory. The lone run off Boston starter Dave Morehead came across in the eighth on consecutive singles by Jack Brandt, Lou Aparicio and Norm Siebern.

The Twins led 4-3 when the Senators struck back in the eighth inning after blowing an early 2-0 built on Jim King's three-run homer. A double by Don Zimmer drove in the tying run in the eighth. Singles by Don Blasingame and Skowron got the winner across.

Koufax Arm Under Care Of Doctor

LOS ANGELES (AP)—Sonny Koufax flew home Thursday and put his famous left arm in the hands of a doctor.

The Los Angeles Dodger star started treatments immediately for what was described as a muscle strain.

The doctor who examined Koufax said it would be 48 hours before he could determine the seriousness of the injury.

The Dodgers' statement said that Koufax suffered the injury Wednesday night, when he was removed after a wild first inning against St. Louis Cardinals at Busch Stadium.

But Koufax told it differently:

"I've had it for three weeks. I haven't had anything on the ball in any of my three starts. I was just lucky to get by until now."

Koufax was sidelined after 14 victories in mid-season of 1962, when the Dodgers were in first place. A circulatory ailment in the index finger of his pitching hand kept him out of action while the Angles lost the pennant to San Francisco Giants in a playoff.

In The Dressing Rooms

By ARLIE KELLER

DETROIT (CP) — The puck came back to me on the bounce just inside the line. It was on edge, I swung and saw it take a big hop into the net."

So said Bob Baun, the rugged defenceman who triggered the winning goal in overtime for Toronto Maple Leafs in their 4-3 victory over Detroit Red Wings Thursday night.

Baun, 28-year-old hardrock on the Leafs' defence, had been carried from the ice on a stretcher after 13 minutes in the second period after he collapsed in front of goalie Johnny Bower. Before the period ended he was back and, although he couldn't diagnose his own injury, thought it was a pinched nerve.

"Let's wait until the doctor (Hugh Smythe) looks at it before we try to say what it was, but that winning goal sure made the ankle feel lots better," he smiled.

ALL ARE TOUGH

Bob Pulford, who scored two goals in the entire semi-final series in one game said, "all these games are tough and home ice doesn't mean too much of an advantage. Wings played well tonight and we worked for the breaks. We'll have to do the same in Toronto Saturday."

Billy Harris, a rarely - used centreman who saw extra duty while Don McKenney is sidelined and caged the goal that knotted the count 3-3, stated "experience plays a big part in playoff hockey and tonight we had that edge with making good chances around the net."

Frank Mahovlich added: "Do we always have to play squeakers? Seems every game we play is a tough one. Thirteen playoff games and never an easy one."

Looking over his bandaged right knee, Red Kelly said "after 17 years, I don't want a knee to keep me out. I'll be ready to go Saturday if they'll let me play."

COACH'S VIEW

In an enormous sway from his players, coach Punch Imlach was far from overconfident as he said:

"Pressure hockey. That's all it was and Baun's (Baun's) shot made it for us. The turning point in this game was the winning goal."

"I thought a couple of extra penalties could have been called on — I'm telling . . . Kelly was charged from the rear by (Gordie) Howe. I mean, we just have to beat everybody."

Imlach was smiling. His team had come back and evened the series 3-3, causing a showdown in Toronto. He left with the words "we'll be ready . . . believe me."

Mud Forces Change In Lead

By STEPHEN SCOTT

TORONTO (CP) — Covered with mud and penalty points, six automobiles pulled in here Thursday night on the second-last leg of the 4,000-mile cross-Canada auto rally.

"This is rallying!" smiled early finishers after safely traversing a 39-mile stretch of muddy, slippery road.

"This is rallying!" queried disgusted late arrivals who had spent hours in the mud or waiting for others to get out of the mud in the Parry Sound, Ont., area.

The mud forced a change in the over - all leadership and knocked at least one car out of the six-day, Vancouver-Montreal rally.

Drivers faced more mud after they left here on the 200-mile trip to the finish line at Place Ville Marie in downtown Montreal.

The leaders, Klaus Ross and John Bird of Toronto, driving a Volvo, could meet the same fate as John Merriman and Paul Manson whose three-day perfect record was broken in a losing battle with mud.

It was expected that the first car would arrive in Montreal at :30 p.m. EST. The winners will be provisionally declared after final standings are determined by computers when the last car has been reported.

CONSIDER PROTESTS

Protests will be considered Saturday and the winners will receive their prizes at a banquet Saturday night.

Leading factory team as of this morning was Volvo Canada with 109 points. Volvo had been waging a nip-and-tuck battle with Ford but Ford lost much time in the mud and finished the day with 185. Triumph was a poor third, at 220.

Diana Carter of Toronto and Gillian Field of Adams, N.Y., winners of last year's women's honors, were in the lead after two days of driving in Mercury Comet Cyclone Villey, Pa., at 196. Miss Carter, driving a Volvo, kept the lead despite missing a check point in order to avoid muddy sections.

Herbert Green and David W. Riddick of Sault Ste. Marie, Ont. driving a Morris Cooper S, were in the lead for the 1,000 prize for first private entry.

Before the rain, Merriman had been in the running for both the private entry and the overall championship instead of another $1,000 plus $250 for the first car in his class. He was giving an amazing exhibition of perfect driving as he headed for an unprecedented double of private and overall prize.

HAVE TWO POINTS

Ross and Bird had two penalty points compared to seven for Maurice Carter of Toronto and Ian Worth of Lachine, Que., in a Chevy II. At stage four Carter had held the lead with a perfect score.

Following Ross and Carter were a Valiant and two Ford Falcons tied with 10 points—Scott Harvey of Dearborn, Mich., and Bob Mollman of Cleveland in the Valiant; Paul MacLennan and Art Dempsey of Toronto and Grat McLean and Doug Gallop of Montreal.

Highest foreign entry was Olivier Gendebien of Belgium who was fifth with 13 points,

"You shouldn't have called. A ringing telephone sets him off for another couple of hours."

three picked up Thursday in the mud. He and Mike Kerry of Toronto, co-driver in the Volvo, were among the early arrivals who praised the rally that wound through back roads from Sault Ste. Marie, Ont., a 540-mile trip that took almost 13 hours.

"This was a real rally," said veteran Gendebien. "Your rally is like Burgundy, it gets better with age."

REPLACES BOBEK

Gendebien replaced Czech champion Vaclav Bobek, in a Skoda, as leading European. Bobek had been high in the standing Wednesday but was held up Thursday by cars that were stuck in the mud and finished the day with 66 points.

"It's a hell of a way for a rally to be decided," said James Luce of Hawkesbury, Ont., Bobek's co-driver.

Forty-six cars were to leave here today compared to the 60 that left Vancouver Saturday night.

'The Dancer' Wins Easily

LEXINGTON, Ky. (AP)— Northern Dancer, the pride of the Canadian racing world, showed Thursday he is ready for his Kentucky Derby show-down with Bill Rise with an easy victory in the $50,000 Blue Grass Stakes at Keeneland.

The Dancer, ridden for the first time by jockey Bill Hartack, laid just off the pace set by Royal Shuck, took the lead on the stretch turn and was about a length on top at the finish.

Dickens Farm's Allez Addre made 4 big run at Northern Dancer, owned by Toronto industrialist J. P. Taylor, midway through the stretch. But Hartack kept control his ship and the Dancer won with ease. Allan Adair was second 4½ lengths in front of E. A. Dant's Royal Shuck. Arkansas Derby winner, Prince Davelle, was fourth.

The Dancer was clocked in a flow 1:49 4-5 for the 1⅛ miles. This was 2 2-5 seconds off the track—record, held by Round Table.

The first place finish, worth $19,207 in Northern Dancer, boosted the earnings to $230,572, almost $200,000 of it this year.

Government Publications Grow in National Importance

Book-Buying Canadians Bring Business Boom

Competition for the reading time of Canadians is the most intense in the world, but at the Queen's Printer business is booming. Every 30 seconds a customer enters one of the government bookstores across Canada. Every day 3,000 orders come to the Queen's Printer, Ottawa. Among 20,000 titles in print is authoritative literature on subjects ranging from how to fly an airplane to destroying the purple-backed cabbage worm, from art to mining, figure skating to salmon fishing. Production of 5,000 new titles a year for an annual printing bill of $15,000,000 requires a 500-page catalogue to describe current publications. A peerless source of information on Canada, the Queen's Printer sets out in black and white the why-where-what and how of government activities, policies, decisions and results in the fields of politics, science, culture and social-economic development. Among best sellers are the SRX-XRX physical fitness booklets (6,000,000 copies), The Canadian Mother and Child (1,000,000), Native Trees of Canada (500,000), How to Run a Business and a recent book, The Development of Canadian Art.

Bookstore, above, is just one retail outlet where Canadians can choose from among 20,000 titles.

Curlers Taking Second Look At Push Brooms

TORONTO (CP) — Canadian curlers are taking a second look at the merits of the European push broom as a possible substitute for the conventional corn broom.

One reason is the world championships in Calgary in March at which Alex Torrance's Scottish rink displayed amazing skill with the push-type broom.

Lyall Dagg, skip of the Canadian rink from British Columbia, commented afterward:

"A rock would come out narrow and there didn't appear to be any way they could hold it up. But they worked on it and made the shot."

John Ross of Toronto created a stir last season when he showed up at a bonspiel in Hamilton with push brooms as well as the type generally used in Canada, resembling a slender and longer version of the ordinary kitchen broom.

"I believe that on certain types of ice—they can be more effective, especially if the ice is green," Ross said of the push brooms. "The regular type broom doesn't seem to do much good. When the ice is damp and heavy the push broom seems to dry it out."

KEEPS ROCK STRAIGHT

The idea of sweeping in front of a rock as it slides down the ice is to keep it from slowing down or prevent it from curling, or curving, as much as it would ordinarily.

There has been considerable argument over the value of sweeping at all but expert sweepers insist that they can keep a rock on a relatively straight path and help it travel as much as 14 feet farther.

A common theory about what happens is that the slap of the brooms sets up a momentary melting at the surface of the ice and that the rock travels with less friction on the thin film of water.

Don Robinson of Toronto, one of the strongest sweepers in Ontario, sees merit in the push broom but adds "you have to learn how to use it properly, just as it takes time to learn how to sweep with the other brooms."

Alfie Phillips Sr., a veteran Toronto curler, says that when using push brooms all three sweepers can get right close to the rock—and the closer the more effective the sweeping.

Don Campbell, onetime member of the successful family rink from Avonlea, Sask., and now of Toronto, says it would take two or three years for curlers to learn how to use push brooms efficiently.

But since some curlers never learn how to sweep properly with the corn brooms, push brooms might prove their salvation.

SPORT BRIEFS

READY FOR COMEBACK

GREEN BAY, Wis. (AP)—Paul Hornung, Green Bay Packers' scoring ace reinstated by the National Football League last month after a year's suspension for gambling, has started training for a comeback. The 29-year-old golden boy, only a few pounds over his normal playing weight of 215, is carrying out a special conditioning schedule set by coach Vince Lombardi.

ROTE FEELING FINE

NEW YORK (CP) — Tobin Rote, 36-year-old quarterback who played for Toronto Argonauts in the Canadian Football League for three years before joining San Diego Chargers of the American Football League last year, says his throwing arm feels fine again. He had had it in a cast to allow torn ligaments in his elbow to heal. Rote was the AFL's 1963 passing leader with a completion average of 59.4 per cent on 386 passes. Twenty of his 170 completions went for touchdowns.

Jets Down Leafs 6-2, Suns Win

By THE CANADIAN PRESS

Ron Cox is turning into quite a meal ticket for Jacksonville Suns.

His 10th-inning single broke up their International League opener against Rochester Red Wings in the 10th inning Wednesday night. And his first swing Thursday produced a three-run homer that had the Suns away and winging to a 4-1 victory Thursday.

The right fielder's heroics, backed by Mike Cuellar's seven-hitter, left the Suns all alone in first place as two other opening - day victors had the tables turned on them and Syracuse Chiefs were rained out at Atlanta.

Buffalo Bisons combined three hits with two Richmond errors to score two runs in the seventh inning, good for a 6-5 victory over the Virginians. It was the seventh straight win over Richmond for Buffalo right-hander Dick Ricketts.

Steve Blass recovered from a shaky start to hold Toronto Maple Leafs to two hits over the last five innings as Columbus Jets won 6-2, putting together four singles and Dave Wissman's double for a four-run third inning against loser John Anderson.

RESTRICTS LAND

CHARLOTTETOWN (CP)—The Prince Edward Island legislature has passed a bill restricting to 10 acres the amount of land that can be held by an alien. It had been 200 acres. Provincial Secretary J. David Stewart said the move is intended to save the island's seashore fronts, among the last in North America "available for sale."

By JACK RUTTON

The tall balding principal, looking both bemused and belligerent behind his glasses, folds his arms and looks at the young blond teacher before him.

"Well, Mr. Novak," he says with menacing patience, "you're out on a limb again. What are you going to do about it?"

As 20,000,000 viewers know, John Novak — the newest teacher at Jefferson High — will solve his problem before the end of his TV program.

It doesn't matter what it is, racial discrimination, a shy student, a good student who wants to quit, or anything else you can name. Mr. Novak will solve it.

A report which should be released soon by the University of Illinois Institute of Communications should prove extremely interesting. Researchers have spent two years looking at the public image of teachers in 10 countries, and Mr. Novak plays a prominent part in their report.

NEXT YEAR, TOO

In case you haven't seen it, the TV program Mr. Novak started last fall with few people figuring it would be a success. But the Hollywood producers fooled their critics. Mr. Novak will be solving classroom problems again next fall, saved by his TV ratings.

The Illinois report will give us the first glimpse of what the real professionals think about the episodes. Do real classrooms behave the same way as Jefferson High. Do students shout across the room to each other while a teacher nods approvingly?

I've been watching nearly every episode of the series since last fall, trying to answer these questions in my own mind.

I once taught in a country school, and the last three generations of my family have served in classrooms. This makes me more cynical than most about TV teachers.

But my basic impression is that the programs are an honest attempt to portray problems that do happen in a large secondary school. Conflict is inevitable in any situation where 1,000 or 1,500 young people are growing up together.

OBJECTIONS

I've heard that teachers object that TV programs about Problems simply don't get solved in neat half-hour or hour packages, they say.

That's fine. I agree. But a program which doesn't arouse interest and doesn't resolve dramatic conflict also has few viewers. There has to be a happy compromise somewhere.

How do TV programs usually portray the teachers? I'll give you three guesses and you're right on the first. The teacher is a bestial, fumbling, well meaning, faddy-duddy, a pathetic figure of fun.

If the TV season just ending has done nothing else, it has at least given us another mental image of the teacher. For the first time we hear publicly that the teacher isn't just teaching subjects in a vacuum.

The teacher — any teacher — is also inevitably involved in the problems his students face in the outside world. These issues sometimes outweigh the problems of the classroom.

Watch for the Illinois report. If nothing else, we'll find what the real teacher thinks of his Hollywood image.

HIT PARADE

Two readers have taken me to task for what they call an unfair prejudice against hit parade tunes and hit parade musicians. What's more, they wonder if I like anything.

Joanne Marshall and Noreen Dale, both of Halifax, N.S. underlined in red this section: "You can't blame us for wondering just what kind of music you do like after all your comments about the Beatles. Are you against everything?"

No, Joanne and Noreen, I'm not against everything on the hit parade. It just so happens that my favorite tune of the moment is on the charts — "Hello Dolly."

I think it's one of the catchiest records issued in years. And Louis Armstrong has always been one of my idols.

TOP TWENTY TUNES

(Chart) Buy Me Love, Beatles; 2 Twist and Shout, Beatles; 3 She Loves You, Beatles; 4 I Want To Hold Your Hand, Beatles; 5 Hello Dolly, Louis Armstrong; 6 Suspicion, Terry Stafford; 7 Please, Please Me, Beatles; 8 Glad All Over, Dave Clark Five; 9 Shoop Shoop Song, Betty Everett; 10 Don't Let The Rain Come Down, Serendipity Singers; 11 The Way You Do The Things You Do, Temptations; 12 My Heart Belongs To Only You, Bobby Vinton; 13 Needles and Pins, Searchers; 14 Dawn, Four Seasons; 15 Stay, Four Seasons; 16 Do You Want To Know A Secret, Beles; 17 Ain't Nothin' You Can Do, Bobby Bland; 18 Think, Brenda Lee; 19 You're A Wonderful One, Marvin Gaye; 20 Hey Bobba Needle, Chubby Checker.

Rides to Work Cut Off for Provincial Police

TORONTO (CP) — Provincial Police Commissioner Eric Silk announced Wednesday that despite a review of special cases members of the force will no longer be able to ride to work in department cruisers, effective May 1.

The commissioner ordered the rides ended April 1, but postponed the deadline when the Police Association contended that special conditions prevailed in 23 of the force's 235 detachments.

Officers claimed that the rides — a 20-year tradition—were one of their few benefits and it would cost them between $300 and $500 a year to provide their own transportation.

In a directive to all detachments Wednesday, Mr. Silk announced the decision and told the branch heads the discontinuation was to be subject to the following rules:

—In special circumstances a vehicle may "attend at the limits of available bus or other transportation service at the end and/or commencement of shifts";

—Personnel may be picked up or dropped off by a vehicle providing it does not alter its patrol course for the convenience of the passenger;

—An off-shift member of a small force may take a vehicle home for the purpose of answering calls.

'64 Comet – for people who have more fun than money

Fun is the excitement of a fishing excursion. (Part of the fun is organizing it . . . but a lot of the fun is getting there, in your eager-to-get-going Comet.)

Fun is in the 'sing' of a line over water, the flash of a lure in the sunlight. (Like the muted 'hum' of a Comet cruising a highway, casting highlights from its glimmering body.)

Fun is tying into a real scrapper and playing him with finesse. (You never have to fight Comet's easy-going ways, and it's always ready to tackle the toughest, most tortuous roads.)

Fun is the end of a perfect day, a satisfying day. (That's when you appreciate Comet most—the relaxing welcome of its comfortable seats, the smoothly considerate ride, as you wend your weary way home . . . contented.)

Fun is a visit to your Mercury dealer (to discover how economical all this fun can be.)

May Protect Marine Turtles From Slaughter

LONDON (CP)—The voice of the vanishing marine turtle is being heard across some of the highest dinner tables in the land.

Turtle soup—or "tortue claire au madere" as the menu has it—has long been a special delicacy at City of London Banquets.

But recently Lord Mayor James Harmar has been receiving a bevy of letters suggesting turtle soup should be banned in the interest of preserving turtles. The whole matter now is under investigation at Mansion House, the lord mayor's official residence.

A recent article by Michael Tweedie, former director of Singapore's Raffles Museum, put the turtles in the spotlight. He called turtle soup "one of the gastronomical scandals of our time."

"It is high time civilized people put a brake on the appalling slaughter of marine turtles to provide this quite unnecessary luxury," he said.

But an expert here says that the turtles need the "city banquets come" from The West Indies "where the question of cruelty does not arise because the turtles are killed before they get to England."

"The position in Malaya and Singapore is quite different. There, it seems, the natives have been killing the turtles indiscriminately.

Chrystine Holt's Circus Act Real Hair-Raiser

By JIM PEACOCK

NEW YORK (CP)—Chrystine Holt's circus act is a real hair-raiser.

It starts with a mild but swinging strip-tease, proceeds with some expert juggling and reaches its climax with a sensational ride to the roof—all while Miss Holt dangles by her hair.

She is billed as Miss Chrys and her act is the "hairiest hair-lift" half of the "juggling jitters" with the current edition of Ringling Bros. Barnum and Bailey circus.

Her brother, Bert Holt, is the other half with "teething tricks," hanging by his teeth while he juggles an assortment of clubs, balls and rings.

FAMILY PRODUCTION

It's a family production, with Bert assisting her husband and the youngest member, 19-year-old Martin, aiding his sister.

But it is Chrystine's spectacular finish that brings the gasps of amazement from the crowds at Madison Square Garden where in each performance she is raised 75 feet above the tanbark arena by a rope attached to a ring firmly knotted in her hair.

"My hair," says 20-year-old Chrystine, "has remarkable tensile strength."

It is dark brown and long, reaching below her waist when combed out, and is firmly rooted to a scalp toughened by five years of painful practice begun when she discovered she couldn't duplicate her father's iron-jawed routine.

"I tried to do the same thing my father does," she said at the Garden the other day. "But it didn't work. My teeth weren't strong enough. I found my hair was."

PLAYING TORONTO

Miss Holt was born in Essen, Germany, as were the rest of the family. She grew up with the circus, travelling with her parents throughout Europe and North America. She has been in juggling acts with her father, who has played in Vancouver and at the Canadian National Exhibition in Toronto as well as in smaller Ontario and Quebec cities.

And they'll all return to Canada May 27-31 when the Ringling Circus plays Maple Leaf Gardens in Toronto.

Since she was five, Chrystine has been juggling things under the tutelage of her father, a veteran performer who juggles while swinging 18 feet above the ground by clutching an iron bar in his mouth.

Chrystine and Martin joined Mrs. Holt as assistants to their father when they were tiny tots and were doing this when an accident put Chrystine in the spotlight. Mr. Holt injured his spine in Hamburg, Germany, and the circus management having seen Chrystine practise, asked her to replace him.

Recovered, Bert Holt rejoined the Ringling Circus and Chrystine became part of the family production.

CHRYSTINE'S SHOW

Father and daughter now perform disparagingly in separate rings—but before they're finished, Bert surrenders the spotlight to Chrystine.

Miss Chrys, hair tied securely into a ring that hooks to the ropes, appears clad in top hat and tails, discards the hat and hooks her hair to a rope, as she swings in a wide arc 12 feet above the floor, she peels off the tuxedo then rolls hoops, juggles clubs and balls and goes through terpsichorean gyrations for more than five minutes before flying to the ceiling.

She displays a slim, shapely figure in a five-foot-six-inch, 120-pound frame and says "it takes a pretty strong scalp and a pretty strong neck" to keep her aloft.

"It hurts, yes," she added, "but you get used to the pain and you have to concentrate so much on the juggling that you don't notice it so much."

Which hurts most, the scalp or the neck? She laughed.

"Both of them," she said.

PETER SELLERS

Currently starring at the Park Theatre in Stanley Kubrick's "Dr. Strangelove or: How I Learned to Stop Worrying and Love the Bomb," Peter Sellers claims he doesn't make nearly as many motion pictures as it appears he does. He simply plays more roles than most.

In Kubrick's "hot-line suspense comedy," for example, Sellers plays three parts and would have played four if he hadn't injured an ankle during production of Columbia release. He appears as the President of the United States, as a German nuclear scientist and as an R.A.F. officer assigned to the U.S. Air Force. The film itself has a psychotic Air Force General triggering an ingenious, foolproof and irrevocable attack unleashing his wing of B-52 H-Bombers to attack Russia. As the President unable to recall the aircraft, Sellers co-operates with the Soviet Premier in a bizarre attempt to save the world. The role Sellers' ankle forced him out of was that of a Scotsman hatteded Westerner, pilot of one of the attacking aircraft.

A set of dummy cockpit presents, Sellers was carried onstage when he was two days old, in the "Goon Show" audition. As a boy, he sold tickets, operated the spotlights and swept up. Later he operated by an uncle. In World War II, after a spell as a drummer, he joined the RAF and wound up an entertainer, touring India, France and Germany.

In 1949, Sellers began heading for international fame. On radio, his "Goon Show" was an immediate success, lasting until 1958, and he began piling up in various television programs. He played five separate roles in the British comedy, "Let's Go Crazy," and then moved into such pictures as "The Ladykillers," "The Smallest Show on Earth," "Tom Thumb," "I'm All Right Jack," "The Mouse on the Moon," and "Lolita" and "Only Two Can Play," among other triumphant films.

George C. Scott co-stars with Sellers, playing the Chairman of the Joint Chiefs of Staff, called to the Pentagon from his liaison with the bikini-clad Trudy Kong who also appears in the film how as "Miss Foreign Affairs." Slim Pickens also stars as the B-52 H-Bomber pilot who is given a bad planned to play until his ankle cut up rough.

On the same program, all in color cartoon, "Wonderful Beaulieu" travelogue and "Goose Creek Symphony."

Continuous show Saturday. Feature at 2.10, 4.55, 7.40 and 10.00 p.m.

Groucho's Wife Joins Him On Bob Hope Show Tonight

By BOB THOMAS

AT THE PARK — Tracy Reed, of "Miss Foreign Affairs", makes her movie bow in Stanley Kubrick's "Dr Strangelove or How I Learned to Stop Worrying and Love the Bomb", showing today and Saturday at the Park Theatre. Peter Sellers and George C. Scott star in the Columbia release and Sterling Hayden, Keenan Wynn and Slim Pickens co-star. Continuous show Saturday from 1.00 p.m.

AT THE BELLE — Elizabeth Taylor, Richard Burton and Eva Marie Saint are pictured in 20th Century-Fox's spectacular production of "The Sandpiper" now showing at the Belle Theatre at 2.30 and 8.00 p.m. daily.

HOLLYWOOD (AP)—"Nepotism? I'm crazy about it," said Groucho Marx. "You had I'm getting too old for it."

Irreverence and irrelevance aside, the comedian seems to be doing all right by his family these days. Tonight his wife, Eden, joins him on the Bob Hope television show in Time for Elizabeth, a play written by Groucho and Norman Krasna.

Recently he introduced a folk music act composed of his grandchildren on the Steve Allen Show. "But that wasn't nepotism," Groucho declared. "Nepotism is when your relatives have no talent."

What of other Marxes? Daughter Melinda is nearing 18 and making sounds of wanting to be an actress. "I never suggested it to her," said Groucho, "and that's the surest way to make her want to do it."

Son Arthur is co-authoring a new television series, and brothers Gummo and Zeppo are involved in orange growing. And Harpo?

"He told me seven years ago he was retiring and he works in the A.M. now," said Groucho. "Right now he's touring the northwest making appearances for Jewish Welfare. I didn't even know he was Jewish."

CONTROVERSY TV SHOWS

With his family so actively employed, you'd think that Groucho might enjoy a leisurely life. But he continues his frequent television appearances. His last week he did two of Carl Reiner's Celebrity Game shows in one night—and he wouldn't be adverse to another series like his long-running You Bet Your Life. He is considering two or three opportunities to do so.

"Recently I read that I was 'coming out of semi-retirement' to play Time for Elizabeth, he said. "That's a laugh. But it didn't bother me. I still subscribe to the old George Cohan theory that if they spell your name right, it doesn't matter what they write about you."

Number of Viewers Find Some Words Unacceptable

By CYNTHIA LOWRY

NEW YORK (AP)—American television networks are getting loose-tongued lately.

CBS' program vice-president, Michael Dann, in a note to producers Thursday noted "an increase in the use of expressions which a significant number of viewers find unacceptable."

Dann said complaints had been received from viewers and affiliated stations about offensive words.

"We're cracking down," he said.

Even casual television viewers have noticed, on all networks, more frequent and incidental use of strong words and phrases which in many homes are considered shocking.

"Hell" and "damn" are used so incidentally these days that they are hardly noticed. Stronger expletives have occasionally erupted in tense emotional scenes in serious dramas."

There is another problem area in medical and psychiatric programs. Frequently the themes are built around subjects not usually discussed with children present.

Rev. L. E. Hawkes will end a twelve year ministry in Tweed to neighbouring Centreton where he conducts his last service on April 26th. The Rt. Rev. K. C. Evans, Bishop of Ontario has granted Mr. Hawkes a year's absence from the diocese. Mr. and Mrs. Hawkes will go to England, where for the first time Mr. Hawkes will work in St. Mary's Parish in Rusden as an assistant to the rector. It is expected Mr. Hawkes also will spend some time at St. Augustines' College, Canterbury, at seminary in Bible Studies and other subjects of interest to him.

Rev. David W. Sinclair, curate of St. Thomas' Church, Belleville will succeed Mr. Hawkes effective May 1st.

Mr. Hawkes came to the Tweed-Stirling parish May 1st, 1952 and since that time has been the incumbent of the North Addington mission.

During his ministership in Tweed, the parish became self-supporting, the new St. James' Church was built and plans are being made for a new rectory. A new church was also built at Sulphide and improvements and additions made to the Church of St. John at Centreton.

In tribute to Mr. and Mrs. Hawkes, the Ontario Church-man says: "The Diocese and the parishes have been very much blessed by the ministry that these two people have exercised. We wish them well in their leave and trust that when the year is over they will return to the Diocese with renewed energy and good health".

Astrological Forecasts

By SYDNEY OMARR

For April 25

Aries (Mar. 21 to Apr. 19): Good to make changes. But choose moves carefully. Your public image, partnerships, personality all spotlighted. This can be an action day. Be prepared. Hold "ace card" face down.

Taurus (Apr. 20 to May 20): Trying to hide basic facts would be mistake. Day to face issues. You will find many persons on "your side." Family support brightens day. Evening favors relaxation, home entertainment.

Gemini (May 21 to June 20): Some influence from "active people" could create problems. Heed your own counsel. Be mature. Place spotlight on moderation. Discourage those who would throw caution out of window.

Cancer (June 21 to July 22): Favorable lunar aspect points up pleasure, relaxation. But there is contradictory note. This could come in form of call for overtime work . . . or surprise change of plans.

Leo (July 23 to Aug. 22): Take your time in travel, answering correspondence. Utilize extra thought where letters are concerned. Remember that you must live up to promises. Obtain hint from Gemini message.

Virgo (Aug. 23 to Sept. 22): You are due to receive "break" you have been seeking. Opportunity beckons. Answer! Display initiative. Be independent. Offer your services. Highlight co-operative attitude.

Libra (Sept. 23 to Oct. 22): Fortunate if you are cautious. You have much in common with Aries people today. Check details. Avoid actions based strictly on impulse. Build from ground up. So far there is solid support-structure.

Scorpio (Oct. 23 to Nov. 21): Cycle moves up. You will obtain results. Doors previously closed . . . begin to open. Get facts in order. Exude air of confidence. Improve personal appearance!

Sagittarius (Nov. 23 to Dec. 21): Friends may require diplomatic treatment. Many are sensitive, "touchy." Offer encouragement and you will receive a great deal. Offer praise where it is due. Pleasant evening assured.

Capricorn (Dec. 22 to Jan. 19): Celebration appears to be keynote. If entertaining at home clear away fragile materiel! Many tend to be careless tonight. All in all, fine evening indicated.

Aquarius (Jan. 20 to Feb. 18): People now tend to react in unusual manner. You could find yourself in the centre of a dispute. Key — diplomacy. Don't become involved in verbal fireworks. But listen, note causes.

Pisces (Feb. 19 to Mar. 20): Fine lunar aspect points to reassurance of abilities. You can take place at social gathering. Come out of emotional shell. Express yourself. And tonight — be a good listener.

If today is your birthday . . . you are analytical; you strive for perfection and often find missing link which has puzzled experts. You're an extremely valuable sky!

General Tendencies: All are advised to hold their tempers — seems to be a day when emotions "run loose."

BAXTER CANNERY

With their own factory burned out, Baxter Cannery officials have decided to go ahead anyway with a lemonade pack this year. The pack, which normally would be started already, will be managed with Baxter machinery in rented quarters, probably the Hyatt Cannery in Cherry Valley, where Baxter's men have been packing pork and beans since the fire in Bloomfield.

The lemonade pack includes frozen lemonade, limeade and three fruit punch concentrates, packed under an arrangement with Realemon Inc., of Chicago. Normal production runs from April to June, with secondary runs during August and November.

Farm products are still the backbone of the business and the contractors rebuilding the cannery in Bloomfield have promised it will be ready for production by the start of the pea season in mid-June. Baxter's will be producing frozen peas this year too, under an arrangement with Trenton Cold Storage Ltd., in Trenton.

Other products packed normally at Bloomfield include tomatoes, (whole and juice), during August and September and pumpkin during October. Pork and beans are packed normally through April, May, August, October and December, and the plant is closed during January, February and March. Machinery in the old plant was normally overhauled during these three months, but the more-efficient equipment in the new plant won't need so much attention and the firm is looking for more products to produce during the late winter and early spring, according to Donald Baxter.

ONTARIO HYDRO

A total of 150 supervisors from Hydro area headquarters in the west half of Eastern Region came to the Belleville headquarters in Belleville last week for the annual safety conference.

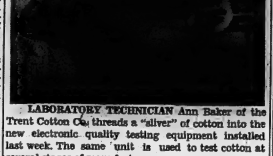
On hand for the meeting were C. R. C. Scott, Hydro's assistant general manager - personnel; Robert Harrison, director of accident prevention; L. Tenkin, code application engineer; R. E. Warner, general superintendent, forestry department; and R. D. Lindsay, electrical maintenance engineer, all of Toronto. Speakers from the Belleville office included H. T. Turley, operations engineer; R. J. Scully, mechanical maintenance engineer, and R. S. Throop, line maintenance engineer. Mr. Throop's remarks and the films dealing with the recently-introduced bare-hand technique in live-wire work were one of the day's highlights.

The evening speaker was J. R. Radford of radio station CFJR Brockville, who presented an illustrated travelogue on his world trip aboard cargo ships. Chairman for the two day-long events was Roy A. White of Belleville, safety officer for the west section of Hydro's Eastern Region.

PROCTOR-SALES

About thirty people have been hired by Proctor-Silex in Picton, since the Picton plant began production of toasters for the English market. The first shipment of 1,200 made-in-Picton toasters left for England last week. The Picton plant has taken the line over from a Proctor-Silex plant in the U.S., because the Picton plant is better suited to production for the limited volume market in England. The line will account for a third of the total production of the Picton plant. No building additions to the plant have been planned, but should the line be expanded so far, but equipment has been brought in and more will be added as required.

TRENT COTTON



Electronic quality control equipment was delivered to Trent Cotton Co. last week, and is in operation now. Ann Baker, laboratory technician at the plant, spent two weeks in Hamilton during March, learning to run the new equipment.

Tests are run at three stages of the process which produces yarn from rough cotton. After picking, carding and combing the cotton is tested as a "sliver" 60 feet long, section would-like strip, as roving, and as the completed yarn.

Faster, more accurate and more dependable than the old visual checks, the electronic equipment is also easier to use. Miss Baker spent a year in training before she was competent to manage the visual checks; she learned to check samples with the electronic equipment in two weeks.

LABORATORY TECHNICIAN Ann Baker of the Trent Cotton Co. threads a "sliver" of cotton into the new electronic quality testing equipment installed last week. The machine is used to test cotton at several stages of manufacture.

Eskimos Will Always Remain Separate Race - Tweedsmuir

By ROD CURRIE

LONDON (CP)—Lord Tweedsmuir, a man with "a passion for the Canadian North," says the Eskimo, unlike the North American Indian, will always remain a separate race.

"The Eskimos, the most cheerful of His Majesty's subjects, think of themselves, quite simply, as 'the people' and the Arctic as 'the country' and all beyond it as being 'the outside.'"

Tweedsmuir, son of Author John Buchan who became the first Lord Tweedsmuir and a governor - general of Canada, first went to the Arctic to work in a Hudson's Bay Company trading post in 1933. When the Second World War started he joined the Canadian Army and since then has returned to the North many times as a prospector.

In a recent lecture here to the Royal Society for the Encouragement of the Arts, Tweedsmuir said the white man is bringing change, and improvement, to the North but "whatever sophistication comes to the Eskimo he will always have something of his original simplicity and sturdiness."

"There will probably always be an Eskimo who will be prepared to sit long hours at a seal hole, or carve a small figure of an animal for his own pleasure."

HISTORY NOT RECORDED

Until recently they had no means of writing and thus they have no recorded history; they have little regard for the future and thus they often hunt imprudently. They think only of today.

"Any that I knew who went or were taken, for health reasons, to the south, returned to the North as fast as they could," Tweedsmuir said.

He found them almost completely without interest in "the outside." Stories or pictures of the great cities beyond left them confused, although they were fascinated by pictures of domestic animals or anything they could relate to things they knew.

The Second World War and the flow of white men into the North to build airfields and later the Distant Early Warning line had changed the North. For the most part, the Eskimos were simply interested observers, eager to pitch in and help on any project that engaged the while men, even if they didn't understand what it was all about.

GREAT SYMPATHY

The Canadian northern affair, a department, said Tweedsmuir, brings "great sympathy" to its task of helping the Eskimo in his new surroundings.

"They have found how difficult it is for nomads to learn to work at sedentary jobs, and all the difficulties that arise when two civilizations overlap each other."

Because of inter - marriage there are few pure-blooded Indians in Canada, he said, but this would never happen with the Eskimos.

"They have become part of Canada and been given the vote but this can mean little to a people so unpolitical that they have no institution of chieftainship.

"They will always go on thinking of their northern habitat as 'the country' and remain a people friendly, entirely [illegible]

Greek-Cypriots Mount Attack, Capture Forts

More Canadian Troops Arrive From Trenton

NICOSIA (Reuters) — Greek-Cypriot forces today mounted a heavy attack on the rocky mountain range above the northern end of the Nicosia-Kyrenia road and captured seven Turkish-Cypriot fortifications, a UN spokesman said.

An official Cyprus government statement said an estimated 15 Turkish-Cypriots were killed and one captured, while one Greek-Cypriot was wounded in the fighting.

The Greek - Cypriot advance on the eastern side of the Nicosia-Kyrenia road established Greek - Cypriot positions about Turkish - occupied St. Hilarion Castle.

It also permitted the Greek-Cypriots to dominate the Turkish-Cypriot emergency airfield built on the plains under the south side of the Kyrenia range.

Mortar fire was exchanged between Greek - Cypriot and Turkish-Cypriot positions on the peaks east of the Kyrenia road.

A 37-mile-long battle raged for a time today around the south coast hill village of Ayios Theodhoros. It started at dawn, but fighting was reported to have died down later after efforts by British troops to establish a cease-fire.

The UN spokesman said one Greek-Cypriot was killed during fighting in the village, scene of sporadic heavy firing during the last two days.

NICOSIA (CP)—A Canadian contingent of eight officers and 127 men arrived in Cyprus by plane Friday from Trenton, Ont., to form part of the brigade headquarters to be set up by the United Nations here.

They are mainly infantry quartered at Camp Troodos, two miles west of the capital.

Meanwhile a company of the Royal 22nd Regiment was rushed into Trabonas in the northern outskirts of Nicosia to break up a gun battle between Greek- and Turkish - Cypriots. The only casualties reported were one man slightly wounded on each side.

Criticism Batters Commission

By RONALD LESEL

EDMONTON (CP) — A hail-storm of criticism battered the royal commission on bilingualism and biculturalism here Friday night in its first contact with the westerner on the street.

The commission was accused bluntly of being an instrument to spread the French language by compulsion in overwhelmingly English - speaking areas and to undermine the rights of Canadians belonging to "third" ethnic groups.

Both charges were denied emphatically by Commission Co-chairman Davidson Dunton of Ottawa, who attended the all-day discussion with five of his nine colleagues.

Many proposals designed to help French - Canadians and other ethnic minorities safeguard their cultural heritages were aired at the morning and afternoon round - table discussions.

The same proposals came under attack at an evening public meeting, attended by 200 persons.

IS ROUGHEST

It was the commission's roughest reception in eight such meet-the-people informal meetings across Canada.

A man in a front row, who declined to identify himself, as did many other speakers at the evening session, started the lively debate this way:

"Mr. Dunton, where in the British North America Act does it say that Canada is a bicultural and bilingual country? It seems to us that this commission exists only to spread the French language everywhere."

Mr. Dunton replied with some heat that commission members were looking for ways to strengthen national unity. They

Reaction to Banking Report Shows Approval of More Banks

By THE CANADIAN PRESS

Approval for the idea of more Canadian banks was seen Friday night in early reaction to the report of the royal commission on banking and finance.

Strongest support for this view—as might be expected—came from two bodies in the current campaign to get charters for some new banks. Both used the expression to describe the report's recommendations—a "green light" for new banks.

James Coyne, former governor of the Bank of Canada and a leader of a group seeking a charter for the proposed Bank of Western Canada, said the report "seems to give a green light to new banks."

Premier W. A. C. Bennett of British Columbia, seeking a charter for the proposed Bank of British Columbia, has viewed the suggestion that mortgages under the National Housing Act should be freed to find their own level under market requirements, instead of being set by law.

Eastern Farmers Cited

By BEN WARD

OTTAWA (CP)—Alvin Hamilton called on the government Friday to take some drastic action to improve the plight of Eastern farmers. Many of them, he declared, are living in circumstances no better than city slums.

The former Conservative agriculture minister said there is a report, prepared under his administration 16 months ago, that is "shocking in its significance."

He challenged Agriculture Minister Hays to produce it and show the rest of the nation the desperate condition of farm families in eastern and Northern Ontario, Quebec and the Maritimes.

Prairies were two main problem areas in agriculture today —the Eastern farmer and the wheat situation. But the government had shown itself to be incapable of coping with them.

Mr. Hamilton, MP for Qu'Appelle, spoke as the Commons opened its study of the agriculture department's spending program for the 1964-65 fiscal year.

Mr. Hays, introducing the $108,000,000 batch of estimates, said he is stressing the development of research and ways to speed its application to practical farming.

"I think the importance of research and its contribution to agriculture is widely understood and appreciated," he said. But it was equally important that research be brought as closely as possible to the farming community which it is designed to serve."

Harold Winch (NDP — Vancouver East) complained that neither the Conservative nor Liberal governments has been able to come up with a real national farm policy. Instead they had used a "bits and pieces" approach, resulting in subsidies piled upon subsidies.

He cited the case of the $42,000,000 annual subsidy but pointed out subsidy paid for soybeans, chief source of oils for margarine which competed with butter.

H. A. Olson (SC—Medicine Hat) discussed the development of agriculture research in Alberta and praised the work being done.

However, the "missing link" in the research chain was to get farmers to adopt new scientific methods. Anything that could be done to improve this situation would be an important step forward.

The debate started and finished on the first item of the estimates and no progress was made.

Quebec's Retail Sales Tax Now Highest in Canada

By THE CANADIAN PRESS

Quebec's new uniform retail sales tax of six per cent, announced in the legislature by Premier Lesage Friday, makes the sales tax in that province the highest in Canada.

Sales taxes had been divided among three jurisdictions in Quebec, with the province and school boards each collecting two per cent. Municipalities were free to collect one or two per cent if they wished. This meant sales taxes could vary from four to six per cent among municipalities.

The new uniform rate, announced in the premier's budget speech, is intended as a temporary measure for the 1964-65 fiscal year pending a report from the royal commission studying taxation in Quebec.

Banking close behind Quebec are Newfoundland, Prince Edward Island, Nova Scotia, British Columbia and Saskatchewan, each with five-per-cent sales taxes. Ontario and New Brunswick have three-per-cent sales taxes and Manitoba levies a tax of one-fifth of a cent on each cigarette sold in the province although Premier Duff Roblin is reported considering a general sales tax.

Alberta has no sales tax.

No immediate increases in the tax are at present contemplated by the governments levying them.

Prince Edward Island's tax was inaugurated at four per cent in 1960 and increased to five per cent years ago. Nova Scotia's was instituted in 1959 but food, not including restaurant meals, children's clothing, fuel, farm equipment, commercial fishing equipment and drugs, among other things, is exempt.

New Brunswick's sales tax was introduced in 1952 at four per cent but has since been reduced to three. Newfoundland's was imposed in 1960 and ap-

Royal Commission Items Recommend Dismantling Some Financial Structures

New Legal Limits Would Be Set For All Personal Cash Loans

By DON HANRIGHT

OTTAWA (CP) — New, real competition in Canada's whole system of lending and borrowing—plus more protection and information for the public—is proposed in a bulky report by the royal commission on banking and finance.

If adopted, recommendations in the report, tabled in the Commons Friday, would dismantle some of the financial structures by which Canadians have lived for years—especially the statutory six-per-cent interest ceiling on bank loans, unchanged for 20 years.

It would be abolished.

This bold new system would force all creditgrantors to reveal interest rates as well as dollar charges on all credit. New legal limits would be set, for all personal cash loans. The banks would be admitted to the field of mortgage loans, a move that could make it easier and perhaps cheaper to buy new and old houses.

Moreover, Canadians would have to think of "banks" in a new way—not just the multi-branched chartered banks and "deposit taking institutions" term deposits from the public, such as trust and loan companies and credit unions.

BANKS' STILL BANKS

The commission proposed that these, too, become banks—with the same banking powers, the same restrictions, the same federal supervision and inspection. But only the banks, as now known, could continue to use that title without qualification. The others would have to add something to their titles to indicate their own special nature.

The underlying philosophy of the report was this:

"A spirit of vigorous, restless innovation in the financial system—of devising new ways to do things rather than of justifying why they cannot be done or should be helped—as a research director —to write, the Gordon royal commission report on Canada's economic prospects in 1956.

PRESENT SYSTEM GOOD

"In essence, the commission found a good financial system. It had become well - adapted to Canadian needs but in the process "some gaps have appeared in the framework of regulation designed to protect the public."

The report was unanimous — not a sign of dissent.

The writing job fell mainly to the commission secretary, 33-year-old H. A. (Tony) Hampson of Toronto, a brilliant young economist who once worked in the finance department and also helped—as a research director —to write, the Gordon royal commission report on Canada's economic prospects in 1956.

PRESENT SYSTEM GOOD

"In essence, the commission found a good financial system. It had become well - adapted to Canadian needs but in the process "some gaps have appeared in the framework of regulation designed to protect the public."

To Select Leader In Spring '65

By BOB EXELL

TORONTO (CP) — Ontario Liberals are expected to set a spring, 1965, date for their party's leadership convention when the provincial association convenes for its annual convention next month.

The party lost its leader in the Sept. 25, 1963, provincial election, with the defeat of John Wintermeyer in his home riding of Waterloo North. Since then, Farquhar Oliver, member for Grey South, has been acting Liberal leader.

Liberal sources said Friday their new leader will come from the party's 23 sitting members of the legislature. Reports that an outsider might be brought in were discounted.

The sources confirmed however, that a "political action group" within the party has been pushing Charles Templeton, executive editor of the Toronto Star, as the next Ontario Liberal leader.

One top Liberal said that no matter how politically aware Mr. Templeton was, the fact that he had never held political office would rule him out as leader. This official said Mr. Templeton, "even with his known speaking ability as a former evangelist, would be slaughtered in the house."

MEETS IN MAY

The Liberal management committee is not scheduled to meet until Thursday, May 14, immediately prior to the Ontario Liberal Association's annual meeting May 15 and 16.

Liberals at Queen's Park consider the best bet for leader to be Andy Thompson, the former social worker who represents the Toronto riding of Dovercourt. Another contender, however, the fact that Mr. Thompson is from Toronto will work against him.

Stratford Players Lose Hearts To Queen Mother After Meeting

CHICHESTER, England (CP) Queen Mother Elizabeth captivated the hearts of Canada's Stratford Players Friday night when she went on stage to meet them after a gala charity performance of Love's Labour's Lost at the Chichester Festival Theatre.

"A delightful company, so professional," said the Queen Mother to one actor. Over-whelmed, he blurted out, "so are you, ma'am." The Queen Mother beamed with pleasure as Canadian stage manager Brian Swerdfager presented her on around the company, gathered in a horseshoe-shaped line for the presentations.

The Queen Mother was particularly intrigued by 12-year-old Jennifer Mecchi, who plays the pageboy Moth in the style of a 17th century quis-kid.

It was a night to remember for the Canadian company, whose three - week season of Shakespeare and Moliere at the West Sussex theatre has been voted a "walloping success" by all connected with it.

The gala performance, arranged by the dowager Countess of Scarbrough, widow of a

Operation of Credit Unions Will Not Be Disrupted by Proposals by Commission

OTTAWA (CP) — The operation of credit unions and caisses populaires will not be disrupted by proposals of the royal commission on banking and finance.

The commission devoted a complete chapter of its report, tabled in the Commons Friday, to this question. Purpose of a series of recommendations "is to strengthen credit unions and caisses populaires so that their financial condition may fully justify the confidence which members place in them."

None of the recommendations would affect the day - to - day operation of credit unions.

But one of the chief suggestions would result in credit union "centrals" — organizations set up to act as central banks for large groups of credit unions — being brought under federal bank laws.

"Each central should be required to maintain adequate cash reserves in relation to its own liabilities and the liabilities of its member societies" and they should hold cash reserves at the Bank of Canada to integrate their operations in the country's financial system.

SHOULD JOIN CENTRAL

As part of the process of tightening regulations around the credit union movement, the report suggests that all local branches be required to belong to a central to be assured of temporary funds outside their own resources. The government should do part in supervising centrals to see they were always in a position to meet the needs of local branches.

Inspection is a serious problem in many provinces, the report said.

In Quebec the caisses populaires "have adopted the most thorough inspection procedures in spite of the fact that the Quebec legislation does not provide for any clear government responsibility in this area."

But in other provinces, even when governments are responsible for supervision, "the supervisory staff is not always equal to the task expected of it."

The commission had heard of an example from British Columbia where one inspector and two assistants were responsible for 236 local branches.

The lack of over-all supervision to ensure adequate safeguards is one of the most serious problems facing the credit union movement, said the report.

DIFFICULTIES POSSIBLE

"In spite of their excellent records to date, the fact that both locals and centrals can and do borrow from chartered banks when need arises, the danger of liquidity maintained by credit union systems in some parts of the country raises questions about future development. . . .

"If the growth rate were to drop at all suddenly because of a change in the competitive situation, because the flow of potential new members shrank or disappeared, or because of increased sensitivity to general monetary policy, serious liquidity problems might develop."

The report noted that another royal commission now is considering the tax structure around credit unions and other co-operative organizations, so it didn't go into the subject in detail.

However, it recommended that the retained earnings of credit unions—now tax-free — should be subject to corporate tax and that the restrictions on tax-free reserves that apply to chartered banks also be applied to credit union.

Since most of the earnings of locals are less than $30,000, said the report, the 21-per-cent tax rate would apply, and because these would not be levied on those of most competing institutions, it should not cause "undue difficulties."

Credit unions and caisses populaires now formed a "significant" part of Canada's financial system. The movement had 4,700 local branches with nearly 3,000,000 members and assets of more than $1,600,000,000.

The commissioners could not accept suggestions that credit unions, through lack of concern for interest yield, were misallocating the resources of communities.

Easter Sunday is celebrated from midnight Saturday on, and one tradition Rynan "Christos Anesthi" (Christ is Risen), is sung daily for forty days. On the Sunday afternoon, the Vespers "Epsheres Anastasis" also called "Agape") is celebrated by candlelight. After the service, forty days of fasting are broken with the breaking of traditionally decorated eggs.

Freak Accident Puts Picton Vet In Hospital

A Picton veterinary surgeon, Dr. K. A. Euler, is in isolation in Kingston General Hospital, believed to be suffering from the after-effect of an accidental injection of vaccine.

Dr. Euler was preparing to give a vaccine injection to a cow, when the cow kicked back, and the needle entered the doctor's arm or hand.

It was presumed such an accidental injection results in the development of undulient fever, a form of bacterial hazard for veterinarians" according to Dr. Harry Burns, veterinarian Dr. Harry Burns.

The accident to Dr. Euler occurred several weeks ago but he went to hospital only this week.

The former assistant with Dr. Burns in Belleville, Dr. Euler has been practising in the Kingston area for the past two years. He is the son of Mr. and Mrs. Karl Euler, operator of the Penguin Fish and Chip shop in Belleville.

Royal Commission

These are among its gap-closing recommendations:

—Federal securities regulation. This would be coupled with stiffer laws against stock frauds, a general up-grading of stock exchanges, higher stocking standards for stock exchanges and a once - and - for - all sale of the 11 - cent stamp distribution on stock exchanges which is on concert parties and which is raised for raising speculation but only about $150,000,000 actually spent on exploration.

—Measures to curb concentrations of power in the financial business. The banks would be barred from investing in other banking institutions and blocked from investing more than 10-per-cent share ownership of other financial companies. The government would be given the power to review past mergers and apply remedies, if necessary.

—Pension fund investments would be regulated—for the first time. The commission found it illogical that the law now regulates the investment of life insurance company savings but is silent on pension funds, to which many Canadian workers are now forced to contribute.

—More financial disclosure by corporations. Canadian standards were inadequate. Companies should be required to publish prompt, comprehensive annual statements—with the Ontario Securities Commission also called "Agape") is celebrated by candlelight. After the service, forty days of fasting are broken with the breaking of traditionally decorated eggs.

—Improved liquidity for credit unions and caisses populaires. The commission stressed they are sound, but should have steps to be sure certain...they ...would ...supply moneys demanded from them in event of an adverse swing in the economic pendulum. All local unions would be required to join centrals, the sort of provincial or regional banks for the movement. Most already belong.

—Full disclosure of mutual fund investment policies, especially whether speculative investments are made. This would be coupled with greater disclosure of operations, such as the practice under which some shareholders get only a substantial loss if they try to redeem their shares soon after making payments. Government moves toward self-regulation in the industry were praised.

The pivotal point in the report was the recommendation to abolish the six-per-cent ceiling on bank interest rates. The commission said this should be done regardless of any of the other recommendations.

In effect, the ceiling applies mainly to business loans. Since about 1958 the banks have piled up about $1,462,000,000 in personal loans at effective rates of interest between 9¼ and 11¼ per cent, without any challenged by the authorities.

If this is a breach of the spirit of federal law, the commission said, then it is "not an argument for forcing the banks out of this business but for legislation for amending an outdated law."

IMPROVEMENT NEEDED

The present limit had a "distorting" effect — especially in tight-money periods when the banks, prevented by the statutory limit from following the upward trend in rates, had to ration credit among their customers. Some borrowers thus were driven to high-cost lenders.

None of the banks' competitors opposed removal of the six-per-cent ceiling, the commission noted. Most in fact were in favor of raising it out on grounds of equity.

"Removal of the six-per-cent ceiling would increase competition and over time would be substantial and desirable changes in banks' lending policies."

For one thing, the report noted, the limit has had a lot to do with the fact deposit interest rates in the banks are not higher. Unable to charge more, the banks have been unable to pay more on deposits.

Changes are unlikely to be abrupt and startling, the report said.

Some bank rates — especially on short - term, well-secured call-type loans — are now free rates, perhaps lower than at present. The stricter loans would be priced above six per cent.

MORTGAGE LOANS URGED

Equally significant was the proposal for lifting the long-standing prohibition on bank mortgage lending. This goes back to the early years of Canadian banking, when many banks got involved in lasting for many loans on real estate values that suddenly collapsed.

The prohibition has been gradually eased over the years. The banks now can make many mortgage loans — but only where the government guarantees repayment, such as under the National Housing Act and in loans to farmers, fishermen and small businesses. Their personal lending is bound by the power they received in 1954 to take household property as security, though most loans are unsecured.

But now, under the commission's recommendations, for the first time they would get the power to make all mortgage loans—to business as well as to individuals. In effect they could lend up to 75 per cent of the value of new or old houses by issuing first mortgages, plus loans that would in effect be second mortgages.

This proposal is coupled with two others:

1. The NHA maximum interest rate would be set free—left to the market to determine, instead of being pegged by the government. This would have an upper limit of five percentage points above the long-term government bond yield, now a little over 5¼ per cent. That it could hit above 6% per cent if rates compared with the pegged rate of 6¼ per cent at present.

2. Larger non-NHA mortgages would be allowed. The lending limit in this "conventional" mortgage field would be raised to 75 per cent of the property's appraised value, from the 2-3 per cent it is now applies to the big mortgage lenders such as trust, insurance and loan companies and 60 per cent for the Quebec savings banks.

NO BANK LOANS

The over-all effect, the commission said, would be to make it easier for borrowers without relying on high - cost second mortgages, often made at "go-go" rates. The banks, however, would be no need to extend NHA provisions to purchase of mortgages. Instead, the federal government could withdraw from the massive mortgage lending carried through the Central Mortgage and Housing Corporation.

Under this structure, all institutions doing a banking business would be brought under the provisions of the federal Bank Act.

The commission defined banking—not other authority anywhere in the world has yet provided a definition—generally as the acceptance from the public of funds that can be withdrawn on demand or after notice, or transferred by cheque. Under this yardstick, only the Post Office would be 100 days.

About the trust and loan companies in this field, plus the credit unions, would get banking powers as well as restrictions. All others would be prohibited from doing a banking business with the public.

Provincially - incorporated companies doing such business would be required either to get federal incorporations or apply to Ottawa for a banking license. All others would be banned from the field.

These banking institutions would be required to keep a specified amount of cash in the Bank of Canada, as only the chartered banks have to do now. This amount would be equal to seven per cent of their demand liabilities and four per cent of their genuine notice deposits. No other reserves would be called for.

Rate - setting agreements among these institutions would be prohibited, except on banking procedures, or charges for routine services, would be subject to government approval.

The commission in its proposal to give all these "banks" equal powers of lending and borrowing stopped short in one respect. Though, all these companies would be free to enter banking without restriction, the banks would not be allowed to at least not yet—to seek trustee powers from provincial governments.

were not crusaders and their mission was not to force Canadians to become bilingual.

Alan Lee took a different tack. "If my sons aspire to high positions in the federal civil service, will it be imperative for them to be fluently bilingual? If it is, all Canadians living outside Quebec will be at a severe disadvantage."

A Ukrainian-born federal civil servant who speaks several languages, but not French said bilingualism should only be required in posts where a knowledge of both English and French is important. In Alberta, bilingualism in the civil service was a waste of time, effort and money.

A woman asked why the Quebec government wanted to withdraw from federal - provincial programs, while at the same time Canadians sought a larger representation in the civil service administering those programs.

Charles Johnstone, another teacher, said French - Canadians simply want an opportunity to be themselves anywhere in Canada.

A woman drew a mixture of applause, laughter and shouts of protest, when she said:

"This thing could be settled so easily if only they taught children English in Quebec. Having only one language would be much easier and cheaper than to go through all this mess. I can't see the sense of it for the life of me."

Four People Are Hurt In District Accidents

The 401 Highway north of Marysville, where the four-lane road merges into a two-lane artery, saw still another serious accident last night, as a Kingston car and a car transport collided.

In Belleville General Hospital with a fractured right leg, a broken arm and head injuries is Patrick O'Toole, 24, of Elgin.

Police said that Mr. O'Toole was westbound on the two-lane 401 when he apparently missed the turn onto the north lane and collided with an eastbound car transport driven by Fred Dearborn of Montreal.

At the last moment the driver of the car is believed to have realized his mistake and swerved to avoid the oncoming transport which slammed into the right side of the car.

The injured man was taken to hospital by LaSalle Ambulance. The truck driver was uninjured.

Police said it was about the sixth accident involving injuries at the spot this year.

CAR ROLLS OVER

A second accident on Highway 401 occurred early this morning when a blowout sent a car off the roadway at the Aiken's Church sideroad, seven miles west of Belleville.

The car, a small German model driven by John Womy of Montreal, rolled over in the median. Womy was injured.

And on the northeast limits of Belleville, Leo Pitt, R.R. 6, suffered neck injuries when his car crashed with a vehicle owned by Carol Ferrill, Belleville.

Property damage was heavy in the mishap on Thurlow township's second concession.

At Madoc, provincial police reported two received minor injuries, when a car went out of control on the Madoc County Road early today.

Names of the injured or details of the mishap were not immediately known.

the Laurentide Bank of Canada, said elimination of the six-per-cent interest ceiling "would be fine if at the same time the interest rate were set by competition."

He said it would be difficult, however, to count on competition setting the rate at the moment because of the small number of chartered banks.

A recommendation that full interest rates on all credit be disclosed was criticized by C. Powell Morhab, president of Atlantic Acceptance Corporation Limited, as a "mathematical impossibility."

PLEASED BY APPROACH

On the question of financial disclosures by companies, J. R. Kimber, chairman of the Ontario Securities Commission, said he is generally pleased with the report's approach.

"Whether or not these recommendations will be adopted as a whole is another thing," he said. "But the important thing is that the commission took time to study the situation."

C. Warren Goldring, president of the Toronto Society of Financial Analysts, welcomed the recommendations concerning financial disclosures.

"I am particularly pleased to see the suggestion that sales figures should accompany any prospectus."

Milling Area of Co-op Plant Destroyed, Loss Is $80,000

PICTON — Fire yesterday destroyed the milling area of the Prince Edward Poultry Products Co-op here Friday. Damage has been estimated at about $80,000.

The milling area, main work area of the Co-Op, is located on the south west corner of the Prince Edward Fruit Co-Op building. There is also a deep freeze locker service in the building.

The alarm was turned in about 2:30 p.m. to the Picton Fire Department. Bloomfield and Army Camp Picton fire departments were also called out. The plant, just outside the Picton town limits in Hallowell township, is technically in the Bloomfield area.

Minutes after the alarm, dense clouds of smoke poured from the basement windows and from a sheet metal penthouse. About 3 p.m. the penthouse exploded scattering frame sections and sheet metal around the scene. One large piece of sheet metal narrowly missed a fireman. After the explosion, open flames flared from the roof and fire spread quickly in the one corner of the building. Firewalls protected the rest of the structure.

EQUIPMENT DESTROYED

Equipment in the milling area was destroyed, along with the stocks of eggs in storage, and grain and chemical fertilizers.

Oats and barley stored in two large concrete silos next to the corner of the building caught fire and was destroyed, although the silos were apparently unharmed.

The fire, according to one employee, apparently started in the basement area of the mill, from a combination of an overheated motor and spontaneous combustion.

By 5 p.m., the fire was under control and the Bloomfield fire department took over mopping up operations.

William Mullin, manager of the Co-op, said today that arrangements have been made to bring a portable mill to the site to keep the business going. During the winter and early spring months, feed demands of local farmers are constant and the mill is in steady use. The rush for milled feed will be over in about two weeks, when the cattle are back on spring pasture.

The destroyed area, Mr. Mullin said, will be rebuilt and put back into operation. Yesterday's fire was the second in five years in the mill. The last fire cost about $97,000.

Crucial aid was sent from Belleville at the height of the blaze.

Fire Chief Gerald Vance rushed one of his aerial ladders across Prince Edward county to the fire where it was pressed into play against the threat.

Another Weirdie

Saskatchewan raises bumper crops of two things, wheat and weird political ideas.

The results of Wednesday's provincial election did nothing to impair its already solidly established reputation in this field.

Saskatchewan's entry into the weird and wonderful category of political exhibits came twenty years ago, when it elected Canada's first —and to date its only—socialist government. A farming community setting the pace in the leftward race was enough to raise eyebrows in socialist circles around the world.

Then, in the past few years, we have had the strange spectacle of the Saskatchewan voters straddling the full political spectrum, with a socialist regime in the province and an overwhelmingly Conservative representation in the Federal House.

The last federal election enhanced, rather than diminished, this paradox, the province giving all its seats to the Progressive Conservatives at a time when most of the rest of the country was rejecting that party's bid for a return to power. . . .

Now we find that Wednesday's provincial election has confirmed the Saskatchewan voters' refusal to take the Progressive Conservatives seriously in the provincial arena, only one being elected. The fact that the Liberals edged the CCF, defeating the government after a twenty-year rule, also has some strange overtones. The CCF percentage of the vote was unchanged, so that it is obvious the success of the Liberals was the result of their ability to draw support from electors who, in other years, voted Conservative or Social Credit. There seems little reason to doubt that this evident desire to oust the CCF at any price stemmed partly from disapproval of medicare. Yet Ross Thatcher, the Liberal leader, is on record as promising not only to retain medicare but also to widen its benefits. The Liberals thus appear to have picked up the votes of those outside the party who dislike medicare, while managing to avoid losing any of their normal supporters who approve the plan.

Results were so close, eight seats being decided by margins of less than 100 votes, that one cannot help wondering whether Tommy Douglas might not have saved the day for the CCF had he not left the provincial arena for the federal.

The really important election, though, will be the next one. What future has the CCF now? It has been wiped out federally, a blueprint of the operation for this young and ambitious New Democratic movement, which ran against former Defence Minister Douglas Harkness in Calgary North in the last election and then, just as unsuccessfully, in Ottawa East in the next campaign.

Ottawa Offbeat

So-Called 'Obstruction' Opposition Doing Its Job

By RICHARD JACKSON

From The Intelligencer's Ottawa Bureau

OTTAWA — Don't buy that political jazz about "obstruction" in Parliament.

Suppose the Government is having a difficult time — and it is so what else is new?

Only the bright-eyed visionaries, the political freshmen, the new boys in the Parliamentary league, call it "obstruction."

To the old hands, and these include the veterans among the Parliamentarians themselves — people like Defence Minister Paul Martin and Transport Minister Pickersgill who have been around Parliament Hill longer that they probably care to remember — this so-called "obstruction" is simply the Opposition busy doing its assigned job of opposing.

It's been going on for years, certainly as long as Paul Martin has been in the Commons, (and that's 20 years), and probably much longer.

Clear back, likely, to Confederation itself.

Prime Ministers always talk about "obstruction."

Mackenzie King did. So did Louis St. Laurent and John Diefenbaker. And now Lester Pearson.

But it's nothing more than a time honored, and trusted trick of the Prime Ministerial trade.

If things aren't coming easily to the Government — and a Prime Minister ever has found the House a bed of political roses — the Opposition, unanimously, is to charge it all up to Opposition "obstruction."

POLICY INSTRUMENT

Never, never, when you're Prime Minister, think for a moment —especially out loud where you might be overheard — that some of your troubles might be a little of your own making.

As were Mackenzie King's with conscription.

Or St. Laurent's with the pipeline.

And Diefenbaker's with defence.

So now Pearson's with Quebec and bicculturalism.

Always blame it on the stubborn, obstinate, unreasonable, intransigent Opposition. Maybe that way you'll be able to do your political enemy enough damage to prevent him damaging and even destroying you.

For the peaceful political overthrow of a government by the business of Opposition.

If you're Prime Minister, you're the bull's eye in the Opposition target, and its aim is your head, and mouth.

It was only in the last nine years that the discovery was made of its being possible to destroy the Government in Parliament, right there on the floor of the Commons.

That old political warhorse, Paul Martin, has told Harry Hyde all about it. That was the blueprint of the operation for this young and ambitious New Democrat, who had run against former Defence Minister Douglas Harkness in Calgary North in the last election and then, just as unsuccessfully, in Ottawa East in the next campaign.

In the thick, heavy book of Martin political experience, the first Government actually destroyed in the Commons was the St. Laurent Administration.

KEY WITNESS

Paul Martin was a member of that Government, (in fact, its most battle-tested veteran) and saw it happen.

The Conservatives — Leader George Drew and his lieutenants, John Diefenbaker, Donald Fleming, Douglas Harkness, George Hees, Davie Fulton, George Nowlan, Jay Waldo Monteith and even Ellen Fairclough — simply refused it to death, beating it into the ground with the pipeline.

They so harassed poor kindly old "Uncle Louie," who sat there in all but silent helplessness, that there was nothing for him to do but call an election and appeal to the people.

The Conservatives filibustered, held up the Government's Estimates interminably, stalled the business of the Commons, and brought Parliament to a grinding halt.

Deliberately they did it, sensing the weakness of the previously so - firmly - entrenched Liberals, and riding it in with cold calculation for the kill.

Nothing in the contrived death of the St. Laurent Government escaped Paul Martin's sharp political eye.

And after the '62 election, when the Diefenbaker Conservatives were returned, uncertainly with a minority mandate, to Parliament, Paul Martin saw that of '56.

With equally icy calculation just as deliberately as they had been destroyed back in '56, the Liberals set about to destroy the Conservatives in late '63 and early '64.

They used the same politically-bloodied strategy and tactics.

ENCORE

Day after day, he stood up in the Commons during the question period, and blandly ignoring Governor Speaker Marcel Lambert's frantically desperate calls for Order, harassed John Diefenbaker and his Cabinet with a destructive verbal cross fire.

There were endless questions, many of them outrageously out of order, continuing points of order, interminable questions of privilege. The estimates were held up. Filibusters were mounted. The business of Parliament ground almost to a stop.

The harassed Prime Minister seemed to lose the power of

To Your Good Health

Wise to Put Off Wearing Contact Lenses a While

By JOSEPH G. MOLNER, M.D.

Dear Dr. Molner: I have been wearing glasses since the fifth grade. I am now 15 and feel up with them. I want contact lenses but my mother and our eye doctor are against it. So prescribe for me to wait until I am 18. He says the eyes can easily be injured by a careless move in the case of contacts.

This sounds to me as though he thinks I am irresponsible and do not know the value of my own eyes.

Is it true that the eyes seldom change after one begins to use contacts. My girl friend's doctor told her so. — B. H.

I'm not opposed to contacts, but I think you are going overboard on this.

Age is not arbitrarily a barrier but in practice it has been found that young people do tend to have more of some kinds of troubles.

One is that putting lenses in place is a delicate job. It can be done by people of 18 — or younger — but I wish you'd try to sympathize with the old fogies who notice that in the upper years the passing year does add its bit to increased maturity and carefulness.

The activities of young people are such that they are by no means conducive to losing a lens. And contact lenses are fitted precisely — optically correct, but also fitted perfectly to your eyeball — that it is a costly thing to make. A lost contact lens is much more expensive to replace than a pair of spectacles.

The end was swift.

That was the second Government in succession, destroyed on the floor of Parliament.

What they first did to the Liberals, what the Liberals then did to them, the Conservatives got ready to start trying to do again to the Liberals.

The Conservatives want to make the Pearson administration the third Government to die on the floor of the House.

The parliamentary situation now reversed, prevails as before. And the tactics and strategy are unchanged and unchanging: harassment, delay, continuing and damaging criticism, filibustering, and finally, if successful, destruction.

If a Government is strong and on good firm ground, it survives, easily — as the Liberals did for the 22 years before the '56 debacle. If not ? —

Temperament plays a part, too. Some persons tolerate the lenses for long periods. Others find that the eyes become irritated and can wear the lenses for only short periods.

Damage to the eyeball is an inherent possibility, quite aside from the question of getting the lenses in place. Ulcers can form, with a scar resulting. This is no trifling matter.

Climate also is a factor: other things being equal, contacts are less tolerated better in cold than in warm areas.

It is sometimes true that contact wearers can no longer between fittings than the wearers of ordinary glasses. At the same time, it is just wishful thinking to suppose that contact lenses never have to be replaced. As the eye changes with a small amount, the old contacts do have to be discarded and new ones fitted.

But putting off getting contacts a little while longer will prevent more grief than it will cause, and there is no law in the world of being certain, beforehand, whether you are one of the people who can wear them, or whether this is going to be an expensive luxury which you can use only occasionally.

Dear Dr. Molner: I am slightly overweight. Are there fewer calories in the artificial sweeteners than in sugar? — R. J. S.

There are no calories in the artificial sweeteners. There are 16 to 18 calories in a teaspoonful of sugar.

GLEANINGS FROM OUR FYLES OF BYGONE YEARS

90 YEARS AGO

April 29th, 1944.

From Trenton comes the information that Mayor Ross Burt and his council are elated over the price the town of Trenton received from the Provincial government for 28 acres at the north end of Sidney Street. It is understood that the price will be the location of a new subway for the railroad routing traffic from the new four mile long way into Trenton.

The Highway Department offered the town $150 an acre for the land. The town asked $900 an acre. On Tuesday night council unanimously accepted the government's new offer of $600 an acre. In a letter accompanying the offer the writer pointed out that the government considered the tract valuable to the town as industrial land; hence the reason for the increase in the offer.

Hastings county councillors are a bit concerned over the spread of prices on all items from the time they leave the producers' hands until they are delivered to the consumers. This was indicated yesterday when councillors entered into a lively discussion on the resolution from Grey County was read calling for an investigation into the spread of foodstuffs. Councillors concurred in the resolution.

Reeve Earl Sager of Madoc township said the majority of people knew where the responsibility of the price increase lay. "The reason is that anybody, who has anything to do with food, or thinks he has anything to do with it, after it leaves the producers hands, receives top wages, while on the other hand the farmer has to sell his product at the price that the market dictates and he can get."

Editorials From French — Canadian Papers

Quite a Difference

Mr. W. Garfield Weston, the distinguished Canadian-born British industrialist, says colored South Africans possess a mentality fundamentally different from that of white people.

It has always been our conviction that a man's mentality is revealed in the language he uses.

By a fortunate coincidence, it so happens that a colored South African was quoted on the same day as Mr. Weston. This South African was Nelson Mandela, former secretary-general of the banned African National Congress.

We therefore offer quotations from these two gentlemen.

"I did what I did because of my experiences in Africa and not because of what any outsider might have said."

"Believe me, every black pickaninny or black mammy can call on the government for solution to any social problem."

Hmmm—we see what Mr. Weston means. There is quite a difference in phraseology, quite a difference.

No, no, no—the first speaker was Mr. Mandela.

I find it difficult to say anything about a great work of art: it exists, it talks its own language, and its language is not words . . . I am certain that greatness lies in some elusive, indefinable magic as often achieved by breaking the accepted rules as by keeping to them.—Bernard Meadows, Professor of Sculpture at the Royal College of Art, London.

This is a selection of editorials on current topics, translated from the French-language press of Canada.

Montreal Le Devoir—Who emerges the victor from the intense negotiations of the last 10 days? Mr. Pearson? Mr. Lesage? Mr. Roberts?

Only fruitful minds will react in that paltry manner. The two great victors are, to our way of thinking, elderly persons and true federalists.

The Pearson statement reveals a clear triumph of the true federal spirit, without which Canada could not survive.

In the pension field, Ottawa is no longer attempting to occupy the ground alone. The federal government has finally agrees to each interested province consenting to itself the entire administration of its program. It agrees to put its offices at the disposal of certain provinces that would prefer to entrust the management of their pension scheme to Ottawa. It is the end of an old era when only a program, administered and directed by Ottawa could be truly "national."

Outwardly the Pearson government is yielding ground. It will be accused in certain circles of having retreated. Mr. Pearson anticipated this objection. To change one's opinion is not necessarily to withdraw. And if it is a change of opinion that, as far as one can tell, serves the common good, it is of progress, not withdrawal, that one must speak.

Mr. Pearson has wished to recognize the priority of provincial needs in education and to serve the interests of the Canadian people as a whole.

Are we at "a turning point" in the history of Confederation? It is too early to be able to make such a big statement. But at least, a ray of light has appeared. Let us rejoice.—Claude Ryan. (April 21)

* * *

Montreal La Presse — The new entente between Ottawa and the provinces announced in the Commons by Mr. Pearson constitutes an honorable compromise for the parties involved, notably the central power and Quebec.

Quebec, on the one side, is sacrificing some of the characteristics of its own pension plan and of consenting to a constitutional amendment that would allow the federal plan to cover widows and orphans. On the other, Ottawa is, in substance, accepting the Quebec pension plan, leaving it in its entire administration and modifying its attitude toward allowances and student loans, where the principle of fiscal compensation will come into play.

As for the taxpayer, he is fully protected by the complete portability of his contributions, no matter to which plan they are made. The Quebec taxpayer in addition, is seeing the hideous spectre of double taxation disappear.

Finally, and this is the point we should especially like to stress, the compromise in question has surely saved, at least for the time being, a Confederation seriously threatened.

Confederation is not necessarily saved for all time. It is an extremely flexible system that can only be maintained by perpetual readjustments. It is a system that will constantly need saving. But the fact that such a thorny problem has been settled triumphantly justifies a certain optimism about the future.

Mr. Lesage emerges from this crisis greater figure and Mr. Pearson is in no way diminished. The former has proved that Quebec, on essential aspects of superior quality and that its fights can serve the whole country. The latter, by his patience and sincerity, has salvaged his administration's principal asset and even enhanced his popularity. . . .

Vincent Prince, (April 21).

* * *

Quebec Le Soleil—On the morrow of the last federal-provincial conference we refused to admit that it had been a total defeat. On the contrary, we felt it had served to stimulate new discussions, the results of which would be known later. Our only mistake was the duration of the delay. We spoke of months. It took about two weeks to get out of the impasse and, thanks to the good will shown on all sides, to find solutions to problems of the most obvious urgency.

An important few chapter has opened in the history of Confederation. Nobody can so foresee the eventual possibility of a scheme of federalism more supple than the one so practised since the beginning of the post-war period. The credit belongs equally to the provincial and federal governments. Neither can claim the credit for having taken the initiative in new discussions that led to the results we now know, the other provinces and the central power must be given credit for not entrenching themselves in impregnable positions. Is it to be concluded also that the era is finally decided to put an end to the dialogue of the deaf and work to build a new type of Confederation? We hope so, for a great deal remains to be accomplished. (April 21).

Montreal-Matin — There is certainly sudden and general breaking than to see abandoned farms, shutters nailed up like coffins, families moving into ruins, good Quebec earth where nothing is coming up but weeds.

The city folks tend to say that the farmer is an eternal grouch, that he is not a poor as he makes out and that, in any case, since Quebec's future lies in its industry (or so they are shouting on every rooftop), the farmer usually emigrates to the big city. There he will be able to live on credit like everybody else and, since Montreal is a big place full of lights and attractions, he will end up loving his hovel and his drab work in the factory.

People who reason that way may scarcely be exaggerating. Agriculture is considered a negligible quantity. The budget devoted to it by the League government is getting smaller every year. The province feeds itself with produce from the southern Ontario states. We eat tomatoes that ripen on the vines, potatoes that have lost their flavor, and cucumbers that are as bitter as a budget speech.

Quebec's agriculture is sinking because its workers are haphazard. People are selling their farms. The most attractive, the most profitable ones, those located on the outskirts of cities, become mushrooming townships for some kind of "gracious living development." Others are simply abandoned unless some immigrants buy them for a song.

The Quebec farmer is being dispossessed in the name of some hazy theory of industrialization the last square inch that veils a verity that ought to be proclaimed to all and sundry: Without a prosperous agriculture, Quebec will never be prosperous. . . .

Lacien Langlois. (April 14)

Trois-Rivieres Le Nouvelliste—The necessity of Senate reform, particularly an age limit, continues to draw the attention of Canadians. People are thinking about it more than ever these days and every one bill has been submitted to the Commons.

Senates have been reproached for doing little work. But are they the only ones reproachable for inactivity? And can the Commons not be criticized for not offering them substantial fare? It must also be pointed out that the work of the Senate does not always receive the publicity it deserves.

At this present moment the Senate contains a good number of competent members: jurists, economists, financiers, successful farmers, and so on. All have long experience. But only rarely do they have a chance to make their talents useful. Is it their fault? We do not think so. There is no doubt that they would prefer to play a more active role and to give the country more benefit of their ability, knowledge and experience. There are probably few sectors of business and the economy where a certain of our senators are not familiar. . . .

Senate reform can be envisaged under several aspects but principally in the choice of members. Strictly political criteria could be set aside and the range of choice broadened.

Why could not one find in the Senate representatives of political parties and all schools of thought? . . . (April

SOLDIER WOUNDED

One soldier of the Sherwood Foresters was wounded in the leg when UN troops were fired on in three posts in Nicosia Friday night, a UN spokesman said.

Although the troops returned the fire on two occasions, they held their fire in the incident in which the British soldier was hit.

In two other incidents, the spokesman said British troops fired five shots in self-defence.

Meanwhile, the UN peace force was expected to acquire more international strength today with the arrival of the main body of Finnish troops, an Austrian medical unit and a new Irish military adviser to Lt-Gen. Prem Gyani, the UN force commander.

Canadian, Irish and Swedish troops are already operational in Cyprus and the first Danish soldiers are expected soon.

FINNS EXPECTED

The Finnish troops, scheduled to arrive tonight, were expected to take over duties from British troops in a few days inside the old walled city of Nicosia and outer suburbs.

The Greek-Cypriot press and public have shown an increasing disdain of British troops in recent days and UN officials admitted privately it would be better when the British contingent is reduced and pulled out of the main trouble spots.

Troops of the Sherwood Foresters after a street brawl on Thursday with Greek - Cypriot civilians were accused by the press Friday of aiding the Turks and planting bombs in Greek-Cypriot cars and posts.

The 56-man Austrian hospital unit scheduled here early today will be located in Nicosia and have a small mobile field unit which can be deployed anywhere on the island.

Hotels Will Be No Problem For Visitors to World's Fair

By SHIRLEY and BOB SLOANE

NEW YORK — Now that the New York World's Fair is upon us many visitors are concerned about hotel accommodations in the area. Will there be enough room? What about gouging? Aren't all New York hotels expensive anyway, and will this present an opportunity for them to take advantage of the tourists?

One thing New York has always had is a lot of hotel rooms (tourism is the city's major industry). In fact, it is the one city we know of in North America where you can nearly always arrive in town without a reservation and not have to worry.

Beginning with the Summit in 1961 — at that time the city's first new hotel in 30 years — hotel building boom has started in New York, with the result that today there are more than ever, nearly 85,000 rooms in more than 375 hotels within a 30-mile radius of the city. Most of them are in Manhattan, and about 85 percent of the rooms are represented by members of the Hotel Association of New York City.

The New York World's Fair Housing Bureau, a function of the New York Convention and Visitors Bureau, has been provided by the association that the room rates will not be raised from their present levels during this Fair year.

FOLDING LENTS RATES

A folder listing these hotels and their rates is available free from the housing bureau at 30 Rockefeller Plaza, New York, N.Y. The bureau will also book reservations for travellers direct or through their travel agents, if a choice of three is listed. A check of the bureau's list showed a reasonably accurate cross-section.

It is true that first class hotel rates are high in New York, even as big cities go. But most of the older hotels, many of them pretty dismal once, have refurbished extensively and offer much better value than they did a few years ago. It isn't too long since we wrote in this column that there was only one completely air-conditioned hotel in New York, now we doubt that there is one without at least some air-conditioned rooms.

There exists also a little known but highly recommendable selection of lower priced hotels in New York that are eminently comfortable, reputable and clean. Many are slightly less convenient locations. But these locations are, in many instances, also quite attractive and charming (Washington Square, Greenwich Village, the upper West Side near New York's famed subway system places very few of them more than 10 or 15 minutes from the heart of shopping and entertainment.

MOTOR HOTELS GOOD

A worthy addition to the New York hotel scene are the new motor hotels which, in case you've lost track, are the contemporary city version of the good old country motel. You'd hardly recognize them as motels except for the free parking. There are say number of them in the heart of the city now, and in a city where overnight parking in a hotel runs about $3.50 plus pick-up and delivery, tip, and no in-and-out privileges, this consideration is obviously an important one for motoring families.

The largest group of motor hotels is that operated by the comparatively new Lowe's Hotels organization, the same that operates the aforementioned Summit and Glide-handled has been responsible for more of New York's new hotels than any other company. (Their properties include the mammoth Americana on the Avenue of the Americas and the plush Regency on Park Ave.) This group is worth mentioning here because its three motor hotels — Howard Johnson's, the Midtown Motor Inn, and the Country Squire — are about the most conveniently situated in the midtown area. They are also the only group of three under the same management, a convenience should reservations become tight.

Other new operations have the materials and the picture in New York also. Some old hotels have converted to motor hotels of late by installing free parking. Operations such as the New York Hilton have, in single instances, converted hundreds of rooms to those available. The Sheraton Motor Inn near the piers, several hotels at J. F. Kennedy International Airport, and a number of motels near the Fair, are representative of wider choice of location than ever before.

Whatever your budget or preferences, you should have little trouble finding a hotel — and one to suit you — in New York this Fair year.

DINING OUT

Another cost-bugaboo that always worried visitors to New York is that of dining out. Besides being the best restaurant city in North America — perhaps the best in the world, including Paris — it can, without doubt, also be the most expensive. But it need not be.

Visitors who spring for their hotel's $2.50 table d'hote breakfast for fear of wandering out into the streets and finding a luncheonette where the same breakfast costs $1.00, deserve what they get. The same goes for lunch.

Dinner is the average American's big meal. By conserving funds intelligently, you can occasionally go for a gourmet meal at a famed and expensive restaurant. But it is scarcely necessary. New York is as full of smaller, less expensive fine restaurants as it is of expensive, luxury geared operations. A little shopping around, some experimentation with delicatessens and small spaghetti palaces, and side street Chinese restaurants, plus a few intelligent questions asked of hotel employes, can easily produce results as delightful to the palate as to the purse.

HOT STOVE LOUNGE

"But life has such diversity . . ." Christopher Fry.

We're enjoying this eastward drive along Number Two Highway. The spring day is bright but chilly. The sparkling blue Quinte Bay floats by like a scarf on our right as we come to the village of Shannonville, where we stop at Mrs. L. R. Larone's store for bread.

Window-filled, gay fo[illegible]-of home-plants welcome us to the spacious interior flanked on both sides with full length counters. These and wall shelves are filled with tempting merchandise: colorful knitting wool and thread, greeting cards, scent, lines of drugs, dry-goods, tin goods, baking products, cookies and jars of penny candy.

Toward the back, a watchful, brown dog lies at the foot of (no, not a hot, pot-bellied, wood burning but) a small modern oil stove. Its inviting warmth makes one long to spend leisure hours in the rocking chairs beside it.

What an atmosphere of cosy comfort!

We chat with Mrs. Larone, who has lived in Shannonville "all my married life" and watched "one interest lead to another, from selling a horses and carriages and sleighs — even sold fur robes; to motor cars, milking machines, separators to dry goods when we built this store after the beginning of the century."

"Help used to be easier to get," notes Mrs. Larone, who, now a widow, manages her store with little outside family assistance. "And it makes you wonder why, when there's every convenience to lighten work, this modern vacuum cleaners, electric washers, spin-dryers. "So different from the early days of my marriage. My the work! Take lighting for example. In the store, here, were many oil-lamps. One in each window. Numerous ones along the counters as well as the double swinging lamp that was up here at the back.

"Each had to be cleaned and filled with oil daily, sure as the dawn. If they weren't finished before the store opened, they'd be cleaned between times from waiting on customers.

"We were about the first in Shannonville to install our own lighting power-plant. This was long before the hydro was put through here.

"Believe it or not, but Shannonville once had three hotels . . . and a little later we would inquire from historically interested Mr. Bufti, who would tell us that the present Wayside Inn, though new in structure, occupies the original site of its predecessor. He has no idea how the now apartment-converted, old, yet so well-built grey stone Lorne Hotel came by its name, the latter hotel has been demolished, as have the Wallbridge saw mill and the old grist mill. . . .

Mrs. Larone told us "It was a great blow to us when the old grist mill was levelled, not too long ago. One night, just around meal time, one of us remarked how light it seemed outside. I went to the window and then cried out: "Light is dead, the mill's on fire!" and members of our household quickly rushed out to help fight the flames. But it was hopeless. Soon only a shell of stone walls was left and so we had to be torn down, since they were too shaky and dangerous to be left standing."

HOT STOVE LOUNGE

We continue our drive down past Millbrook with its once picturesque old mill completely gone. The words of Ruth Wirth who recently wrote about the Toronto Maple Leaf Garden posh Key Club called the Hot Stove Lounge comes to mind:

Antique dealers, who boast that the bar and dining-rooms would be designed to resemble old fashioned country stores, stoves and cracker-barrels have been scouring the province for furnishings. They'll have about 14 pot-bellied stoves in the place, but they won't be storing, if I get what I mean," said Mr. Harold Ballard, executive vice-president of the Gardens. "Bits of old harness and pioneer lanterns will hang from the ceiling. We bought a few old barns to use the heavy beams for the ceiling . . . We bought an old mill near Belleville" (meaning the one at Milltown) and removed the stone for the front of the building. . . .

We would like to express our thanks to Mrs. Robert Martin, Trent Road, for today's column. Not only did she make the Shannonville visit possible by car, but kindly forwarded to us, the clipping by Ruth Wirth about The Toronto Maple Leaf Garden's "Hot Stove Lounge," profits from which are to help promote amateur hockey.

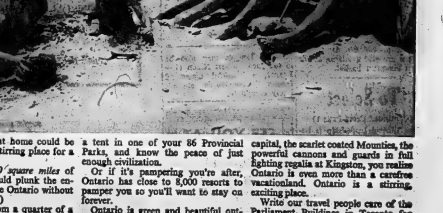
SPEAKING OF MANNERS

BY PATRICIA LEWIS

MAIL CALL

Question: When we moved into our home a few months ago, several of the neighbors stopped by within a week or so to say hello, and mentioned they'd like to get together with us as soon as we were settled. Since then I've been up to my ears getting the house decorated and spruced up and it's in a highly presentable state now.

I've seen a couple of the women at the supermarket since then, and they've been friendly, asking how we're getting along and if they could be of any help. None has invited us to visit, as yet; but, during the obviously have friendly intentions, I was wondering if it would be correct for me to invite one or two couples at a time to become better acquainted. I was hoping one of them would make the first definite social move, but perhaps they've been waiting for some indication from me that we're ready to socialize. What would you suggest I do? — Mrs. E. F., Yonkers, N.Y.



Answer: Since your neighbors seem friendly, and have already made some social stabs in your direction by making courtesy calls when you first moved in, think it would be permissable to invite one couple at a time to become acquainted. They may figure that, since they've already made an attempt at friendship, it's now up to you to make some overtures in their direction.

Question: I'm giving a shower for a close friend who is about to be married. I've invited all the girls I know who have known her a long time. I'd also like to ask a few of my own friends who know her only slightly. The reason for this is that they might feel offended if they found out I was giving a party and did not include them. I've been told that only close friends of the bride-to-be should be asked to a bridal shower, but is this always strictly the case? I look forward to your answer in the paper.

E. R. H., Akron, Ohio

Answer: Since guests are obliged to bring gifts to a shower, only the close friends of the bride-elect, as well as her immediate relatives, are invited. It's only sensible, since taking gifts from near-strangers might embarrass the bride-to-be, and it's not very fair to expect guests who know the guest of honor only slightly, or not at all, to attend a party at which gift-giving plays such an important part.

These people explode the myth about the high cost of electric heating. They have it.

Mr. G. Bakker, Sarnia, Ontario
"Our bill for electric heating over the past season was approximately $160—about the same as other heating systems. If I build another house I will have it heated just the same way."

Mrs. E. Zimmerman, Timagami, Ontario
"I don't think you could run anything any cheaper. I wouldn't want to part with electric heating. This is just what I want. There's nothing like it—and that's that."

Mr. Ralph Diegel, North Bay, Ontario
"We heat about 1,750 square feet plus all of the basement. We heat our garage too. I think our heating costs compare favourably with other systems."

Mrs. S. Watts, Waterloo, Ontario
"I think electric heating is quite reasonable. We have seven rooms and a recreation room and an extra room in the basement. Our entire electrical service, including lights, cooking, laundry, water heating and home heating came to only $272 last year."

Mrs. J. R. Morgenroth, Fort William, Ontario
"It costs us about $225 a year for the heating. We're quite satisfied with it and I think if we were ever to build again we would put electric heating in."

Mr. L. Lochner, Brockville, Ontario
"Actually electric heating is my favourite subject. I found that our electric heating cost was 20% lower than Hydro quoted. One thing I particularly like about electric heating is that it's completely maintenance free."

Mr. F. J. Thomson, Harrowsmith, Ontario
"Last year our electric heating cost was about $200 which is perfect as far as I'm concerned. The heat is very uniform. Quite a difference from our other house."

Mr. Robert Riepert, Kitchener, Ontario
"I find that my heating cost is very satisfactory. I've had other heating systems but I feel that this is the best. I think it will become very popular."

Mr. R. Brunett, Thornhill, Ontario
"We have a large four bedroom house and we heat the basement including a recreation room, workshop, laundry room and dark room, yet our heating cost last year was only $186."

Electrically heated homes, insulated to Hydro standards, cost no more to heat than homes with other systems. With all its advantages, is it any wonder so many people throughout Ontario are turning to electric heating for the comfort, convenience and economy they want in a heating system. If you are buying or building a new home, it will pay you to learn how electric heating can add to the comfort of your home and to the value of your investment. ELECTRIC HEATING FOR YOUR PRESENT HOME

If you are planning home extensions or if parts of your home are not now properly heated, you can install supplementary electric heating for less than it costs to extend your present heating system.

Electric heating is one of the many comfort features of the famous Medallion all-electric homes. For information, consult a qualified electric heating contractor or your Hydro.

Real Love Test Comes When We Love Unlikeable People

By REV. HAROLD E. KOHN

With the arrival of springtime, "os" was the word used to express seasonal love; passionate love between the sexes. Another word, "philia," designated spontaneous affection for a friend or relative. (In this sense one might say, "John is such a wonderful fellow. You would love him the first time you met him. Everybody does.") But the great word for love in the New Testament is "agape" which denotes a persistent, patient, merciful and generous goodwill toward men. Such love is different from merely liking a person, which may be an involuntary emotion, quite beyond human control. Liking waxes and wanes, flourishes and dies. But "agape" is a benevolence toward one's fellows that aims at actively securing their well-being regardless of how they respond to us and regardless of their worthiness. It is more of a principle of action than a passionate emotion. It is there when we like people but when they are distasteful and repugnant to us. In short, the highest kind of love is hardy.

In the cherished love chapter of the Bible, the thirteenth chapter of First Corinthians, the New Testament affirms, "Love bears all things, believes all things, endures all things." It claims that the life of faith is one where the long-suffering of God is reflected in the patience of His children. As the King James Version of this chapter says, love "suffereth long and is kind." To love, then, in this Christian sense, is not necessarily to like another, to enjoy his company or to share his views, no more than God always finds us delightful companions or in agreement with His viewpoint. God's love is unconditional and operates when we are least deserving and even when those who least deserve it. It is a hardy love.

The radiant love of God is unconditional and operates when we are least deserving and even when those who least deserve it. It is a hardy love.

The real test of love comes when we attempt to love unlikeable people and to continue to love them — people who irritate, baffle, thwart, bore or hate us. Especially is this so if the unlikeable person is nearly inescapable, such as an employer upon whom we are dependent for livelihood, a neighbor from whom we cannot move away, or in-law who lives near us or with us, or a mate whose disposition has changed over the years toward fretfulness or grouchiness. Is our love hardy enough to endure such a spell of inclement weather?

LOVE IS HARDY

Of course, we can answer that question only after we determine what love is. Human love takes many forms. In the Greek New Testament essentially three words were used for love. "Er-

Ann Landers

Spring Christmas Shopping Boon to Bargain Hunter

DEAR ANN LANDERS — I'd like your advice on what to do about my aunt. She telephoned this morning just to chat. To be polite I asked her what she was doing today. She replied, "I am going downtown to do some Christmas shopping." Then she explained.

ANN LANDERS

Auntie watches for bargains all through the year and picks them up for Christmas gifts. By August she has all her Christmas shopping done. This explains why her gifts are always faded, torn, dried-out and shopworn.

This tightwad has more money than all the rest of the family put together. Her husband was in World War I and she still has his Liberty Bonds. I am so infuriated by her cheapness I could pop a blood vessel. Should I tell her how I feel and get it off my chest? — BURNED TO CINDERS.

DEAR CINDERS — No. You've told me. That's enough. Now forget it.

• • •

DEAR ANN LANDERS — I am a teen-ager who will soon be bald if I don't do something about a terrible habit I've had since the sixth grade. Without realizing it I've been pulling out my hair. During study period when I should be concentrating I pull my hair out. When I get upset about something it is worse than ever. I wake up in the morning and find hair on the pillow, so I guess I pull my hair out even when I sleep.

I've tried awfully hard to control myself but it's hopeless. Please tell me if you have ever heard of this before. Also, what can I do about it. Thanks a million. — PROBLEM PROBLEMS.

DEAR PROBLEMS — This habit is in the same category with stuttering and nailbiting — and it is not uncommon.

The guidance counsellor at school should invite your mother in for a visit. Together they can decide on a course of action. You will stop pulling your hair out when you settle down emotionally, and resolve the problems which are tormenting you.

• • •

DEAR ANN LANDERS — I've been going out with a beautiful girl from a small town downstate. I'll call her Faye. Last night we talked about many things. I asked her if she would mind telling me everything about her past romances. She was reluctant at first and then poured out a story that left me so weak I almost blacked out.

Faye went steady with a fellow during her senior year in high school and they were intimate for about eight months. She said she thought she was in love with him and felt sure they would marry. It was as if someone had stuck a dagger through my heart. Faye says he was the only one but now I wonder. If she could have fooled me so completely, what might she do after I married her.

I love this girl but I don't trust her anymore. Do you think I will ever get over this? — DART.

DEAR DART — No, I don't. In fact, the way your mind is working you'll probably have her pictured as the town tramp within a week.

Loving is confidence, understanding and forgiving. You'd better find yourself a 100% pure maiden. A fellow with your attitude would forever remind a wife who had made an early mistake that she was "damaged goods."

• • •

Ann Landers' frank and informative new book, "Teen-Agers and Sex ($2.95) is now available at your book store.

Ann Landers will be glad to help you with your problems. Send them to her in care of this newspaper, enclosing a stamped, self-addressed envelope.

Quebec's

plies to everything but food. There is no known move to alter it but this year's budget has yet to be brought down.

Ontario levies a three-per cent sales tax exempting such items as food, children's clothing, natural resources such as sand and gravel, production machinery and certain items used in manufacturing. It went into effect in September, 1961.

MANITOBA MAY START

There is speculation in Manitoba that Premier Roblin may call a summer session to deal with recommendations of the Michener royal commission on taxation there, and possibly introduce a sales tax.

Saskatchewan's tax, called a health and education tax, was instituted in 1947 at three per cent and raised to five when the provincial medical hospital care plan was introduced in 1962. The Liberal party, which defeated the CCF in Wednesday's general election, pledged reduction of the tax in its election platform.

British Columbia's sales tax was first introduced in 1948 as a social security and municipal aid tax. It was boosted to five per cent and renamed the social service tax by Premier Bennett's Social Credit government in 1954.

Observations By Board

OTTAWA (CP) — Here are some of the observations of the royal commission on banking and finance:

"Our studies indicate that by and large Canadians manage their finances with greater wisdom than appears to be popularly believed."

". . . We do not look with favor on Canadian legislation which thwarts capital flows for reasons unrelated to our underlying economic need for them."

"We have found considera ble variety in the quality of supervision of other (non-bank) institutions across the country, and think it essential to act before there is a repetition of the unfortunate experiences of many chartered banks prior to the establishment of good supervision in the 1920s."

". . . There are links—increasing notably in the last few years—between institutions in different groups, the most important being those between the chartered banks and the trust companies. We have no evidence that this competition has lessened competition and indeed the broad picture is one of increasing competition."

". . . Price competition among the chartered banks is severely limited. There is no evidence that they have resulted in excessive charges, but agreements covering borrowing and lending rates are undesirable in any circumstances because they contribute to inflexibility of rates and restrain innovations."

"We have found that monetary and debt policies are indeed effective in influencing expenditure, but we have also found that if variations in credit conditions do not exceed those experienced in recent years — when changes have been by no means insignificant — these effects are limited."

". . . Charges in the bank rate should be accompanied by as clear a statement as possible of the reasoning behind them. . . . There is no virtue in a curious system of flashes when more direct and understandable means are available."

"The main reason for conferring some measure of autonomy on the central bank has been the historical tendency of governments of all forms to develop the habit of inflating the currency."

"Many of the present investment restrictions (on financial institutions) contribute nothing to public protection, impose inequitable constraints on the institutions and thus serve only to reduce the efficiency with which a more competitive system could serve the country."

". . . The nation would benefit from more competition in the underwriting field."

". . . We could find no indication of abuses so prevalent and substantial as to warrant the major disruption of the securities business that would result from the enforced separation of jobbing and underwriting on the one hand and brokerage functions on the other."

RARE, MEDIUM, WELL-DONE

By GEO. H. CARVER, Sports Editor

There will be a shortish, rotund man sitting in Maple Leaf Gardens tonight with a prayer on his lips as he watches his former beloved Detroit Red Wings take the ice for the "seventh game."

He is Jack Adams and there will be more than a glint of pride in his eyes as he watches a big sleeper-shouldered guy warm up. That will be Gordie Howe, a dominant figure in the NHL and the heart of the Wings for the last 15 of his 19 years with the club.

Jack Sullivan, Canadian Press sports editor, recalls that "it seems only yesterday to some oldtimers but it was 16 years ago that Detroit Red Wings and Toronto Maple Leafs engaged in one of hockey's most blood-curdling, hatred-filled feuds. It was in a Stanley Cup semi-finals series won by the Wings in the full seven games.

"There are only three active NHL players still around from that blood-bath," says Sullivan, "and, oddly enough, they're in the present Detroit-Leafs cup final. They are the Wings' Gordie Howe and Marcel Pronovost and the Leafs' Red Kelly, then of the Wings."

"All the other players have called it quits in the big time, although Ski Abel of the once-famous Detroit production line with Howe and Ted Lindsay, is manager-coach of the Wings."

"It was in 1950," recalls Sullivan, "when Gordie Howe, was just starting to make it big in the NHL. He was lead to the Wings in the series opener with a concussion, a fractured cheek bone and a scratched eye—all when he skimmed into the board at the Detroit Olympia."

"The incident it's the fuse for the gang warfare. The Wings would leverage for the man they accused of sending Howe to the hospital. Ted Kennedy of the Leafs."

"The incident happened so fast that close observers were unable to say exactly how it happened," writes Sullivan. "Howe was going full tilt to check Kennedy when the Toronto player pulled up short and Howe plunged face first into the boards."

"Detroit players accused Kennedy of butt-ending Howe. League president Clarence Campbell reviewed films of the incident before the next game and exonerated Kennedy of all blame. But the Wings didn't take that as official."

"Near the end of the second period of the next game, Lindsay tripped Kennedy who jumped up ready for a fight. He was rapped smartly on the head with a stick. That was the signal for a free-for-all," says Sullivan.

"Leafs' defenceman Gus Mortson took off after Lindsay. Kennedy picked Abel for a sparring partner. Jim Thompson of the Leafs was crowned by Wing rearguard Leo Reise and skated around in a fog while missing most of the fun."

Several other encounters were going on, but at the finish those who were interested in the hockey aspect toted up a score of 3-1 for the Wings. The Wings had dropped the opened 5-0 and-three, of course, was out for the series.

Sullivan says that Cosmic Smythe, always handy with a slip, summarized the officiating of Referee Brian Keeling this way: "I thought he did all right. The Lord and twelve apostles couldn't keep the Wings under control tonight."

Game Probably Continue To Finish

By DAVE BETTS

TORONTO (CP) — Neither rain, nor sleet, nor broken bones, nor curfew laws shall stay the National Hockey League tonight from completing the Stanley Cup finals.

Come hail or high water, the battered and beloved tankard will be deposited in the hands of either Alex Delvecchio of Detroit Red Wings or George Armstrong of Toronto Maple Leafs.

One of the team captains and his mates will be $2,000 richer by Sunday morning and the other players must salve their sorrow with $1,000 apiece and the knowledge that they helped push the series to the utter limit—the seventh game of seven finals.

NHL president Clarence Campbell said Friday, tonight's crucial game "will probably continue as long as is necessary."

Although he said no formal clearance has been arranged to bypass regulation of the Lord's Day Act, Campbell gave the impression that a midnight curfew would be no barrier to completion of play should the teams be deadlocked in overtime. He said the NHL will have lawyers present at Maple Leaf Gardens to advise should the situation arise.

Another man anxious to bring matters to a head is Toronto defenceman Bob Baun, the off the - stretcher overtime scorer of Thursday's fifth game who may or may not have a broken ankle.

BAUN REFUSES X-RAY

Baun refused to have his ankle x-rayed Friday, fearing the doctors might find something. "I played with it Thursday," he said, "and you don't think I'm going to miss the last chapter over something like this, do you?"

Manager - coach Punch Imlach, who supervised a workout at Maple Leaf Gardens Friday, declined to say whether either Baun or forward Red Kelly will dress tonight. Baun hurt his ankle when he stopped a shot and Kelly damaged his knee when checked by two Red Wings.

After six nerve - needling games, both teams are crying for a clear decision tonight. This equality of fighting spirit could be just enough to provide another stalemate in the longest playoff series in history.

Two games have been won in overtime, and have been decided in the final minute and the other two kept nerves taut until late in the third period.

Gordie Howe, who arrived from Detroit with the rest of the Wings Friday, and he has never been under such strain in his 18 years of NHL action.

If the Wings win tonight, each player will have received a total of $1,750—for a fourth-lace finish, a semi-final victory over Chicago Black Hawks and the cup win. The Leafs can reach a total of $4,000 a man their third-place finish accounting for the $250 difference.

PLANS NO CHANGES

Manager-coach Ski Abel, who was captain of three Stanley Cup winners with Detroit, said Friday he plans no lineup changes, reasoning Doug Barkley and Larry Jeffrey have surmounted their injury problems.

The defending champion Leafs, favored by the oddsmakers by about 12-10-5, will do it without left winger Don McKenney and probably Kelly. Ed Litzenberger and Billy Harris alternated in McKenney's position during Friday's practice and Eddie Shack and Jim Pappin took turns patrolling Kelly's left-wing beat.

The injuries leave the home team without a regular left winger. Gerry Ehman, a right winger with Rochester Americans, has been used on the left side during the finals on Toronto's third line with Bob Pulford and Ron Stewart.

Baun ignored his ailing ankle Thursday in Detroit to leap into the overtime fray and bounce a long shot that sank him the hero. The puck glanced off defenceman Bill Gadsby's stick and slopped behind Terry Sawchuk to give the Leafs a 4-3 win.

"I didn't put him (Baun) on," said Imlach. "He was so charged up and rarin' to go that he just leaped over the boards when a defence change was on. I was going to send (Larry) Hillman out with (Carl-Brewer."

Baun had been taken off on a stretcher late in the third period after he "heard something" snap" and his leg went numb. Doctors administered a shot of novocaine that deadened the pain and Baun hobbled into stardom.

Abel, who admitted he was tired and nervous, reviewed the record Friday as the team rested at a suburban hotel.

Lolich, Pizarro Toss 3-Hitters

By MIKE RATHET
Associated Press Sports Writer

Detroit rookie Mickey Lolich, a born right-hander, has pitched his first major league shutout left-handed.

Lolich stopped Minnesota Twins 5-0 on three hits Friday for his second victory without a loss, then explained how he turned into a southpaw thrower after getting taken for a ride by a runaway tricycle.

"When I was two years old, I ran my tricycle off the curb in Portland, Ore., and hit a parked motorcycle," said the 22-year-old Lolich. "I had my right arm in a cast for four months, so I did everything with my left hand.

"When the cast came off, I went back to the right hand to eat and later JG write, but I kept throwing with my left hand," he explained.

Juan Pizarro of Chicago White Sox also pitched a three-hitter and drove in three runs in a 6-1 victory over Boston Red Sox. In other American League action, Washington Senators downed Kansas City Athletics 6-1 in 10 innings and Cleveland Indians outlasted Los Angeles Angels in the longest game of the season, winning 5-3 in 15 innings.

Baltimore Orioles and New York Yankees were not scheduled.

Lolich got all the batting support he needed from Jerry Lumpe. Lumpe, acquired from Kansas City in the deal that sent Rocky Colavito to the Athletics, drove in three runs with three hits as he lifted his batting average to .344.

Pizarro, delayed in making his first start because of a prolonged holdout siege, hurled the first complete game by a White Sox pitcher this season. Stuart's fourth inning homer accounted for the Red Sox run.

Floyd Robinson hit a two-run homer in Chicago's three-run fifth.

Wayne Causey's two - base throwing error on Don Lock's grounder to start the ninth inning 10th opened the door for the Senators, who sent 10 men to the plate. Ed Brinkman singled in the tie-breaking run, winning pitcher Claude Osteen singled in another, Don Blasingame drove in two more with a double and Chuck Hinton wrapped it up with a run-scoring single.

Score Three In 31 Seconds

Lucan Shades Picton 7-6

LUCAN (Staff) — Lucan goals on their victory.

At 17.05 Ron Ryan made it 6-5. Seven seconds later Barry Hearns tied the score and 34 seconds later Max O'Neill became the hero of the game with the winner.

Three goals in 31 seconds had the Picton team off stride and they never recovered. There was no scoring in the final period.

Picton had six of the eleven penalties and outshot Lucan 46-41.

They lead the series 3-1 with the fourth game in Lucan tonight starting 7.30.

Meet Montreal In Eastern Final

Marlies Oust North Bay

NORTH BAY (CP)—Toronto Marlboros walloped North Bay Trappers 10-4 Friday and boarded a bus for Montreal and the Eastern Memorial Cup finals.

The triumph gave the Marlboros the best-of-seven semi-final set in four straight games.

Marlboros open the best-of-seven final series in Montreal Sunday against Montreal NDG Monarchs. The winner will take on either Edmonton Oil Kings, the defending Memorial Cup champions, or Toronto Marlboro Oil Kings lead Esteran 3-1 in their series.

Marlboros, scored on their only two shots on goal in the opening period. Trappers fired three in the middle period but Marlboros matched them goal for goal and took a 5-3 lead into the finale.

NARROWED MARGIN

Scrappy Bob Leduc, a 50-goal scorer in the Northern Ontario Hockey Association circuit this season, scored midway through the third period to put Trappers within one goal of Toronto.

Marlboros put an end to any notions the Trappers might have entertained of tying the score, blasting five goals within a span of three minutes and 13 seconds.

Batting—Willie Mays, Giants, hit his seventh homer, stroked two singles and walked twice, driving in two runs and scoring five in San Francisco's 15-5 rout of Cincinnati.

Pitching—Mickey Lolich, Tigers, pitched his first major league shutout, allowing only three hits in 5-0 victory over Minnesota.

Wins Badminton Championship

The first singles finals of the Garrison Badminton Club here saw former Canadian champion, Doug Grant defeat Hugh McGregor, ex-Manitoba title-holder in hard-fought matches.

In previous matches, McGregor beat Napanee champion Al Sinclair while Grant outscored Al Moffat after the latter defeated Dave Bell.

Single competition was added to the club events this year with the object of stimulating the interest of younger coming players. This more strenuous aspect of the game, says club president Merv. Potts.

This is the first year singles play has been stressed in the club's history. "Most of the entrants were new members and we feel with this additional strength, Garrison club should be a strong organization to contend with in the Central Ontario Association next year."

Reds Just Couldn't Get Willie Out

Hits 7th Homer

By THE CANADIAN PRESS

How do you pitch to Willie Mays?

An assortment of Cincinnati pitchers tried just about everything Friday night but they never managed to get Willie out. In fact, they couldn't even figure out how to prevent him from scoring.

With their $105,000 - a - year centre fielder leading the way, San Francisco Giants romped to a 13-5 victory over the Reds and Willie continued his runaway leadership in nearly every offensive category in the National League.

Mays hit a homer and two singles, walked twice, scored five runs, drove in two and stole a base. Manager Alvin Dark finally gave the Reds a break in the ninth inning by lifting Willie for pinch hitter Del Crandall—who singled.

The night's work left Willie with a .500 average, 17 runs scored, 17 runs batted in, 17 hits and seven home runs, all league - leading totals.

While Mays and his teammates were making life easy for Juan Marichal, who struck out 13 and gave up eight hits in recording his second victory, fireballer Jim Bunning was getting equally solid support from Philadelphia Phillies as he blanked Chicago Cubs 10-0 with a six-hitter. Tony Gonzalez was the chief executioner, driving in four runs with a double and a single.

In other games, Milwaukee Braves downed Los Angeles Dodgers 6-3, St. Louis Cardinals outlasted Houston Colts 3-2 in 11 innings and Pittsburgh Pirates hammered New York Mets 9-4.

KUENN BREAKS SLUMP

The Giants clobbered five Cincinnati pitchers for 18 hits. Willie McCovey contributing his fifth homer with Mays aboard in the first inning and Harvey Kuenn driving in three runs with a pair of singles. Kuenn, who hadn't hit safely in 19 previous appearances, took over from Orlando Cepeda at first base early in the game.

A two-run homer by Johnny Callison and a triple and two doubles by John Herrnstein helped the Phillies stay ahead of San Francisco in the National League's race as Bunning matched Marichal in winning his second game without a loss.

Ed Bailey's two-run homer and a two-run double by Lee Maye were enough for the Braves as Hank Fischer tamed Los Angeles with an eight-hitter. Frank Howard hit his fifth home run for the Dodgers.

Phil Gagliano's pinch double scored Dick Groat with the winning run at St. Louis, Lew Burdette picking up the decision in relief. Walt Bond hit his first National League homer for the Colts.

Bill Virdon had a perfect day at the plate with a two-run homer, three singles and a walk as the Pirates routed the Mets on Al Jackson, who had shut them out in New York last Sunday for the Mets only win of the season.

Give NHL Refs Power To Fine

Says System Needs Revision

MONTREAL (CP) — Cooper Smeaton, who made hockey's hall of fame as a referee, says his modern day counterparts in the National Hockey League should be given "the power to deal out fines on the spot."

"The whole refereeing situation needs revision in my opinion," he said Friday in an interview.

"Hockey is much faster than it ever was in my day and refereeing has become a much tougher assignment.

"But basically traffic direction is the same. The difference is today's referees haven't enough authority. The players and the coaches are trying to run the game and that's bad."

Smeaton, a trustee of the Stanley Cup, said the "immediate threat of a fine" was "one of the greatest weapons we had" in the hockey era of yesteryear.

Only the league president could impose suspensions.

"But we could fine squawking players and we often did. Hitting a player in his pocketbook was a great silencer."

Smeaton said linesmen should also be given authority to call penalties and such violations as interference and boarding should be enforced more rigidly.

Another revision he advocates is abolition of the 10-minute misconduct penalty.

"They should get rid of that nonsense. The penalty is meaningless. Hardly worth the name. Squawkers should be fined on the spot and their team made to suffer through a two-minute penalty at least."

THE Arnold Palmer METHOD

NEW RULES ON THE GREEN

There were rules for 1964 will affect every golfer's action on the green. It will be worth your while to make certain you understand these changes.

First and most important is the new rule regarding the flagstick. This year it will cost you a hole to unsta-play or two strokes in medal play if your putt strikes the flagstick. The flagstick can no longer be used as a backstop, as he uses to remove it on all putts and all other shots from within 20 yards of the hole.

This year the rules allow golfers to use their feet in repairing marks made by balls as they hide from the greens. Formerly a player could not do this.

Also in 1964 you will not be allowed to wait more than "a few seconds" to see if a hanging putt will drop.

To Look Over Prospects

British Star For Guelph

By ALAN HARVEY

LONDON (CP)—Peter Radford, a member of Britain's "flying squad" of the eight metre yacht syndicate for the Midlands, also was at Guelph last year.

Coach Geoffrey Dyson and Olympic pole vaulter Geoff Elliott are others who have quit British shores for Canada in the last year or so.

Radford, a physical training instructor at Hodge Hill secondary modern school in Birmingham, hopes to make the British Olympic team to be picked this August for the Games at Tokyo Oct. 10-25.

He was a member of the so-called "flying squad" with the three Jones boys, Dave, Ron and Berwyn, none of them related. The four held a world relay record for the 400 yards until it was smashed two weeks ago.

Pugh, former National Amateur athletic Association coach for the Midlands, also was at Guelph last year.

Canadians Make Clean Sweep

Toronto Pair Wins Trans-Canada Rally

By STEPHEN SCOTT

MONTREAL (CP) — Canadians outdrove some of the best drivers from Europe this week to make a clean sweep of the 4,000-mile cross-Canada auto rally.

Meanwhile, a newly-established Canadian subsidiary of a Swedish auto company is believed to have scored the greatest coup in auto rallying history.

The rally, which ended Friday night, wound through back roads and mountain and forest trials between Vancouver and Montreal.

The two over-all winners were the Toronto team of Klaus Ross and John Bird, driving a Volvo. They won $3,000.

Frank Curran and R. F. Carney of Toronto, in a Peugeot, also won $3,000 for the first privately-entered car.

The winners of the Coupe des Dames — women's championship — were Mona Carter of Toronto and Gillian Field of Adams, N.Y., in a Volvo. They picked up $750. For Miss Carter, it was repeat of her performance last year.

VOLVO IS FIRST

Volvo of Canada, which set up a subsidiary in Dartmouth, N.S., last year, was first in class and the manufacturers team championship.

Volvo, whose teams won the over-all, women's manufacturer's and class championships, achieved an unprecedented grand slam in the rally which is the longest in the world and the only one in North America that counts in international standings.

The wins were not to be considered official until after a study of any protests that may have developed today. However, no serious protests were reported late Friday night.

Ross, a tire company technician, and Bird, a banker in applied sciences at the University of Toronto, have teamed up several times since 1962. Ross was first in class in last year's rally.

BELGIAN FOURTH

Olivier Gendebien, of Belgium, famed racing and rally driver in Europe, ended fourth in the over-all championship for the second straight year. He was the first among European competitors.

Driving a Volvo with Mike Kerry of Toronto as navigator, he acquired 19 penalty points, three more than Curran and Carney.

Gendebien's remarks after last year's rally are reported to have resulted in the inclusion of the first fifth in Canadian rallying history of special speed sections. The first section, ranging up to 40 miles over some terrible roads, did much to decide the championship.

They were put in to attract top-flight European drivers to the rally. One of the Europeans who entered was Bo Ljungfeldt, Swedish rallying champion, who had trouble in the first stage through the rugged Cascade Mountains in British Columbia, and was knocked out of the rally when he tipped in the Wainwright, Alta., speed section.

Second in the over-all were Maurice Carter of Toronto and Ian Worth of Lachine, Que., in a Chevy II. They had 12 penalty points. Carter had been rally leader earlier in the week.

George Merson and Brent Davies of Toronto, driving a Ford Falcon, came third with 13 points.

Jets Shade Leafs 1-0, Bisons Sunk

By THE CANADIAN PRESS

Even in his years with New York Yankees Rollie Sheldon never had better support than big Rich Barry gave him Friday night.

Barry drove in a grand total of seven runs as Richmond Virginians wrecked the Buffalo pitching staff with a 21-hit assault and clobbered the Bisons 16-1 behind Sheldon's steady five-hit performance to capture the series between the two International League clubs by two games to one.

Barry knocked in a run in Richmond's three-run first inning, unloaded a grand-slam home run in the fourth and belted another homer with a man aboard in the sixth.

Runs were harder to get at Columbus, where second-baseman Felix Santana's second inning homer gave the Jets a 1-0 victory over Toronto Maple Leafs in a game that took only an hour and 43 minutes. Bill Knock set down the Leafs with three hits and the Jets got only four against Don Rudolph and Bill Kunkel.

Syracuse Chiefs, rained out at Atlanta for the second day in a row, inherited the league championship from Jacksonville Suns, who lost their first game in three starts to Rochester Red Wings when Bill Short and Norm Starrette combined on a five-hitter to blank them 4-0.

Steve Demeter's two-run double and Paul Blair's bases-empty homer highlighted the Rochester offensive.

Barry Morse Will Chase Janssen for Another Year

By BOB THOMAS

HOLLYWOOD (AP) — "Have you caught him yet?" Barry Morse hears that question everywhere from here to Toronto, which is his home.

Morse is the policeman who plays Javert to David Janssen's Jean Valjean in television's modern, Les Miserables—The Fugitive.

"I am amazed at how literally the viewers take the show," Morse said during a break in filming.

"I'm also amazed by the naivete of the question. Obviously if I would catch him, the basis for the series would be destroyed."

Morse seems destined to continue to chase Janssen for another season and probably longer. That means that Morse also will continue one of television's most extensive commuting schedules.

During the first season of The Fugitive, Morse made 19 round trips here from Toronto, plus journeys to New York for other shows. He has no plans to move.

"I have a wife and two children and Toronto is our home," he said. "The nature of an actor's work nowadays is travel, and it is better for me to do so than to uproot my family."

BORN IN LONDON

Morse was born in London and for his first 15 years talked cockney, as does his brother, now a London bobby. Morse's accent is softly British offstage, but there is no trace of it when he assumes his "fugitive" role.

The actor graduated from the Royal Academy of Dramatic Art to repertory and then to BBC television in 1937-39.

"Those were wonderful, pioneering days," he recalled. "We younger actors got an immense amount of experience because no established actor would deign to appear on television."

After the war Morse went to Canada to visit his wife's in-laws. "I was caught up in the renaissance of the acting field in Canada," he said. "The Stratford theatre was getting started and CBC was beginning to open up with its own television.

"There had been no tradition in our profession before in Canada. There was no one to say what was impossible. The result was that the improbable was done all the time and the impossible quite often."

Morse came to the U.S for shows like The Defenders, The Nurses and The New Breed. The latter led to his role in The Fugitive.

Successful Living

Couldn't-Care-Less Relatives To Be Treated as Children

DEAR DORIS — My husband's stepsister and her husband moved in with us until they could get a house. I wouldn't mind that, but they are so sloppy. When they have a snack, they leave dirty dishes. They leave beds unmade, clothes lying around.

They sleep in late, which leaves my living room upset all morning (where the folding bed is). Then they wash out personal things and leave them all over the bathroom.

They asked my husband if they could stay when I was not around. He said yes, so I can't very well say no after him giving his consent. Am I just hard to get along with, as he says? — GROUCH.

DORIS CLARK

DEAR GROUCH — Heavens, no! Hubby wouldn't have given consent if he hadn't known how soft you are. But he forgets that all such consent ought to involve both partners to a marriage.

Treat these couldn't-care-less relatives like the children they are. That is, organize them. You are in charge. Pass out the chores. Give the sister a set time to use your washing machine; don't hang up but pile up the scattered items, for her to put away.

Suggest that she "make up the dessert tonight." It's possible you're in for a surprise. — Could be she'd like to help if you talked it up a little!

• • •

DEAR DORIS — I am a shy person and love going to a play or movie but, when in is over, I come home and cry my heart out for seemingly no reason at all. I think it may be because I want to act myself, but I have auditioned for such things and am the first to be turned down.

What can I do? I cry almost every time I see a good production with a good actor in it. — D.B.

• • •

DEAR D.B. — You are warm, sympathetic, life-loving. Ordinarily, we Canadians are expected to hold our feelings in check. But when a bit of fine acting triggers our emotions the release may do us nothing but good. There's no connection here with your own aspirations. Go head and emote!

• • •

DEAR DORIS — I am living with a man who is divorced. This year my own divorce came final. I had some money and got a car of his choice and a truck for his business and gave him the rest of it. He does good at his, business when there's work available.

He introduces me to everyone as his wife. He says he loves me yet when I mention marriage he says we are married. To me this is not being married. I use a false name, I'm somebody I'm not, yet he doesn't see that.

(1) Does common law marriage have any legal rights? (2) If he ever decided to bring another woman here, what could I do? — HAPPY BUT MISERABLE.

• • •

DEAR HAPPY BUT — (1) None - whatever. (2) Nothing.

I can't believe he believes what he's saying. His first marriage failed, so why (he thinks) should he tie himself up again? Especially since he has been given money, love, good cooking, without taking any vows! He is stalling. Marriage is a sacrament; a "way of life which protects our families and binds us to each other. Insist on it.

• • •

DEAR DORIS — I am 14 and I like this guy a lot. The only problem is that he is a flirt. I can never get him to pay me any special attention. Do you have any suggestions as to how I could do this? — TAKEN FOR GRANTED.

• • •

DEAR TAKEN — Friendliness, good sportsmanship, some care to look your best, an interest in living. What could be less than these for attracting male eyes? But you are far too young to be concentrating on any one boy.

• • •

The Golden Years

65-Year-Old Widow Prepares To Make Very Large Mistake

By THOMAS COLLINS

A 65-year-old widow, with rental property on her hands, is beginning to tear her grey hairs.

"My husband always believed that income property was a man's best friend," she says, "and when he died that is about all he left me.

"But I don't know how to manage it. I get a headache trying. I can never be sure when the rents will be paid, when tenants will leave me. I never know when repair jobs are coming, how to get people to do them, or what they should cost.

"I've just about made up my mind to swap the whole crazy mess for a sane, quiet income of $250 a month. . ."

She was left two pieces of income property by her husband. One is a business building containing three small stores. It is worth about $23,000 and is bringing rents of $290 a month. The other is a three-unit frame apartment building, worth about $14,-00 and bringing rents of $110 a month. She lives in one of the apartments and rents out the other two.

"What I intend," she continues, "is to see that my daughter gets the major benefits from what I do. I also have two sons, but they don't come around much. My daughter's husband is a fine man — finer than my sons, I fear. He is in the real estate investment business. I propose to sign my property over to him, for the benefit of him and my daughter, and in exchange get from him a guarantee of $250 a month for life. . ."

What sort of guarantee?

Just about everything this widow intends to do is wrong. Her husband had no business leaving her property she didn't know how to manage, but there are simple ways for her to solve the dilemma. In fact she could shut her eyes and guess, and probably get a better solution than she's about to get.

Her mistakes are three:

By depriving her sons of a share of their father's estate, she is inviting a law suit by them against the daughter and her husband. A suit in which they could charge the son-in-law with all sorts of conniving;

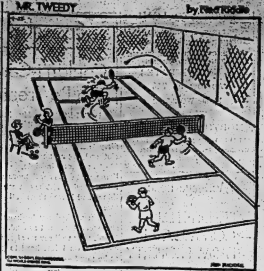
By signing the property over to the son-in-law instead of to the daughter — or jointly to the two of them jointly — she is placing too much faith in human nature. And she is not taking into account the possibility of a divorce, the death of her daughter, or a physical or mental breakdown by the son-in-law;

By expecting a guarantee of $250 a month for life in exchange for a gift of $37,000 in property is simply expecting too much. Too much if it is based on a legal contract. Much too much if it is based on a son-in-law's good faith.

COULD LOSE PROPERTY

The son-in-law, even if as noble as the widow believes him to be, can lose the property in the course of his business operations, can lose the buildings by fire if his insurance lapses, can come upon hard times if tenants become scarce. Where then would the $250 a month come from?

The widow also should know that the son-in-law, having title to the property, can sell it at any time, if he so wishes.



The widow should consider one of the following:

Keeping the property and paying a commission to a good real estate agency to manage it for her;

Deeding the property to both the daughter and her husband in exchange for the $250 a month for life. . . . and securing the $250 with a mortgage on any $37,00 worth of property the son-in-law holds (A lawyer could draw up papers in a deal like this that would probably forestall a suit by the widow's sons);

Selling the property for $37,00 then buying a lifetime no refund annuity with it. Most good life insurance companies sell annuities, and for $37,00 would provide a 65-year-old widow with a lifetime income of about $300 a month.

E.K. Brownridge, President, American Motors (Canada), Limited, sees the three millionth and first Rambler produced in North America (an Ambassador station wagon) off the line at Brampton, Ont.

By the time you read this, we'll be well on our way to 4,000,000 Ramblers

Since the first Rambler rolled off the line, our total North American production has soared past three million cars. And we're just starting.

In just a few record-breaking years, Rambler came out of nowhere to become the biggest automotive success of our time.

WHY DID OVER 2,000,000 PEOPLE SWITCH TO RAMBLER?

We started in the days of over-large, over-weight cars. People needed a conveniently-sized, economical car. We created the compact car. All car makers followed suit.

Today, we build three different Ramblers to meet everybody's needs—the luxurious Ambassador V8, the popular Classic 6 and V8, the compact economical American 6.

And when we started, we realized the need for a better-built car. To make a stronger, safer, longer-lasting body, we developed exclusive Single Unit Construction with Uniside. To combat rust, we pioneered Deep-Dip Rust-proofing, the world's best rustproofing. To make a muffler likely to last as long as you own your Rambler, we introduced our Ceramic-Armored Muffler. To provide greater braking safety, we offered Double Safety Brakes. To advance battery life, we were one of the first Canadian cars to offer an alternator as standard equipment. To hush road noise, we developed our exclusive Cushioned-Acoustical Ceiling of molded fiberglass.

Our philosophy is "Maximum usefulness to the user." We build cars that lead in quality, integrity of construction, and value.

That's why so many people switch to Rambler.

WHAT A RAMBLER TEST DRIVE WILL DO FOR YOU

It will change your mind completely about cars. You'll find Rambler unlike any car you've driven or owned. See your nearest Rambler Dealer today.

A convincing test drive was the turning point for more than three million happy Rambler owners. And that many people can't be wrong.

Canadians Fight For Bigger Share Of Air Traffic

Open Talks With U.S. On New Air Agreement

By HAROLD MORRISON

WASHINGTON (CP)—A Canadian negotiating team headed by Frederick Wood, chairman of the Air Transport Board, intends to put up a stiff fight for bigger share of cross-border air traffic as talks were to open today to design a new Canada-U.S. air agreement, scrapping the one hammered out 15 years ago.

Wood, who heads an eight-man delegation, said Canada wants "a more reciprocity and "equal opportunity for both countries flying the same routes."

Through the veil of his able to reach some understanding with our American friends," he added in an interview before moving into closed - door bargaining with the U.S. group headed by Allen R. Ferguson, the deputy assistant international aviation co-ordinator.

American sources said U.S. airlines likely will put up strong resistance to Canadian demands, arguing that what Canada really wants is the opportunity to penetrate deeper into the continental U.S. commercial air market without being able to offer any major new Canadian routes that would be attractive to U.S. operators.

CITE TWO POINTS

Canadian sources conceded that at present, Canada has no major new routes to offer, but the Canadian team feels it has two strong bargaining points. One is the possibility that Canada would withdraw from the existing pact if the U.S. does not agree to yield some increased degree of reciprocity." The other is the report of Canadian-born Professor John Kenneth Galbraith, former U.S. ambassador to India, picked by the late president Kennedy to head the cross - border air problem.

Galbraith, a native of Iona, Ont., and a noted economics professor at Harvard University, is reported to have suggested in the confidential conclusions that the narrow control of trading over one route concession for another be replaced by a sweeping principle of ensuring border alleges ther and providing routes based mainly on passenger convenience.

POPE'S DIARY

LONDON (CP) — A spiritual diary kept by the late Pope John, entitled Diary of a Soul, will appear soon in British bookshops and in many other countries. The book is a collection of meditations written by Pope John's spiritual life from his early years in a seminary until a year before his death.

Raid Leads To Solution Of Holdup

WINDSOR (CP)—Police said Sunday a raid on an apartment building has led to the solution of the biggest bank holdup in Windsor in the last decade.

Two men were arrested in the raid Saturday, bringing to four the total of arrests since a branch of the Royal Bank of Canada was robbed of $35,000 Friday.

All but $200 of the cash loot was recovered in the raid, police said, along with a cache of fully-loaded weapons — a calibre rifle, an automatic pistol and a revolver.

Police declined to release names of those arrested pending charges, but said one man was from the Windsor area and the other from Montreal.

Earlier Saturday, two men arrested only minutes after the robbery were charged with theft. They were identified as Robert Dillon, 24, and William Brune Parker Jr., 25, both of Montreal.

SEEK THREE CARS

Three cars, two bearing Quebec license plates and one reported stolen in Toronto, were seized at the time of the first arrests.

The police told followed the whistling down of a long list of automobiles suspected to have been involved in the holdup.

Insp. C. L. Boyd said tracing the ownership of a pickup truck led police to the apartment, which they kept under observation "for some time" after the first arrests were made.

He said police suspect there were more than four thieves involved in the incident, possibly as many as eight.

Clothing and weapons recovered during the raid will be sent to the attorney-general's department in Toronto for analysis today, he said.

J. W. McWilliams, manager of the robbed branch, told police three hooded men came into the bank and ordered employees and customers to lie on the floor.

One scooped money, from the cash drawers. The others entered the vault but found the money container empty.

As a gunman tripped an alarm and police arrived at the scene only minutes after the bandits fled.

To Study Tax Changes

OTTAWA (CP) — The Commons begins detailed study today of the income tax changes proposed by Finance Minister Gordon in his March 16 budget. Several items in the income tax changes may provide springboards for the opposition to discuss federal-provincial tax relations.

A provision dealing with deductions in computing taxable income where family allowances are paid may be used to raise the federal-provincial issue.

Ottawa plans to extend family allowances, at $10 a month, to children attending school between ages 16 and 18. Previously the top age was 16.

But Quebec pays such an allowance by law and an arrangement has been worked out for the province to continue paying it to parents. Under 1964 figures from Ottawa the money Quebec residents pay in tax received through the federal family allowances.

ONE OF TWO DEALS

This arrangement was part of the deal negotiated between the two governments at the same time as provision was made for the federal government's Canada Pension Plan to parallel the benefits and contributions of Quebec's proposed pension plan.

A second item of the Quebec-Ottawa deal involves the amount the province is to receive as their share of personal income tax collections. Ottawa agrees to pay Quebec residents of provinces which collect their own income tax would receive from the province living in their federal tax.

Whether the opposition parties will be able to discuss these subjects during study of the income tax resolutions will depend on the extent to which the Commons' presiding officer permits debate on the principle of the provisions of the resolutions.

Other subjects which may come in for special attention include an increase to 50 per cent from 30 in the rate at which heavy construction equipment may be written off and a three-year extension to 1967 in tax exemptions for new manufacturing and processing businesses in slow-growth areas.

Ruby Rams His Head Into Wall

DALLAS (AP)—Jack Ruby, a lung cancer victim, could head off from colliding with a cell wall, was to appear in court today as his attorneys pressed his acquittal on the grounds of temporary insanity in his murder trial.

Ruby's lawyers asked a few days ago that Judge Joe B. Brown order him placed in a hospital. The former night club operator pleaded insanity in his March trial, but was sentenced to death.

The sheriff said Ruby bashed his head about 1 a.m. Sunday when a jailer turned to fetch some tea water after the two played cards together.

The jailer quickly restrained Ruby, then summoned conscious County health officer, Dr. J. M. Parkland. Ruby suffer a lump and a scratch.

INJURY MINOR

Under heavy guard, Ruby was taken to hospital for skull x-rays. These confirmed the injury was minor.

Decker said when Ruby was returned to his cell, he attempted to rip his clothing. The few jail furnishings were then removed from the cell as a precautionary measure, with only a mattress left.

Dr. Jurgen West, professor and head of the department of psychiatry and neurology at the University of Oklahoma School of Medicine, examined Ruby for about an hour, but would not comment on his findings. He did say, however, that portions of a report he planned to write from the cell examination would likely figure in today's hearing.

Commonwealth Cracks Showing, Fear Parley May Promote Crisis

LONDON (CP) — With three months left before the prime ministers' conference here, cracks within the Commonwealth are beginning to show.

There is considerable feeling here, particularly among some Conservative members of Parliament, that the government made a mistake in suggesting the conference a matter of months before the British general election and while Rhodesian problem is on the boil.

Today's Chuckle

Spade up your garden early, then the worms won't be such a temptation.

THE WEATHER

Synopsis: Threatening; to bring unsettled weather to Ontario in a storm centre now over Nebraska and moving northeastward toward the Great Lakes. Cloudy weather and scattered showers moved close to the Windsor area during the night and will spread gradually north and east today affecting most sections of Ontario tonight and Tuesday.

Some students of Commonwealth affairs also feel time is running out and that the brotherhood of nations must soon prove its worth in some demonstrative way or pack it up. The next would come at the July conference.

The most immediate problem is Rhodesian Southern Rhodesia, now demanding independence on her own terms, which Britain rules by the white minority, will even be invited to the meeting.

Prime Minister Sir Alec Douglas-Home may have hoped to gain some political advantage from the Commonwealth. Certainly he stole a bit of thunder from Opposition Labor Leader Harold Wilson, who for much of the first things he would do as he became prime minister this autumn would be to call such a session.

But now the Rhodesia issue might well dominate the meeting and thus take some enthusiasm off plans for more general discussions of the future aims of the Commonwealth, in which the white senior partners now are outnumbered by the undeveloped African members.

Samarkand, Mongol Capital, Threatened by Floodwaters

MOSCOW (AP)—Soviet engineers have begun blasting in an attempt to drain off flood waters threatening the fabled Mongol capital of Samarkand and villages along the Zeravashan River blocked by a huge landslide.

The Communist party newspaper Pravda said engineers planted in the edge of the Pamir Mountains in southwest Asia Sunday night began blasting a canal through the slide, which was said to be as high as an 80-storey building and 2,000 feet wide.

Pravda said 625,000,000 cubic feet of water have built up behind the slide, which on Friday formed a huge natural dam. It said the water level behind the dam rose more than 325 feet in 50 hours.

The landslide dropped into the Zeravashan at a point where the river flows through a gorge. Engineers are blasting a ceasma 985 feet long to drain the backed up waters into the river below the dam formed by the slide. The landslide. Otherwise, it was feared the pent-up waters would sweep away the dam and unleash a torrent on villages along the river and on Samarkand, ancient city of blue-tiled mosques and new industries.

The dam is 1,700 miles southeast of Moscow, near the juncture of the Soviet Union, Red China and Afghanistan.

Official reports Sunday said there had been no casualties so far Pravda today made no mention of any.

Tass said the landslide occurred Friday when the Darvoz Mountain "cracked as a result of earth tremors" and was "cut in-two by water."

A lake is forming 100 miles upstream from Samarkand, a city of 215,000 persons.

"This catastrophe is fraught with the danger of an unprecedented flood in the whole of the Zeravashan Valley" said Tass.

"That is why the population of villages along the river is being urgently evacuated."

Safety roads were being cut and food and supplies taken to mountain villages cut off by lake waters. But the rising waters threatened the Verkhne-Alti bridge on the supply route.

Tass said it was believed the river could be diverted and the danger eased in four or five days.

Rivalry Between Provinces Enters Centenary Planning

CHARLOTTETOWN (CP) — Rivalry among the provinces has raised its head in 1967 centenary planning.

At the three-day conference of the centenary planners held this weekend it was discovered that Quebec—which had been represented by less than complete enthusiastic about the whole show —has an ambitious program totalling 12 projects for federal, provincial and municipal outlay.

Delegates representing other provinces were clearly surprised and pleased by the Quebec project when Gabriel Ostaio's minister of travel and publicity who has been newly-named to the centennial planning for the province in place of the former minister-general Cass, produced no comparable program for the conference.

He told reporters informally later that Ontario's total commitment might run to $30,000,000 but details will be lacking for several weeks. He is still reviewing files in his new job and hasn't decided yet how he will decided on just how it will mark the centenary. There are plans for major improvements in Toronto for which Ottawa is expected to put up $2,500,000.

Maurice Lamontagne, federal state secretary and chairman of the National Centennial Conference, said the new element of rivalry among the provinces was welcome. It was a long step forward from the don't-care atmosphere of centennial planning in the conference's initial meetings last October and December.

The new look to centennial planning may well have resulted from the fact that Charlottetown is embarking in three weeks on an ambitious season-long program of theatrical productions in the new Fathers of Confederation Memorial Building here. There also are local centenary projects throughout the island provinces.

The sense of the meeting was that if tiny Prince Edward Island can put on such a show, other provinces must be regarded as dragging their feet in not doing their bit.

U.S. Officer Killed by Viet Cong Fire

SAIGON (AP)—A U.S. Army officer was killed by Communist Viet Cong fire Sunday in a battle with elements of two Communist Viet Cong guerrilla battalions. Two Vietnamese died with him. Nine other government troops were wounded.

The spokesman said 20 Viet Cong were killed.

Sunday's action was initiated by government troops in Chuongthien province, a large government force moved out of Kien Long before dawn in search of two Communist battalions it intelligence reported had been menacing the area.

The death of the American raised to 131 the total of U.S. military personnel killed in action in South Viet Nam. The total thus far this year is 35.

Favreau Heads Grits In Quebec

QUEBEC (CP)—Guy Favreau has been officially tagged Prime Minister Pearson's Quebec lieutenant and a fresh attempt is to be made this summer to separate Quebec Liberals into federal and provincial party organizations.

Those developments emerged from weekend meetings of Liberal adherents here and in Montreal. Mr. Favreau, justice minister in Mr. Pearson's cabinet, meanwhile proclaimed himself in favor of the split.

The general council of the Quebec Liberal Federation decided here Sunday to call a special convention in Quebec City July 4, a new bill to get a Liberal free from the rank-and-file for the schism.

They rejected such a proposal at the party's regular convention last fall.

But the general council after four hours of discussion agreed 48 to 1 to back again.

Immigration Minister Rene Tremblay attended the meeting and accepted the move. He said it would be left to the individual Liberal association in the province to decide whether they want to belong to both federal and provincial organizations or only one.

IS IN QUEBEC INTEREST

Premier Jean Lesage arrived near the end of the session and later read a statement saying it is "in the interests of the province as well as Liberals themselves to give the Quebec Liberal party a strictly provincial structure."

At Montreal, Mr. Favreau officially became leader of Quebec's federal Liberal caucus Saturday and at a press conference later he said it has become necessary for the federal Liberals to have their own vehicle of policy and action in Quebec.

Mr. Pearson, visiting briefly at noon, said all the province's Liberals must be united in spirit if not in body.

He asked everyone to remember: "We are all Liberals."

Mr. Favreau said there is no question of a breakdown between Quebec Liberals.

Officials Probe Suicide in Kingston Prison

KINGSTON (CP) — Officials of Kingston penitentiary are investigating the death of John Thomas Clark, 23, found hanging in a segregation cell Sunday.

Clark, a Toronto native, was discovered during a regular guard patrol, slumped against his cell bars with a bed sheet around his neck. He had been placed in segregation at his own request while Assistant Warden E. C. Atkins said "is not unusual."

The victim was sentenced in Toronto in February to three years for theft and break and enter.

Mr. Atkins said an inquest will be held but no date has been set.

Uncontrollable Greeks Threaten Turkish Village

UN Trying to Arrange To Evacuate 800 Turks

By CLARE McDERMOTT.

NICOSIA (Reuters) — Gunfire provided accompaniment today to UN efforts to arrange the evacuation of the 800 Turkish-Cypriots of the village of Ayios Theodoros in southwest Cyprus.

A United Nations spokesman said about 100 Greek - Cypriot "uncontrollable elements" were now in the area of the village and that fighting which has been going on there for the past three days was still in progress.

Earlier, the spokesman said, the evacuation effort might be scrapped should Turkish-Cypriots in the village refuse to a ceasefire. He said the Greek-Cypriots had already accepted a ceasefire conditions.

He said about 100 Turkish-Cypriot women and children had already left the village for the nearby village of Kophinou and that the remaining Turkish-Cypriot civilians were gathered around a school - house where UNFICYP troops set up a command post.

The spokesman also said there was shooting near St. Hilarion Castle in the Kyrenia Mountains about 10 miles north of Nicosia, where Greek-Cypriot troops were trying to capture Cypriot positions during the weekend.

Turkish-Cypriot hilltop gunposts in the Kyrenia Mountains were trying to stand off attacks by Greek-Cypriots.

The castle is the main Turkish-Cypriot stronghold in the area.

SHOTS FIRED

The UN spokesman said there was also shooting in the suburbs of Nicosia Sunday night, and Swedish UN troops arranged a ceasefire in the villages north of Paphos in western Cyprus.

Talks initiated by UN peace force commander Lt.- Gen. Peter Young attended the meeting of both the Greek- and Turkish-Cypriot communities were expected to continue today.

Turkish-Cypriots tried during the weekend to strengthen their defences in a mountainous area around Nicosia and the road north.

Turkish-Cypriot crowds accused Gyani and the UN force Sunday of not doing enough to protect bloodshed in Cyprus.

They staged two demonstrations. In one of them Gyani's car was stoned as he returned from a meeting with Turkish-Cypriot leaders.

Turkish - Cypriots have strengthened defences around the Nicosia suburb of Omorfita.

They have also moved more women and children into the area from the outlying villages.

Charge Two Over Wreck At Foleyet

FOLEYET, Ont. (CP)—Two persons were charged Sunday with criminal negligence injury as the result of a freight train derailment Friday which injured many CNR employees, one seriously.

Damage in the 24-car derailment was estimated at about $1,000,000 and mail traffic was delayed 10 hours.

Police identified those charged as Paul Bernatcher, 22, and Henry Linesar, 18, both of Foleyet. They will appear in court here Thursday.

A diesel engine that CNR officials said was removed from the yard "unattended or with some unauthorized person aboard" was in a collision with the four diesel, 60-car freight three miles west of here. The wayward engine had been backed down the yard with its motor running. It was believed it had been kicked because it moved out of the yard uphill "at a speed unusual for an unmanned engine."

FIREMAN IMPROVES

Gunther Manthiex, 42, of Hornepayne, Ont., fireman on the freight, was in improved condition in hospital Sunday. He had his right leg amputated below the knee, suffered a compound fracture of his lower left leg, arm abrasion and concussion, a spinal fracture, facial burns and head injuries.

H. E. Woods, also of Hornepayne, engineer on the freight, suffered severe burns to his hands. A crewman, W. T. Carney of Hazard Valley, Out., suffered minor injuries.

About 200 head of cattle spilled from the Winnipeg-to-Montreal freight, No. 504, as it was rolled. Workmen buried these Sunday near the site of the crash, as they worked to clear the line.

The collision occurred on the CNR's main line from Winnipeg to Sudbury. Passenger traffic was not disrupted by the wreck.

CLOTHING CAUGHT

Mr. Manthiex was injured when his clothing caught on the side of the train's cab as he climbed down from the engine to cut the diesel.

He was dragged a short

Say Canada Is Best Qualified To Lead Peace-Keeping Machine

HARRIMAN, N.Y. (CP)—The United States should not try to bind Canadian foreign policies into a pattern of conformity with U.S. policies, a leading American public affairs forum concluded Sunday.

The American Assembly said Canada is better equipped than any other nation to lead development of international peace-keeping machinery and can play this role more effectively from a position of independence within the Western Alliance.

The statements were made in a report summarizing a four-day conference of the assembly devoted exclusively to relations with Canada.

More than 60 participants included high-level representatives of the U.S. government, military, business, universities and other segments of the American community. The assembly is affiliated with Columbia University and its sessions are held at Arden House, a luxurious mountaintop retreat 50 miles north of New York owned by the university.

The report said any U.S. attempt to achieve total agreement in foreign policy with Canada would be bound to fail in the long run.

Moreover, it said, Canada's status and effectiveness as a leader of the middle powers was a growing asset and might well be Canada's indispensable contribution to the alliance.

The report said the U.S. government and people should guard against any urge they want to make Canada a satellite of U.S. policy.

"Honest divergences of policy are not manifestations of anti-Americanism or perfidy when they stem from Canadian-U.S. relations," it said, referring specifically to Cuba and Communist China.

On the other side of the coin, the assembly cautioned Canadians to remember U.S. global commitments and said that if Canada wants more attention to these problems it could produce results "which Canada would welcome" and that new dialogues lanses in American solicitude for her interests and sensibilities."

But it added that these limitations should not mean any weakening of the Canadian-U.S. alliance nor that either country should refrain from urging its views on the other.

50-Year Jewel Presented To Geo. Youker for Service In Odd Fellows Over Years

Belleville Lodge, No. 81, Independent Order of Odd Fellows gathered Thursday evening with members of Quintena Rebekah Lodge, Metro Encampment No. 59, Belleville Canton No. 8, visitors from District 97 and many friends to honor Brother George Youker and Mrs. Youker on the occasion of his attaining the outstanding distinction of fifty years of continuous service and active membership in the lodge.

The evening began with invocation by the Grand Chaplain of the Grand Lodge of Ontario, the Rev. Alfred Poulter. Then Bro. Ross Jeffery, District Deputy Grand Master of District 67, expressed on behalf of all present their appreciation to the Grand Master of Ontario, Bro. R. Fox and Mrs. Fox for interrupting their heavy schedule in order to be personally present on this memorable evening.

The Grand Master then ordered Bro. Youker and Mrs. Youker to be escorted to the centre of the room and there to receive the applause of the assembly. Bro. Larry Pollitt, PDDGM, supervised the presentation of a beautiful corsage which was pinned on Mrs. Youker by Sister Clara Ironside, Noble Grand of Quintena Lodge.

GIVEN 50-YEAR JEWEL

Bro. Fox, G.M., presented to Bro. George his Honorable Veterans' Fifty-Year Jewel, in the doing of he embarked on the great outlook of service which Bro. Youker had given over these past fifty years, to his community and to his lodge. Verse was Honorable Brother's Jewel more worthily bestowed.

The assembly was then entertained by some brothers from Belleville 81, IOOF, who exacted a skit. The actors were overalls and hats to represent a farm scene where the occupiers of a greenhouse were seen from the city were related.

Mr. Poulter, Grand Chaplain, then gave a brief summary of the work of Odd Fellows in Ontario and the wonderful establishment of all the branches on the many projects now in progress.

The greetings of Prince Edward District Encampment of Patriarchs, were extended by District Deputy Grand Patriarch Dwight Reynolds.

Bro. Youker thanked the lodge and related a few of his reminiscences from past years and an appropriate poem which expressed the longing of old age to be active again.

GIVEN HIGH OFFICES

Bro. Youker joined Belleville Lodge, No. 81, IOOF, on June 26, 1913, by initiation. He received his first degree on July 10, his second and third on July 17, 1913. In those days the lodge was too busy to have summer recess.

In three short years he rose to the office of Noble Grand and was again elected Noble Grand in 1922.

On June 27, 1914, he was selected to the office of Recording Secretary, and in 1921 served as Chief Patriarch. In 1923 he served as Grand Representative of the Encampment branch.

On December 5, 1918, he was mustered into Belleville Canton, No. 8, Patriarchs Militant, of which semi-military branch he served as captain in 1924 and 1925.

In all these branches Bro. Youker served faithfully, exhibiting by his presence an ideal of service and dignity seldom equalled. He served as well on the board of trustees for the Temple building of the C.P. and the committee on the District Committees, and many other boards. His most outstanding work was found in his accuracy and deportment in exemplifying the many ritualistic degree parts. This will long be remembered by.

The curling and golf team was captained by Skip of Lloyd Lantz, George Durno, Lloyd Sheppard and Ron Bean as skip. In curling the local rink scored on seven of the eight ends played and the game was Will Farmalee thought the club sent down a packed rink but was told, "it is just one of the pickup rinks of the club".

It was stated there were 80 teams entered in the "do" and that the greens at the Hunt Club were in fair shape for this time of year. Three temporary greens were played. The hospitality in the spacious club was just wonderful as say the winners.

Just as a reminder a rink of Fred Maund, Bill Gault, Steve Bakey and Ernie Wilkinson as skip defeated a rink of Bill Spinelli, Dr. McCorquodale, Doug Ashley with Ben Corke as skip in the Wednesday night curling title the Sunday the rink was closed for the season. It was, added at the time that Steve Bakey made two terrific shots near the end of the game to take his skip off the hook and win the rink all the marbles. Likely more will be heard of this win when the annual meeting is held and the boys move indoors to the "IT" room to discuss the season's activities.

As on the fishing trip over the bonspiel curling topics are strictly taboo.

Unique Answer To Family Car Problem

More and more families with growing wives are finding that one car is not adequate for their transportation needs. While two cars might do, the cost of this is expensive — especially when teen-age members of the family are driving as well.

The ideal solution is the Honda Motor Scooter. For as little as $3 a week any family can have the advantage of a second car. For example: dad may drive the Honda to work while mom drives the family car to her job or goes shopping or in fact, it is not uncommon to see women going to the grocery store with the handy Honda.

Teen-agers are finding the Honda Motor Scooter a dependable means of transportation to low cost (up to 284 miles per gallon.) For dad, this is less expensive than letting son use the family car.

To learn more about these wonderful machines, drop in to Booth Radio and Television Limited, 170 Front Street. They'll be pleased to show you all the wonderful advantages of driving a Honda. A27-29

Present Trophies, Prizes At Social Night for Curlers

TRENTON — The curling season officially ended at the Trenton club Friday night with the presentations of cups and trophies, a buffet supper followed to the music of Al Hawkins and his orchestra. In charge of the evening was curling director Don Hastie, and Country Club president, Glynne Jones was on hand to congratulate the winners and assist with the presentation of prizes. Social arrangements were under the supervision of club manager Bruce Cardy, and many of the curlers, "out" without the prospect of their favorite sport, took the opportunity to brush up on golf points with the new club pro, Bob Smith.

The Central Bridge Trophy brought six hundred representatives of congregations from points as far as Haliburton and Bancroft. The visiting delegates made a lovely sea as they were invited Trentonians to their meetings and distributing their Bible publications.

The film, produced by the Watch Tower Society, followed the world-wide series of Christian assemblies held by Jehovah's Witnesses in each country the travelling conventioners took special note of the customs and newspaper-clippings from different religions. These, according to Mr. Laur ier Saumur, district minister, confirm the common origin of the world's divided religions, namely, ancient Babylon, the capital city of that mighty hunter of II fame, Nimrod."

Continuing, Mr. Saumur added, "Why do we feel we must proclaim so urgently the parallel between the great religions of Christendom and the older religions of the East? Because the Bible has prophesied an end to "Babylon the Great," that is the world empire of false religion based on ancient Babylonish teaching. As Christians we are warned to separate ourselves from this system before it is destroyed," Mr. Saumur declared.

The convention concluded on Sunday with 911 in attendance to hear Mr. Saumur's public discourse, "Facing Up to the Urgency of Our Times," by which he declared God's Kingdom by Christ as the only hope for all this world's troubles.

The program included an analysis of the gains made by congregations in this circuit in the last six months and laid plans for future expansion.

Witnesses Conclude Convention

TRENTON — The convention of Jehovah's Witnesses in the Trenton Community Gardens drew a record attendance of 975 on Saturday evening to the widely advertised film, "Proclaiming Everlasting Good News' Around the World." This was the highlight of the three-day assembly which brought six hundred representatives of congregations from points as far as Haliburton and Bancroft. The visiting delegates made a lovely sea as they were invited Trentonians to their meetings and distributing their Bible publications.

Players Leave Many Friends In Britain

By CAROL KENNEDY

LONDON (CP) — Canada's Stratford Festival players flew back to Toronto today after their triumphant three - week season at the Chichester Festival Theatre in Sussex, leaving a host of new fans behind them — and also one member of the company.

Bonde Dinah Christie, described by one enthusiastic Chichester man as The Beauty of the Company, has decided to stay and work in England for a while. She has no definite plans yet aside from doing some sightseeing, denied in the rest of the Canadians by sheer pressure of work.

The Ontario actors were disappointed not to be able to see a London production in this year of celebrations for the 400th anniversary of Shakespeare's birth — celebrations begun by their own season of Shakespeare and Moliere, which opened April 6.

Today they were whisked through a London banking in the year's first heat-wave to catch their Trans-Canada Air Lines charter flights.

Sunday was the first opportunity many had for relaxing and exploring historic Chichester, once a Roman settlement and now a picture-book Georgian city backed under the West Sussex downs.

WILDLY ENTHUSIASTIC

The final performances of the Canadian season came Saturday night, when the modern-dress Timon of Athens was played to a wildly enthusiastic, "standing - room - only" audience in the open-stage theatre modelled on the one at Stratford, Ont.

Earlier, the company played a final matinee of Moliere's Le Bourgeois Gentilhomme, a nd the previous night performed Love's Labor's Lost for the last time in front of Queen Elizabeth the Queen Mother and a glittering society audience.

Afterwards, the Queen Mother asked to meet the cast. They were lined up on stage and presented one by one, the Queen Mother pausing for a chat with each.

Later Sir Laurence Olivier, director of the Chichester Festival, toasted the company in champagne and expressed a hope that the two companies could arrange regular interchange visits.

A silver loving-cup, replica of one owned by the Chichester Theatre, was presented to Floyd Chalmers, vice-president of the Canadian Stratford Festival, by Leslie Evershed-Martin, the Sussex businessman and former mayor of Chichester who was inspired by the theatre at Stratford, Ont., to design a similar playhouse for his hometown.

COMING BACK TO BELLEVILLE for his third summer as manager of the Kinsmen Club's swimming pool, Jim Clelland of Sarnia, interviewed 18 would-be-lifeguards at the Recreation Centre Sunday. Applicants were all high school boys and girls in the 16-to-21-year-old age bracket. Six lifeguards will be hired this summer. In the picture, Mr. Clelland interviews 17-year-old Margery Pugh of Belleville.

History of City Can Be Read In Successive Styles of Homes

It may be true that anyone could at any time build a house in any style he pleased, but it is plain that almost no one does. Just as old photographs can be dated by the changing fashions of women's dress, so the history of the town can be read in the successive styles of its buildings. It is fascinating to walk about with a little knowledge of the historic styles and try to judge when each building was put up or altered, what effect the builder had in mind, and how the neighborhood has fared over the years.

Last Sunday's tour crossed the Upper Bridge (one was already there on the 1816 map) and investigated the area between East Moira and North Front Streets. This area is all laid out on the 1845 map for development in streets and town-lots; building lots, but about the only houses at the time were in between East Moira and Grove Streets, on an odd angle, but these have been torn down or moved. North Front was interrupted by a splendid house and garden about where the Grant Funeral Home now is, and there was a well right in the future street; East Moira terminated in some buildings near a falling mill at the dam just above Park St. and was interrupted also by some buildings just beyond Cameron St.

GREEK REVIVAL STYLE

We judge that many of the houses in this area were put up soon after the 1845 subdivision, for there are extensive traces of the Greek Revival style, and this did not go on much later. This style has a rather heavy cornice, often under the eaves; its gable end is to street; there are three openings in the front storey on the street facade; the front door is not the centre opening, but to right or left. Mora ambitious houses in this style would have a front porch with Greek columns; the whole relatine's old livery stable on Cameron St. there are, surprisingly, poinded gothic windows.

The large brick dwelling on the west side of North Front St. that looks like a church actually was: on the 1877 map it is marked "Bible Christian School".

Many on the walking tour lamented the loss of soffit' attractive old stone houses on Front St. To walk or drive down the street is a dismal experience, lined as it is with service stations. The effect is the same as if a bone-owner tore up all his plumbing fixtures in his front porch and hall to show visitors where he intended to.

The lovliest bit of 'gingerbread' in town (if you have an eye for that) is on a white Gothic Revival house on the east side of N. Front, between Harvey and Strachan.

This 'drapery', as it was called, is not merely sawn out of a thin board, like most, but has been sculptured a little, as Andrew Jackson Downing would have advocated. The owners are to be commended for keeping this house up.

It has not been fashionable, for many years, to admire 'drapery' on ouses, but this was a real folk art and a typically Ontario expression. We venture to predict that such houses will at least be tourist bait in the near future, if not admired by our own people.

Sunday's walkers went as far as the Grant Funeral Home. This house is said to have been designed by the same Joel Jellyman who designed St. Anges' Manor. This house was evidently later, having more signs of the French taste in Mansard roofs and high narrow proportions, and the arches inside the front entrance recall those in St. Agnes' Manor. We were told that Jellyman also built the house now replaced by the Municipal Building, and it seems to have shown similarities to both. We think Jellyman must have looked at builders' books on the Tuscan Villa and Renaissance styles, and must have seen later work (by a man named Slater) still survives, through its original vivid colors are now exchanged for the light modern tint.

Two quite large and attractive brick houses with traces of the Italian taste are on the south sides of East Moira St. and Grove St.

START AT MUSEUM

The tour started at the Museum as usual at 2 p.m. with slides shown by Mr. Greig, and ended about 4 in the same place with coffee served by Museum Ladies. The next tour the tour will be up West Moira St.

This Sunday's tour, April 26, will be of old houses at Stirling. Those wishing to go are advised to meet at the Museum at 1.30 p.m. and distribute themselves among available cars. Mr. and Mrs. J. B. Belshaw will meet the group through their 1862 house first and then around town. The later will meet with coffee (we shall be guests of the town for this) at the home of Mrs. W. T. Elliott on Front St. in Stirling.

Investment Dealers Make Fat Profits

By DON HANRIGHT

OTTAWA (CP)—One of the oldest and best-kept secrets of Bay Street has been divulged by the royal commission on banking and finance.

It is the financial position of the investment dealers, which are private companies or partnerships have never been required by law to tell the public about their affairs.

The dealers have "healthy" profits, the commission concluded.

A survey made for the commission by the Investment Dealers' Association of Canada—with 130 member firms—shows aggregate net income, as a proportion of capital and surplus, ranging from a low of nine per cent in a high of 17 in the 1951-62 period.

In 1962 eight of the 124 firms covered in the IDA survey had no less than 45 per cent of all capital in the industry and 45 per cent of the net income. These eight were not named by the commission.

This investment community in 1962 underwrote or helped to place most of the $2,700,000,000 in gross new provincial, municipal or corporate issues and also helped to distribute the $3,400,000,000 in direct and guaranteed federal issues.

The commission said that in 1961, six of the IDA members—not named—underwrote about 90 per cent of the value of all public utility issues, 60 per cent of industrial bond issues, 85 per cent of stock issues, and dominated the provincial and the large municipal underwritings.

The commission called for more competition in Canadian underwriting.

Nationalism Affects Labor

The nationalism rampant in Canada has now spilled over into the labor movement.

The Canadian Congress of Labor, holding its annual convention in Montreal, had placed before it eight resolutions all aimed at giving Canadian unions greater control of their own affairs.

If these resolutions had emanated from the CLC hierarchy, they might be suspect. The CLC has been to the mat with one international union, the SIU, and has been far from happy with the reaction not only of the U.S. leadership of the SIU but also with the backing given SIU officials by other U.S. unions. The most outspoken supporters of greater independence for Canadian locals of international unions, however, are members of these very locals. The natives, it seems, are restless. The CLC convention rejected all eight resolutions, maintaining these grievances were matters for the international unions themselves—a smart place of strategy since it avoids any charges that the CLC is interfering in any way with the business of member unions.

Complaints about U.S. interference in Canadian labor problems have been commonplace for years, but in the past these complaints have almost invariably come either from management or from sources inimical to organized labor. There was a simple answer to these complainants—how Canadian unions managed their affairs was none of the complainants' business. Unions had as much right, it was argued, to be international in character as had companies.

Of late, though, there has been a mating this of criticism of foreign control of firms operating in Canada. It is interesting to note that the sentiment which gives rise to such criticism has also induced union members to seek greater independence from U.S. supervision.

Some criticism has often been justified, in many instances with good cause. Carried to extremes, it promotes ill-feeling and gives rise to a multitude of problems. Most Canadians, though, will feel that there is nothing unreasonable about the desire for control over our own economic destiny. The stress in recent months has been on ownership of the means of production; but in the final analysis control over the direction of the labor force may well prove of equal importance. It is encouraging to find Canadian unionists taking the lead in what will certainly be a long struggle to acquire this control. That way, if the public adopts the same hands-off policy followed by the Canadian Congress of Labor, the issue will not be confused by charges of unwarranted interference with the rights of organized labor.

Acting Like a Union Again

The Ontario Secondary School Teachers' Federation is acting like a union again.

In Prescott R. A. Cousins has been asked by the board to resign as principal of the South Grenville District High School or accept a minor teaching position.

The Board made the request after receiving a report by provincial inspectors, the contents of which have not been revealed. The Board contends Mr. Cousins is not competent to head the school. The Teachers' Federation contends he is.

What business is it of the union—er, pardon, Federation? It is the Board, and not the Federation, which is responsible for hiring competent staff. If the Board thinks the staff is not competent, ought it not to have the right to make changes? Mr. Cousins thinks the Board is wronging him, he can sue. But why should the Federation intervene? A real union would not get into this sort of an argument with the board of directors as a private company—Mr. Cousins is obviously occupying a managerial position beyond the jurisdiction of a normal union.

If the Federation is going to act itself up as the sole judge of competency, then perhaps it would like to run all the schools—and pay for them.

Many of us are life-long non-believers in any religion. Nonetheless we believe that the freedom to practise religious views should be allowed Jews of the Soviet Union in the same manner that such freedom is granted people of other religious persuasion. We are concerned that the process of restitution of Jewish cultural activities has been slow.

The journals and bi-states of much smaller groups are more prolific. We are deeply troubled that there should be articles in Soviet journals of many republics expressing hostility to Jewish people as such and using terms such as "vermin," "blood-suckers," "parasites" in combination with caricatures of Jews.—Bertrand Russell in a letter to Soviet Premier Nikita Khrushchev.

Given Car as Tranquillizer

Hamilton Spectator

An American psychologist told a meeting in Toronto the other day that parents who give their teen - aged son a car as "tranquillizer" are not accepting their responsibilities.

This kind of rebuke, removed from the context of modern living, has a truth no one can deny.

The younger generation today is exposed to pressures which their parents never knew. It was supposed that the main threat many American high schools have now is bigger than their playing fields. At one Canadian school there was a fear that a tip with sports cars very much in evidence.

In an atmosphere in which to young people can be made to feel poverty-stricken if he lacks the playthings possessed by the majority, the "tranquillizer" syndrome can be powerful. The desire to conform is now one of the strongest in our society, and it is one of the saddest of all reflections that youth, whose leading characteristic in the original should be caught in its toils.

It is not a rational society. Sure of its goals, which is president of its goals, which has school or club no longer than its sports grounds. Even the most sentimental modernist would not consider this a desirable step towards a better future.

At the end of the war the world looked for a change. If a Rip Van Winkle had slept for twenty years and then awakened to the light of modern days he would be astonished and dismayed at the revolutionary changes in manners and values in the last two decades.

Santa Claus arrives much more often than he used to do. The stern taste of working for a heart's desire have been much softened and the system of rewards in relation to work have been turned topsy-turvy.

If Santa Claus comes every day, it is not long before our response is "OK, put it on the tertleff". Far too many aims of youth have been demolished by a sentimental reaction in the mistaken belief that to give a person what he was in his make him happy. It is more likely to make him discontented, to cheat him of a vigorous pursuit and the satisfaction of eventual triumph.

A twelve-year-old girl wrote to the col. nist in Landers, complaining that her mother told her to do everything she wanted. The girl was unhappy, because no one said "No". She contrasted her state with a young friend whose mother said "No" to her and meant it.

Some parents should try saying "No" for a change. The result might pleasurably surprise us.

Sentimental "kindness" and excessive generosity is contrary to the interests of healthy youth. An older generation has yet to realize this.

'Fadge' Makes Good Eating

Ulster Commentary

When the Queen Mother during her autumn visit, called at the Ulster Folk Museum of Science in Belfast she watched a demonstration of the griddling of "fadge" by the curator, as it is more commonly known these days.

The Queen Mother's obvious interest was a reminder that "fadge" is only one of several breads—and there are many—to others—which are peculiar to the North of Ireland. Visitors who leave without sampling them are, say the epicures, missing a rare delicacy.

"Fadge" of soda and wheaten are closely associated with the social history of the country. They have been baked in the households of Ulster folk for centuries.

To taste these breads at their best, they must be generously buttered and eaten straight from the griddle. The griddle, incidentally, is the same household utensil which has been in domestic use for as long as bread has been baked. It still provides the best results.

The potato fadge is boiled for used in fadge. Fadge has long been used, too, for lining the bowl for apple dumplings which have been a County Armagh delicacy for centuries. Potato-apple cake is also famous in the Armagh district. For this, potato bread is used instead of pastry for covering the apple cake, which is then baked on the griddle.

Because fadge and small bakeries throughout Ulster produce fadge, soda and wheaten, it is not surprising that a great deal less of these breads is baked at home. The women's institutes and other organizations are making a conscious effort to ensure that the art does not die out.

A final word about fadge and soda bread. Fried in fat and served with bacon and eggs, they be the perfect breakfast. Where it was obtainable — and there was a time, long ago, in the rest of the United Kingdom — this particular meal went over in a big way with American servicemen who trained there during the war. Bacon and eggs, fadge and soda bread became known far and wide as "Ulster breakfast." It is still popular with visitors.

There is mention of buttermilk in the recipes. This was once the recognized drink with the main meal of the day. Indeed what are now described as 'old wives' tales" once attributed to buttermilk many health and healing qualities.

For the same implies, buttermilk is simply the residue of milk which has been churned into butter. There were few farmhouses in days gone by in which churning was not part of the daily routine.

Very little buttermilk is drunk today. One reason is the public preference for fresh milk, ample supplies of which are now available.

Recipe for fadge: one pound c. mashed potatoes; four ounces, more or less, of flour; one-half teaspoon of salt; one ounce of melted butter.

Potatoes are best used while still hot. Flour baking board, on which place potatoes. Sprinkle with salt and butter lightly if used. Knead in just enough flour to bind potatoes together (too much makes tough bread). Roll out one-quarter-inch, or thinner until browned as desired. Bake in a dry griddle on both sides. Spread on cloth to cool. May be eaten cold, hot, buttered or fried in bacon fat and served with bacon and eggs.

Whalebacks' Day Is Over

Montreal Gazette

It is the passing of the last of the whalebacks. Her owners, Upper Lakes Shipping Ltd., are ready to give her to the marine museum. If nobody will take her, she will be broken up for scrap.

This last of the whalebacks is the John Ericsson. She is a very old ship, one of those built in the United State, between 1888 and 1898. They had a very unusual design, looking like huge cigars.

The theory was that they could not tip over and that would roll about in the water like whales. It is also said that they had such great stability in order to avoid a tonnage tax based on deck area.

The inventor of the whalebacks was Capt. Alexander McDougall, a native Canadian, who for many years was owner and operator of the Superior Ship yard.

The fleet of whalebacks was once a familiar sight on the Great Lakes, as they carried grain and iron ore from the lakehead to Buffalo or Chicago. They had a good record for safety as ships go, but one concerned, but they rolled unmercifully. Sailors did not have safety lines on deck to keep them from being tossed overboard on rough days.

The John Ericson would have had a place of her own in history as the last of the whalebacks. But her fate has decided to be historic in another way. Last October she was sent to Chicago to take on a load of grain, in the height of the bitter international waterfront dispute.

Another ship of Upper Lakes Shipping, the Hochelaga, also had come out of Chicago empty and damaged by a dynamite blast. The old Ericsson, which had been plying the Great Lakes since 1898, had already been condemned as scrapyards. But she was refurbished at Goderich, and sent on her dangerous Chicago mission.

She was several weeks in Chicago. But the longshoremen, in sympathy with the SIU, refused to load her and she sailed back to Toronto at the end of November.

It was a dramatic last chapter for the last of the whalebacks.

LOOKING BACKWARDS

GLEANINGS FROM OUR FYLES OF BYGONE YEARS

20 YEARS AGO

APRIL 27, 1944

This battlefront town hidden away at the end of a muddy road in Italy has a mayor by the name of Joe Olivastri, a plump little farmer who speaks Italian with a Canadian accent.

"Joe is unhappy. Treglio is his home and his birthplace, but his heart is in Canada, in Montreal, and in the Ontario towns of Peterborough, Midland, Orillia and South River, where he drove horses and operated a stationary crane for 28 years.

"Italy, she's a helluva place," he chuckled, and she's going to be a helluva lot worse. I wish Doctor Harvey had sent my wife to Southern California."

Joe went to Canada in 1904 and worked until 1932 on the advice, he said, of Dr. Albert Harvey of Orillia. His wife was ailing and the doctor believed the Italian climate might make her better. Though he brought his first two Canadian born daughters back with him, Joe never intended to stay in Treglio. However, he didn't count on Italian officialdom and when he tried to return to Canada he could not get a passport.

"Then what do you think happened?" he asked. "They make me the mayor." That was in August, 1936, and Joe has held the job since. He was asked about his own political beliefs. "I am the same as the rest of them," he said. "I'm a Liberal. I always vote for the Liberals in Ontario."

Mr. and Mrs. Theodore Reid, well known and highly esteemed residents of Rawdon township, observed their golden anniversary of their wedding on April 22nd. A family gathering was held at the home of their daughter, Mrs. Harry (Hilda) Grills, near Campellford, when they were joined by children and grandchildren were present.

The meeting of the Men's Club in connection with St. Andrew's Presbyterian Church on Tuesday evening last was sent were entertained by listening to a debate, the subject of which was: "Resolved that it would be to the advantage of the Dominion of Belleville to adopt the city manager form of government." Mr. Archibald Deroche upheld the affirmative side and Mr. Eugene Illsley took the negative side. Both gentlemen had well prepared and handled their side of the question in an excellent manner; in fact they did so well that the judges refrained from handing down a decision. Mr. Vern Weir, the president of the club, presided and Mr. Charles Cameron led in the discussion.

There was a light snow fall here today and the temperature was just one point above freezing.

Strictly Personal
Most Precious Freedom Is to Make Mistakes

By SYDNEY J. HARRIS

Perhaps the most precious freedom a growing person can have is the freedom to make mistakes. Children who are denied this freedom, or unwisely restricted in it, can be emotionally crippled for-life.

I recently ran into a woman I have not seen for almost 30 years. She was with her seven-year-old boy who looked worried, nervous, and utterly cowed by life. And I remember having seen her once on the beach when the boy was about two years old.

She would absolutely not allow him the freedom to make any mistakes. Her hawk's eye was on him every minute, and the thought she was "protecting" him, but actually she was forbidding him the opportunity of growing, in learning — which is to say, in making mistakes.

A famous poet once said on a village was once asked how he came by his wisdom. "I got it from my good judgment," he answered. And where did his good judgment come from?, I got it from my bad judgment."

It is surprising and depressing to see how many children, both in and out of school, are never told the value of making mistakes — but, instead, are filled with fear of failure, of being wrong. Doing the right thing, getting the right answer, becomes a dead end in itself, rather than a means toward maturity.

Man has been defined (and I think properly) as the "problem solving animal", and life is problematic. Learning the wrong ways of doing things, though sometimes painful, is more valuable than being told the right way, without understanding the reasons for and the consequences of being wrong.

The little boy I saw is terribly afraid of doing the wrong thing. He is afraid, with all his willingness to risk failure. When this psychic nerve is cut, we may have a "dutiful" child, but we cannot have a "good" one, in any creative and joyous sense of the word.

In an article last spring in the journal, "Childhood Education" Prof. Mary B. Lane tells of a group of five-year-olds asked by their teacher if they could think of mistakes from which they had learned. Most of the examples they gave recounted mistakes made outside of school; almost none mentioned what they had learned from mistakes in school.

But school, like home, should be a place "to try out ideas for size" and not just a recitation of right answers. Both parents as teachers are woefully shortsighted when they try to protect the child from his mistakes, when they make the "right answer" more important than the quest for knowledge or the good judgment. For what is not learned within one's self cannot be learned from another.

No Retirement Age?

Brockville Recorder and Times

To Your Good Health
Excessive Alcohol Also Impairs Nervous System

By JOSEPH G. MOLNER, M.D.

Dear Dr. Molner: My husband drinks quite a bit and quite often. When he drinks too much for too long a period, he gets the shakes.

In the beginning he didn't get them very often and they didn't last long. Now they are worse and last longer. What should I do? — B. T.

Calling a spade a spade, I suggest that "quite a bit" and "quite often" means that he is reaching the stage of being a full-blown alcoholic.

Excessive alcohol affects the liver, as most people know, and the brain, and general nutrition.

But it also impairs the nervous system, and that is what causes the "shakes."

When a person reaches that stage he should be told in so many words that he is an alcoholic and has a serious problem.

He must realize that he has to do something about it before his family, his job and his own body suffer any further damage.

When (as otherwise will happen) he develops slow mental reactions, and cirrhosis of the liver, and stomach hemorrhages it is too late.

Occasionally such a person can be jolted, by hearing it in plain truth, into realising his problem and doing something about it. More often, however, he refuses to admit that he has one, and in clinging to the slings to his alcohol until it destroys him.

I hope your husband can be jolted, and that you can get him to a doctor, or to Alcoholics Anonymous, or to an Alcoholic clinic, before it is too late.

Dear Dr. Molner: Please elaborate on pinworms in children. What causes them, and is there any way to get rid of them besides a prescription from the doctor? Will eating salt help get rid of them or is that an old wives' tale? — Mrs. M. J.

What causes pinworms? Well, what causes earthworms or mice? Or termites? They're just there, that's all.

These pinworms are a form of life. They are a human parasite. Scatter them on the ground and sooner or later they die.

But swallow a couple of pinworm eggs, and they hatch. The worms (no bigger than grown ups. Symptoms of these), lay thousands of eggs in the intestinal tract. And a few of the invisible eggs are inadvertently swallowed, and thousands more eggs are laid.

The price of getting rid of pinworms is like the price of liberty. It requires constant vigilance. Pinworm infestation probably ranks second only to the common cold in frequency.

Eating salt wont help at all. Drug store remedies may work sometimes, but frequently they miss a worm or egg or two.

The surest remedies are the newest prescription drugs. But after you're rid of the pests, care, patience and vigilance are necessary to stay rid of them. For my best advice on how to get rid of them, get a copy of my booklet, "The Commonest Pest . . . Pinworms." For a copy send 25 cents in coin and a self-addressed envelope to Dr. Molner in care of this newspaper. Box 158, Franklin Square, N.Y.

Greek-Cypriots Stop Fire On Canadians When Told Vehicle Belonged to U.N.

By GERARD ALARIE

NICOSIA, Cyprus (CP)— The group, under command of Greek Cypriots hit a Canadian armored car with rifle fire Sunday but stopped firing when they were advised by radio that the vehicle carried United Nations troops.

There were no casualties among the seven Canadians in the car under command of Sgt. Yvon Richard of Quebec City

The shooting took place as Canadian patrols moved into Turkish - Cypriot villages on the southern flank of the Kyrenia mountains near the Kyrenia Pass.

The villages now are threatened by Greek-Cypriot forces who captured a Turkish advance post Saturday. Hundreds of Turkish families fled from the villages as a result of the Greek advance.

Lt.-Col. Andrew Woodcock, commander of the 1st Battalion of the Royal 22nd Regiment, major unit of the Canadian force on Cyprus, said the Canadians had not properly identified their armored car.

The Greek-Cypriots stopped firing as soon as they were told by radio that the vehicle was Canadian, Woodcock said.

AWARE OF DANGER

"We were aware of the danger in which we exposed ourselves in effecting these patrols and that was why we used armored cars," he said.

The Greek-Cypriots already were directing their fire on to four of the villages from their positions atop a mountain west of the Kyrenia Pass.

"The aim of our patrols," Col. Woodcock said, "was to try to convince the villagers to stay home, promising them our protection from eventual attacks by Greek-Cypriots."

Meanwhile, east of Kyrenia Pass Turks and Greeks only a few hundred yards apart continued firing at one another on two mountains nicknamed Gin and Tonic.

"The same situation is developing there as west of the pass," the Canadian commander said.

The Greek-Cypriots captured the mountain top west of the Kyrenia Pass during a battle which began early Saturday. Shortly before the capture, Capt. Danny Kay, the Royal 22nd's intelligence officer, went to the scene and called for a unit ambulance to carry away the body of a Cypriot casualty.

SENDS MESSAGE

Maj. Patrick Tremblay of Chicoutimi, Que., a Royal 22nd company commander, sent three peoploads of men up the mountain.

Maj. Tremblay said four observation posts were being maintained continually west of the Kyrenia Pass.

There was a heavy exchange of rifle, machine-gun and mortar fire through most of Sunday.

The Canadian company commander said his troops were in no immediate danger in their observation posts. "They are not directly between the two emplacements and are not directly threatened," he said.

"If they do become threatened, then we'll have to decide what to do," Maj. Tremblay added.

VISITS CASTLE

Col. Woodcock visited historic St. Hilarion Castle Saturday to offer medical aid to beleaguered Turkish-Cypriots defending the medieval fortress. Capt. Kay accompanied him.

Meanwhile, Canadian troops of the United Nations force continued patrols by Jeep and helicopter in the region of the strategic Kyrenia Pass.

Capt. Pierre Ferland of Joliette, Que., reported seeing mortar fire during a helicopter patrol near the villages of Dhikomo and Bellapais in northern Cyprus.

Sgt. Jean-Castiste Otis and Sgt. Elzeon mian helicopter patrols which landed respectively on the summit of Gin—nicknamed for a hill occupied by Greek - Cypriots—and Tranquil an adjacent hill occupied by Turkish-Cypriots.

Capt. Ferland said fighting ceased in this area as soon as his men displayed the UN flag.

GREEKS FATHER

In a brief, open air press conference, Col. Woodcock told reporters the Greek-Cypriots were concentrating munitions and men west of St. Hilarion Castle. He did not say the preparations were for an attack on the Turkish-Cypriot stronghold.

He said the Greek-Cypriots have occupied a mountain peak just west of the castle, but the vantage point is outside the range of small-arms fire.

The Canadians will try to prevent any further advance by either side through persuasion. Col. Woodcock said, but if either side decides to advance the UN force cannot contain them or push them back by force of arms.

The Canadians were hopeful of stabilizing Greek- and Turkish-Cypriot positions on the west side of the Kyrenia Pass as they appeared to have done on the east side.

However, Col. Woodcock said, the can only carry out patrols and invite the combatants in person - to - person conversations to lay down their arms."

Bridge Club To Close Year With Banquet

The Belleville Bridge Club has concluded another successful year and will enjoy a social hour with their wives on Wednesday evening at the Curling Club to repay them for the hours of sleep lost and the delicious lunches that they served to the members during the playing season. There will be a banquet after which the president will distribute the prizes won during the year after which a few tables of bridge will be played with the prizes going to the women present.

The treasurer reports there are not sufficient funds in the kitty to carry the banquet to a successful conclusion and a small surcharge will be made on the members for this event. It is hoped that all the members will keep Wednesday night open and there will be a full attendance.

All of the games in the schedule have now been played and standing of every team will be given at the dinner.

Chances Good For Accepting Banking Report

By DON HANRIGHT

OTTAWA (CP)—What are the chances of the Liberal government accepting the main recommendations of the Conservative - appointed royal commission on banking and finance?

Good, it is generally believed here. The commission itself was understood to be confident that its ideas will prove to be politically palatable—more so in today's financial atmosphere, perhaps, than a decade ago.

The linchpin of the big, ambitious report is the proposal for scrapping the six-per-cent ceiling that Parliament has so long imposed on the lending rate of the eight chartered banks and the two Quebec savings banks.

Warming up for War With Country's Wiliest Bird

By GORDON GRANT

TORONTO (CP) — The first shot will soon be heard in the annual war of wits between hunters and Canada's wiliest bird—the crow.

And with each year the war becomes more intense. The crow is increasing in numbers and nuisance factor, and farmers are going out in growing numbers to pit their skills against the "black plague," a bird considered by ornithologists to have the greatest brain development.

One of Canada's foremost crow hunters, Fred Lister, president of Hawthorn Press, says:

"I have always gone after crows but in the last few years more of the shooting fraternity have taken up the sport.

"Crows are a sporting target as they weave their way through the trees. They're smart, too. Once you have called them into a blind, that spot is finished. No matter how well you call, they won't return. They seem to know where there is danger."

Crow hunters generally use shotguns but some experts go after their quarry with .22 rifles.

OUTFIT UNDER $20

Standard hunting equipment is a gun, camouflage similar to that used in jungle fighting and coloring for hands and face. A complete outfit for the novice may be bought for less than $20. Experts spend considerably more.

A must for the amateur is a crow caller. A good one can be purchased for as little as $20. "I don't use a caller. I make my own calls," Lister says, "but for those who don't know how, records can be bought which teach the calls."

He has had as many as 50 crows respond to his calls from a blind at one time.

"Crows will not respond to a bad call, and they can spot a hunter whose hands and face are uncovered from about 100 yards."

Hunters obtain satisfaction from shooting crows, not only because of the sport, but because they are among the most destructive birds. They eat farmers' crops, kill game and song birds and generally make a nuisance of themselves. One estimate is that they kill more ducks in Canada in a year than all hunters in 20.

BEST IN SPRING

The best time to hunt crows, at least in southern Ontario, is May 24 to the middle of July. Crows don't respond in numbers to calls before May 24 because they're guarding their nests and caring for the young.

One annoyance for experts is the inexperienced hunters who use distress calls in an effort to attract crows. They don't get any results and only spoil that particular area for others.

Lister, who has bagged as many as 250 crows in two days, says they can provide a bonus for frustrated fishermen.

Garden Notes

Plants Depend on the Soil

By FLORA M. SAVILLE

Any day now you will be digging up your garden soil, breaking it up and placing in its tender care seeds for vegetables and flowers. You will buy seedlings in fats, tubers, bulbs, corms, and roots. These too you will commit to the soil. Each and every one of these new plants as well as the plants you now have depend on the soil. In it their roots are firmly anchored and from it they will draw sustenance.

How good is your soil? What kind of soil do you have in your garden? Is it clay that packs hard unless dug at the just right time, or is it sand? Perhaps it is made up of friable particles that will pack together when you take up a handful but will break apart readily too. This kind will hold moisture and nourishment and yet will allow air to carry the necessary nitrogen down to the roots. Every particle should have a film of moisture around it and hold the moisture in suspension for the use of the plant roots and for the action of soil bacteria, which is also necessary for plant growth.

Clay, unless it is dug at the right time, bakes hard and excludes moisture and air. This causes partial starvation of the plants. Sand, while it warms up early, does not hold water or nutrients very long. Moisture draining away quickly takes with it the soil nutrients. This is called leaching.

When humus is added it is as if you chopped up a quantity of sponges, and mixed them with your soil. In clay the humus keeps the soil from baking hard. Humus will soak up moisture storing it with the nutrients. It will lighten the soil and improve its texture.

Humus added to sandy soil will hold the moisture and nutrients in suspension that have been available to plant roots as needed.

All soils will be improved by adding humus. Stable manure is one of the best sources but this is not easily obtained. You can buy peat moss, sawdust, (since it will it is one year old), ground corncobs, leaf mold or buckwheat hulls, or you can make your own compost.

When soil is dry enough to dig spread the humus on top of the soil and to this broadcast balanced chemical fertilizer is necessary. Use this according to manufacturers recommendations. Work up the soil, breaking up lumps, and raking smooth before planting the seed. You can use fertilizers in shallow drills beside the plant rows but broadcasting it will build up the whole area. Follow with two applications of fertilizer to row as the plants grow, or feed with liquid fertiliser at three to four week intervals.

Soil kits for testing your soil are valuable in determining the state of your soil and this will tell you what is needed to get the best results for the crops you wish to grow. This included flowers as well as vegetable crops.

There are several kinds of organic fertilizers that you will find valuable in giving your plants a boost. These are bone meal, blood meal, bone and blood meal and dried sheep manure.

If you have access to poultry manure use it with caution. It is high in nitrogen and often contains mites and weed seeds. Both of these pests will cause you grief.

Your Car

Regular Basic Care Can Work Magic

By EUGENE B. HELMOR

Many trouble symptoms disappear when you apply the same simple treatment that would have prevented them in the first place.

Valve or bearing noise, high temperatures and low oil pressures often develop because the engine is running without sufficient oil.

Transmission slip, rough shifting, high gas consumption and power loss can occur if the automatic transmission fluid level is allowed to drop too low.

Hard starting, stalling, missing, no pep and poor gas mileage are likely results when the carburetor air cleaner is not serviced and becomes clogged with dirt and grit.

Stalling and missing can also be due to water in the gas caused by condensation which takes place when too little gas is kept in the tank.

Overheating, high oil and gas consumption, hard starting, loss of power — are the usual troubles when the manifold heat control valve sticks because lubrication has been overlooked.

C. J. writes: "You say scorching is usually due to a loose or tight fan belt. I put two new belts on before I discovered the pulley shaft was to blame."

Sorry we didn't mention that screech can also be caused by a fan pulley shaft in need of lubricant.

"From B. G.: "Can you help us? For two years, I've been trying to discover what is causing a rattling, metallic noise from the rear underside of my '39 sedan. I've asked many people about this, without success."

Have you ever asked a mechanic to check this? Loose shocks or springs are very often to blame for this type noise.

P. H. writes: "Here's a mystery. Oil is leaking into my cooling system somehow because there's an obvious oil slick in the radiator water. Yet the car uses very little oil indeed."

There is a possibility that this is due to anti-freeze. Some types contain soluble oil rust inhibitors.

H. V. asks: "I just bought two new tube-type tires and notice each has a red dot on the side. Is this some sort of code?"

It's a balance mark — indicating the tire should be mounted with this red dot next to the valve.

Hermit Rejects All Efforts To Remove Him From Home

By JACK MORRIS

STIRLING

Horticultural Society Plans Festival

STIRLING — Mr. and Mrs. J. B. Belshaw, Front Street entertained the Horticultural Society for their April meeting with an attendance of 17. Mrs. Floyd Armstrong arranged the program and presided over the business.

Mrs. Ray Rose and Mrs. Harry Wells gave their reports. The correspondence included thank you letters from the various churches for potted Easter lilies, received for their Easter church services. Some of the correspondents told of sending their lily to a shut-in at the close of the Easter service. The secretary reported that several cards had been forwarded to those ill and bereaved. A new magazine was displayed and can be ordered by any one who chooses to do so.

A special department letter gave various ideas and suggestions to "Make Canada Lovelier" for the 1967 centennial. Each individual home owner should clean up old buildings, bush, dead trees and paint up their surroundings.

FESTIVAL OF FLOWERS

Two new Horticultural societies have been recently organized in Ontario. The programs for the "Festival of Flowers" to be held in the United Church on June 11th afternoon and evening were distributed to the members and the presidents commented on the prize list for juvenile, trio, other flowers and specials. The exhibits for these four groups are open to all 1964 members of the society and their families.

The Junior section is open to all public school children. The special prize is Eatons of Canada rosebowl valued at $10 and awarded to the leading exhibition with the highest number of points in the flower section.

Refreshments will be served in the afternoon and in the evening a film will be shown. Committees were appointed for various duties.

Mr. J. B. Belshaw gave a report of the maple trees and where they had been planted in the village. Two public school children are providing posters for the flower show. Mrs. Frank Harding was appointed to supervise the children's gardens for this season.

Some discussion took place regarding the annual bus trip in May. There will be further particulars later.

The past Noble Grands of Laurel Rebekah Lodge No. 211 will entertain the Society on Monday evening May 4th at the lodge hall and they will provide refreshments. A book will be purchased and donated to the village public library.

The program consisted of three items of interest. Mrs. Percy Mackfallen gave a descriptive account of how to plant a tree. The presidents outlined various items of work that should be completed in April. Mrs. M. Warner read an interesting account of the Selby plant better known as the Princess Theatre. The table prizes were awarded to Lawrence Munro and Mrs. P. Brunet.

Refreshments were served by Mrs. Kenneth Ray and her committee with the hostess assisting.

ANTIQUE COLLECTION

A social hour was enjoyed when Mr. Belshaw showed his large collection of antiques which he prizes very highly. The love seat and other furniture was all hand carved in historic designs. There were many pioneer articles of glass, china, and crockery. A large array of small articles used in the days of long ago included saws, rewiring wooden spoons, some of which were between 125 and 150 years old. There were also family pictures, a directory, a large Bible and many other interesting articles all most attractively displayed in a special room. Those in attendance were thrilled with the opportunity to view this private antique collection.

The vote of thanks for hospitality, program and lunch was tendered by Mrs. Percy MacMullen.

BIRTHDAY GIFT

ROME (AP) — The Italian Communist party's gift to So- [illegible] Khrushchev on [illegible] ...s a gold badge bearing the Communist International.

VANCOUVER (CP) — Lawrence Michael McNamara, 51, is a proud hermit, alone in the crush of a city.

He refuses to apply for welfare and rejects all efforts to budget him from his home in the rubble of a first-storey, bust-tangled lot in Vancouver's east end.

He lives in a hole in the ground topped with broken concrete slabs, old boards and pieces of tin strategically stuffed with rags to keep out some of the cold and perhaps a bit of the rain.

"This is my home," he insists. "I'm going to stay right here."

Larry McNamara has been arrested seven times in 16 months on vagrancy charges. He has been sent to jail three times—once for three months in Oakalla prison farm—and authorities didn't want him to spend another cold winter in his hole.

He has been ordered repeatedly to stay away from the lot. But each time he returned, quietly brewing strong tea in a flame-blackened can, or just chewing on a mouldy piece of bread smeared with margarine.

NO INCOME

"For my income I could get welfare," says McNamara, pained at the thought of it.

"I don't have a pension. Blue eyes twinkle from beneath heavy grey eyebrows. He speaks in a faltered voice, his boat-shaped shoot. His hand constantly tugs against a worn, dirty handkerchief.

"I haven't got anything against welfare," he says when the question was pursued. "Can't you talk about anything else?

"No, it hasn't got to that income, except maybe when I run a few errands. But I get along."

McNamara has been on the empty city-owned lot near a string of factories for more than 10 years—he don't remember exactly how long."

His right to be a hermit and to be left alone has been upheld by, among others, two city magistrates and two members of the British Columbia legislature.

Born in 1908 in the Quebec village of Masson of a family of 12, McNamara headed west at the age of 20. He stooked wheat on the Prairies, logged and labored in British Columbia and dug for gold he never found in the Yukon.

His last job ended about 10 years ago when he was laid off as a construction worker. He could not find another.

"I drifted down here because I was out of money. When a fellow hasn't got too much money to throw around he does the best he can."

REFUSED HELP

He used the materials at hand to make his shelter—chunks of broken pavement, bits of rotten board and pieces of rusted tin. His bed he made of matted rags, cardboard and two riddled blankets.

"I was broke and that was that. I got my grub at Harbor Light (Salvation Army home for destitute men) and I still do now."

An angry glance is McNamara's answer to questions on why he did not seek help from relatives or friends, or why he did not accept offers from those who knew him only through newspaper reports.

He refuses to call ("It wasn't for me") and he doesn't really consider himself eccentric.

He recalls with a smile the words of Magistrate Les Bewley last January when he distributed a clothing voucher:

"If a man wants to withdraw from society it is his right to do so. People have a right to live where they want as long as they don't break the law."

Asked anything bothers Larry McNamara, it might be the thought of becoming very old.

"I don't think I'd like to live this way all my life. Maybe I'll win some day I'll buy a few tickets on the Irish (sweepstakes) and win a bundle."

What would he do with a "bundle?"

"Oh, I'd move into a hotel—maybe even buy a house if I had enough.

"The rest? Well, I'd buy a case of whisky."

WOULD TRADE PAPERS

BERLIN (Reuters) — East German Communist Leader Walter Ulbricht says his government is prepared to exchange newspapers with West Germany. He said Saturday that he is prepared to allow two West German newspapers to be sold in East Germany if the same number of copies of Neues Deutschland, the main East German Communist newspaper, were placed on sale in West Germany.

Scouting activities

10TH BELLEVILLE FATHER AND SON BANQUET

Holloway St. Sunday School was quite a buzzing beehive on Tuesday when the Cubs and Scouts of 10th Belleville came swarming in with their fathers for their annual Father and Son banquet. Following grace by Rev. C. W. Coleman, the singing of the Queen and toast to her Majesty some one hundred fathers, cubs, scouts, leaders and guests sat down to a sumptuous turkey dinner provided by the Ladies' Auxiliary. A toast to the fathers was proposed by Richard Hughes which was replied to by George Olsen.

Mr. Doug Thompson, president of the A.O.T.S. Club, was master of ceremonies for the evening and welcomed the gathering on behalf of the Club and the leaders. He introduced the head table which was as follows: Scout Dorey Taylor, Akela Rose Taylor, District Commissioner Bill Jarvis, Group Committee Chairman John Bird, guest speaker Mr. Art Duncan, Cub Master Gordon Lee and Scout Ted Lee. A vote of thanks was given to the ladies by Doug MacCormack.

Mr. Jarvah gave a brief talk to the boys on what cubbing and scouting meant to them both now and in their future lives. He also commented on the wonderful time the evening had been organized. Ted Wessels introduced the guest speaker. Mr. Duncan held the boys attention with his humorous and good-natured talk while he got across to them how honesty and fair play pays off. He also told the boys to stand up for the Red, White and Blue of our flag and keep the Red Ensign as Canada's flag as this is what our men fought and died for. Mr. John Bird thanked Mr. Duncan for his fine address which was enjoyed by everyone. Akela Rose Taylor was then called on for the presentation of stars and badges.

The first presentation was a very important and well earned one when Commissioner Jarvis presented Craig Andrus with his thirteenth and fourteenth badges. He also presented the following boys with their first eye: Dale Tuck, Michael Turner, Ronald Denike, Fred Archer, Billy Yearwood, Jim Cavers, Billy Barley, David Trumpour, Alan Robinson, Steven McCowell, Gerry Wallace and Trevor Hodges. Service Stars were then presented by Lloyd Wallace. 1st year: David Trumpour, John Wannamaker, Fred Archer, Ronnie Denike, Ricky Armstrong, and Steven Haig; 2nd year: John Olsen, Billy Fitzgibbon, John McDonald, Dennis Tuck, Larry Wessels, Fred Bird and Raymond Vickers.

The following boys received badges. Guide — Fred Bird by Akela; Toymaker — Raymond Vickers by Bagheera (E. Tuck); Artist, — David Trumpour by Rev. C. W. Coleman; Cyclist — Fred Bird, Billy Fitzgibbon by Bagheera E. Tuck; Cook — Larry Wessels, Ricky Armstrong, Dennis Tuck by Akela R. Taylor; Team Player — John McDonald, Jim Cavers by Mr. Hodges; Gardeners — Fred Bird, Billy Fitzgibbon by Mr. Hodges; Scoutmaster Gordon Lee then introduced a musical quartet from the Scout Troop, Richard Hughes, Bobby Longsberry and Billy Gordon.

Mickey Hitchcock accompanied by Mr. McLeod at the piano presented several enjoyable numbers. The evening was closed with prayer by Mr. Coleman and the singing of the Yeomen Song.

The 8th Belleville Cub and Scout Ladies' Auxiliary and Men's Group Committee held its monthly meeting on April 8 at Queen Mary School with 7 members present.

The meeting opened with Mrs. S. Smith asking everyone to join with her in repeating the Mother's Promise.

The president announced that the next meeting would be held at 32 Isabel St. in the form of a dessert party on May 13th.

The meeting closed with the Scouts Minpah followed by refreshments and coffee served by Mrs. M. Dowbyrnn.

2ND BELLEVILLE CUBS

The 2Oth Belleville Cubs and Scouts had a church parade on Sunday, April 12. The color party consisted of Scouts Paul Greatrix and Brian Cleary and Cubs Wayne Greatrix and Alan Peoples. Scoutmaster Norm Gerow and Akela Claude Hennessy marched with the boys from Union Hall to the Front Road United Church.

The boys were then dismissed to attend the church of their faith. Mr. Carrie Bradshaw and Mrs. Percy Dawson took the Roman Catholic boys to their own church for their Sunday worship. The Protestant boys attended the service at the Front Road United Church. Some of them boys assisted the minister of the church, Rev. R. Vesey, with the service. Cub Robert Avery read the Scripture lesson from Matthew 5 1-12. Scouts Ronald Pickell, Walter Pickell and Kenneth Monteith read a meditation. The offering was taken by Cubs Douglas Way and Arthur Monteith.

Mr. Vesey's sermon was centred around the life of Lord Baden-Powell, the founder of the Scout movement.

The minister closed the service in the usual manner.

39 Fatalities Across Canada During Weekend

By THE CANADIAN PRESS

Traffic accidents accounted for 34 of the 39 fatalities reported across Canada during the weekend.

Quebec led the list with 14 deaths, 13 on the highways and one drowning, according to a Canadian Press survey from 6 p.m. Friday to midnight Sunday local time.

Ontario was second with 10 deaths. Six persons died as a result of traffic accidents, two in falls, one was drowned and another was hit by a train.

Saskatchewan reported five deaths, all in traffic.

British Columbia and Nova Scotia each had three traffic fatalities, New Brunswick two and Newfoundland and Alberta one each.

Manitoba and Prince Edward Island reported none.

The survey does not include natural or industrial deaths, known suicides or murders.

The Ontario dead:

SUNDAY

Douglas Mott, 7, Streetsville, 15 miles west of Toronto, drowned in the family swimming pool.

Frederick Gaude, 29, Windsor, after he fell down a flight of stairs.

Arthur Evans, 15, Guelph, when struck by a train on a railway bridge at Brealaw, Ont.

TOURIST FIGURES

LONDON (AP) — More than 210,000 Britons will visit the U.S. during 1964 and spend more than $94,000,000, the U.S. travel service predicts. A spokesman said British visitors would be more than double the total who visited in 1963 and they would spend three times as much.

SHAPING the EARTH

A more extreme example in degeneration would be the huge TYRANNOSAURUS, THE GREATEST BEAST OF PREY EVER KNOWN, yet in time its tyrannies became practically useless.

Management Problems Keep Firms Small

By DON HANRIGHT

OTTAWA (CP) — Why do so many Canadian small businesses remain small?

Whatever the reason, it isn't because there is general shortage of financing facilities open to them, the royal commission on banking and finance has decided.

Their biggest problem was found to be management—not financial.

The institution dealing in long-term business loans accepted only 24 out of 1,100 applications for credit. It cited incompetent management as the prime reason for turning the others away.

The commission said that part of whatever problems does exist is the marked unwillingness of small-business proprietors to sell any share of their enterprise — and its potential profits—to those from whom they seek long-term, high-risk funds.

CITES AREA

Main difficulty appeared to be in the area of small firms with assets in the $20,000 - $250,000 range with borrowing needs ranging from $10,000 to $100,000.

The commission regarded the situation as reflecting a need for management advice and guidance—not more money.

It found 440,000 small businesses in Canada — those with assets of less than $1,000,000.

Most of them were not incorporated, with assets of less than $100,000. They were mainly in retail trade, services or construction.

The commission made two other observations:

—The fact that big business is getting a bigger share of some areas, notably general and food stores, reflects underlying economic factors and basic consumer preferences as much or more than any difficulty in small-business financing.

—Moreover, the owners of many businesses have deliberately chosen not to expand, preferring the resulting independence and freedom from complex management problems.

EAGLE DIES

BERLIN (AP) — The American eagle named "Willy Brandt," presented to West Berlin by U.S. Attorney-General Robert F. Kennedy, has died of old age. Kennedy presented the eagle on a visit in 1962 and named it after the city's mayor because he said Brandt could be called the "eagle of Berlin."

Daily newspaper circulation figures—the figures you rely on for advertising decisions—are determined by independent ABC audit. That's your assurance that your advertising is reaching the audience you're paying for. Most other audience figures are based on sampling techniques, projections . . . educated guesses, at best. Considering the criticism that has been levelled at these techniques lately, it is hard to believe that anyone would seriously accept them as statistically and accurately sound.

The Audit Bureau of Circulations is a non-profit association of advertisers, advertising agencies and publishers established to maintain rigid standards for measuring circulation. They count noses. Actual newspaper sales. No projections. No guesswork. They audit a newspaper's books, check branch offices, delivery men and carrier boys. The figure they arrive at is an accurate count of the people who buy the paper regularly because they like to read it.

That's just as it should be. When you buy advertising, you're entitled to know the size of your audience. In daily newspapers, you're sure of an accurate . . . really accurate count. Ask for our current ABC report.

Ann Landers

Non-Smoker Explains Hold Cigarettes Have on People

DEAR ANN LANDERS — You wrote, and wisely, that smoking is neither sophisticated nor stylish. You said it can shorten lives, and that it is an expensive and a dirty habit. Why then, do so many people do it? The answer is simple.

A child can suck his thumb and drag around an old blanket. An adult who sucked his thumb and dragged around an old blanket would be led off to a room in a white coat.

So the adult does what is socially acceptable. He sticks a cigarette, or a cigar or a pipe in his mouth. These are pacifiers for adults. These babies don't mind fouling the air of your living room, or an office shared by non-smokers. They are not if they burn holes in their clothing or set fire to their mattresses and burn up the whole family. They are large infants who haven't grown up.

ANN LANDERS

Do you have the courage to print this? I'll wait and see. — UN-ENSLAVED.

DEAR UN-ENSLAVED — Your theory is not new and I don't agree that it takes any special courage to print it.

Of course the "Enslaved" will scream like eagles and shout "Freudian garbage" when they see this but the experts (many of them at any rate) say you are right.

DEAR ANN LANDERS — When you spoke here at the auditorium you said the basis for a successful marriage is communication. I was happy my husband was there to hear you because I've been trying to get that idea across for years but I never knew how.

I decided last night to write down everything he said from the minute he came home. Here is the full report:

6:10—"Any mail?"

6:25—"Tell the kids to get that darned dog to stop barking."

6:35—"Don't you know how to fix anything but meat loaf?"

6:50—"Pass the sugar."

7:10—"How come the newspaper is wet?"

7:45—"Change the channel. This is lousy."

10:30—"Walk the hound. I'm going to bed."

Now, Ann Landers, I ask you, is this communication? Thanks for your help. — BILLINGS, MONTANA.

DEAR BILLINGS — It's a start. At least the guy has vocal chords. You said nothing, however, about your responses to Blabber Mouth.

Did you try to engage him in conversation? This is where many wifes fail. They are uninformed and dull. Their idea of conversation is a Gestapo report on the kids or a rehash of the palaver heard across the back fence. Most husbands couldn't care less, so they retreat behind the newspaper or fall asleep in front of the Boob Tube.

* * *

DEAR ANN LANDERS — I am a 17-year-old girl who is crazy about a fellow I will call Todd. He takes me out about once every other week. I always get dressed up nice hoping we will go to a movie or a party, but it's always the same routine. He heads for the woods and we make out.

I invited him to three different parties at my school but he refused me every time. He has never invited me to a party at his school. I have suggested we double date and he always says, "Yeah, that would be great." Then he shows up alone.

I'm afraid Todd wants me for only one thing. I care a great deal about him so please tell me how to get him to treat me like an all-round girl. — THE DOG.

* * *

DEAR DOG — Once a girl is type-cast it's tough to win another role. Tell Todd not to call anymore unless he plans to take you somewhere besides the woods. If he never calls again take my word for it, Honey, you're lucky to be rid of him before you wind up in real trouble.

WEDDING

MULLIN — SWEET

Easter lilies were used to decorate St. Joseph's Church for the April wedding of Bonnie Lorraine Sweet, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Ross Sweet, Belleville to Adrian Michael Gerard Mullin, son of Mr. and Mrs. William Mullin of Belleville.

The bride who was given in marriage by her father looked charming in a gown with a scoop neckline, fitted bodice with long sleeves, full skirt and chapel train. The gown had touches of lace applique on the bodice and skirt. The double bouffant silk illusion veil was held with a tiara of seed pearls, and she carried a cascade of deep red roses.

Miss Sharon Sweet, sister of the bride was maid of honor, wearing a dress of yellow silk organza over taffeta with fitted bodice, full skirt and matching short lace jacket. She wore a matching silk illusion veil with a flower head dress. Bridesmaids, sisters of the bridegroom were Mrs. Joseph Lannigan of Toronto and Miss Virginia Weigand of Belleville. They were dressed alike in powder blue in the same style and wore flower head dress of honor with blue illusion veils and flower headdresses. They carried nosegays of white and powder blue tinted baby 'mums.

Miss Cathie Moore, cousin of the bride was flower girl wearing a dress of the same lines and color as the maid of honor, with matching flower headdress and veil. She carried a basket of yellow, white and blue tinted baby 'mums.

The bridegroom was attended by his brother, Dennis Mullin, and the ushers were Gerald Mullin, brother of the bridegroom, and James Graham, all of Belleville.

A buffet luncheon for 65 guests was held at the home of the bride's parents. The bride's table was appointed with a white linen cloth, a three-tiered wedding cake, flanked by yellow candles in crystal candelabra, and the bouquets of the bridal party.

The bride's mother received, wearing a silvered pink brocade sheath dress, with matching three-quarter coat, matching pink hat, black patent shoes and bag, white gloves and a corsage of deep pink roses.

She was assisted by the mother of the bridegroom, who wore a sheath dress of beige figured silk, matching three-quarter coat, dark brown accessories, and a corsage of Talisman roses.

For a wedding trip to Niagara Falls and Buffalo, the bride chose a two-piece ensemble of figured silk dress and matching deep pink linen coat. Her accessories were black patent shoes and bag, white hat and gloves, and a corsage of white 'mums.

Guests were present from Belleville, Midland, Madoc, Peterborough, Read and Toronto.

Mr. and Mrs. Mullin will reside in Belleville.

Showers honoring the bride before her marriage were given by Mrs. S. Hill at the bride's home; at the home of Mrs. Leslie Weigand of Belleville; at the home of Mrs. Arden Wannamaker of Glen Miller, where the bride's fellow workers of the business office of the Bell Telephone Company had a dinner and presented her with a white Acrilon rug and towels. A presentation of a linen tablecloth was made by the staff of the Bell Telephone business office.

Eighty Eight And Still Teaches Music

TORONTO (CP) — Eighty-eight years old and a music teacher for 45 of them, Mrs. Walter Murch has nearly 100 music festival gold medalists on her honor roll of students.

His reward from his teacher was a handful of chocolate potatoes (chocolate cookie balls covered with mint)—the same as she has been doling out to her pupils for years.

A graduate of the London Royal Academy, Mrs. Murch, a widow, is the daughter of a music-teaching tenor father.

T. B. C. 40-Voice Chorale To Present Sacred Concert

Winds Up As Marine Biologist

HALIFAX (CP) — Constance MacFarlane intended to specialize in English when she graduated from Charlottetown to enrol at Dalhousie University, but she wound up a marine biologist instead.

It came about when she found she needed two science courses for her BA degree. One was biology.

The result was that she became a marine biologist heading the seaweed research branch of the Nova Scotia Research Foundation.

She's surrounded by seaweed in her laboratory. It hangs from the walls, tiny bottles of it litter tables and counters, and it even fills a large soft-drink cooler and a refrigerator.

Part of her job is to collect samples throughout the year to determine the best season for harvesting and to detect any difference in quality of extracts during the different seasons.

Seaweed extracts and gums are used in more than 250 products ranging from baby foods to textiles. They are in medicines, hand creams, toothpaste and paper.

Involved in the program is diving for samples but Miss MacFarlane leaves this to students who accompany her on field trips.

"I don't dive myself and I must admit I feel greatly frustrated that I don't."

On Thursday evening the 40-voice Toronto Bible College Chorale, which is making a spring tour of Eastern Ontario cities will be heard at Victoria Avenue Baptist Church at 8.00 o'clock. The Rev. William H. Crump, director of Music at the college, assisted by Mrs. D. C. Percy, A.T.C.M., will present a wide and varied program of sacred music including well-loved hymnal spirituals, and special arrangements combining classical music and sacred songs.

The Chorale comes from the oldest Bible College in Canada, founded in 1894. It has had a wide acceptance in churches, radio and television, and is composed of a male quartet; a ladies' quartet and a male chorus. The young people pictured above are in training for Christian service both in the home ministry and foreign missionary service with graduates from 36 countries of the world. The Chorale is well known to many through its LP records.

Admission is free.

FASHIONS A LA CARTE

There is no set menu for this summer's wardrobe. We can choose what we like in our own price ranges, thanks to the Canadian ready-to-wear manufacturers who have developed the art of adaptation to a science. There once was a time when the new Paris fashions did not reach us for at least one season. More often, we had to wait two full seasons until they had permeated down to our level. But now, when a great designer brings out a striking new silhouette, it hits both New York and Canada about the same time. This manufacturers have representatives constantly on the Paris and New York scenes.

Big name designers still strive for a striking new silhouette and a new way to handle their unusual fabrics. This creates a diversity of line as well as of materials. In the end, it gives us a far wider choice of fashion than we previously had. We can now choose our fashions a la carte, to our tastes and income. The more variety in the Haute Couture, the better for all of us, as we ourselves differ in height, weight, taste, budget and our own individual requirements. The only point of agreement for all women generally, is that they want to be dressed fashionably.

THE CHOICE IS MULTIPLE

This season, a suit jacket can stop at the hipline, mid-thigh or three-quarters of the way down the skirt. Any one of these jackets is still fashion in the right sense of the word. A skirt can be straight as a pencil, slightly flared or it can float on deep or shallow pleats. Sleeves can be flared out like a cape, bracelet length or skinny and wrist length. Double-breasted closures on coats, vie with off-centre and traditional single-breasted button settings. The choice is multiple as long as the final selection is becoming.

A suit can become a costume by adding a blouse, either to match or in distinct contrast. The choice in millinery is always varied, but this spring and summer, the milliners have thought of everything from organs puffed turbans, Parisnet-veil loves, to off-the-face pirate hats in fine - stitched straws. Bretons are given a new look, by sharply upturned, rolled brims. A definite outline which is best in a finely woven straw. There are fabric hats to delight the traveller and the stay-at-home.

Shoes are varied, ranging from low-heeled, round-toed pumps or T-strap shoes to the more staple, spindle-heeled sandal.

The only thing to watch for in fashion a la carte, is too rich a mixture of too many colors, silhouettes and styles which do not blend. If this happens, then, of course, the results are a bad case of fashion indigestion!

SPEAKING of MANNERS

PATRICIA LEWIS

TOYS FOR THE SICK CHILD

Since most of the child population is currently laid low with the chicken pox or German measles, the toy industry must be doing a land-office business.

Our four children, alone, must have given the druggist an enormous shot in the arm during the past few months. Each came down with the chicken pox exactly two weeks apart, and the measles are catching up with us in the same order. Doting friends and relatives see nothing but spots in front of their eyes whenever they come to our house, which they do frequently —armed with a new present for whoever is ailing at the moment.

The youngsters, of course, are having a field day, and it seems that Christmas has never been turned off. That is, every thing's fine and the patient is rosy (half from the rash, and half from the glow of getting) until someone brings him a toy that just doesn't jibe with his ailment. It's meant to be played with on the floor, and how are you going to cope with a two-ton bulldozer when you're supposed to stay in bed?

Having become much older and wiser from just a few months' time, I can now offer, from some authority, suggestions on the types of toys to bring sick tots who are supposed to stay in bed with some degree of quietude.

I could kiss the kind friend who gave one of the youngsters a hand viewer and a set of slides that kept him three-dimensionally entertained for hours at a time. Another kindly person gave the five-year-old a finger puppet which satisfied her flair for the theatrical and which she could easily manipulate on a lap board without any fuss or strain.

SICK-ROOM STANDBY

Sewing activities are a sick-room standby, and the multi-colored laces could be used again and again to embellish dolls with clothes that clung were another welcome gift. Small cans and batalions of little soldiers that could be driven and marched across the counterpane were enthusiastically met. An active seven-year-old trying manfully not to itch.

Gifts that had to be banished from the sick-rooms were those that had in many parts it was impossible to play with them in bed. Intricate building sets had to be put away for the time being, since pieces kept falling on the floor. Mother was run ragged picking up beans and her morale was sagging as much as the prefabricated floors. Craft sets were fine for the eleven-year-old, but shells and beans and beads and feathers made frustrating mealtime fare for tots.

So, when you visit ailing children and want to give them a gift, keep in mind the small area they have to work in and the fact that your gift should be something that encourages them to stay put. It's a courtesy both to the child and to the mother when the toy is geared to the age and interest of the patient as well as his temporarily confined lot in life.

"It was a wonderful dinner and I think someone should tell you so!"

First-Rate Hamburg Dishes

by Mary Moore

Today I am giving you two recipes which I predict will be popular: a beef pie with a lovely biscuit topping and Swedish Meat Balls. In addition, on Wednesday there will be another for Cabbage Rolls. So get out the scissors, clip these and file them in your hamburg folder.

MONDAY

Dinner Menu

Fricasseed Shoulder Lamb Chops; Cauliflower; Buttered Diced Squash; Marinated Cucumber Slices, Green Pepper Strips and Tomato Wedges; Peach Upside Down Cake; Coffee.

TOPNOTCH BEEF PIE:

1 cup chopped onion, 2 outer stalks celery, 2 tablespoons butter, 1¼ lbs. ground beef (hamburg), 1 teaspoon salt, 1 tablespoon Worcestershire sauce, one 12-oz. package frozen peas, 1 can (14 oz.) kernel corn, drained, 1 can (10 oz. condensed tomato soup.

In large frying pan sauté onions and celery in butter until transparent but not brown. Add meat and cook until brown; add remaining ingredients. Mix together and heat through. Keep warm while making Biscuit Topping: One cup sifted all-purpose flour, 1½ teaspoons baking powder, ½ teaspoon celery salt, 3 tablespoons shortening, 1 egg beaten, ½ cup milk. Mix and sift flour, baking powder and celery salt. Cut in shortening until mixture is size of small peas. Make a well, add egg and milk, and mix quickly to make a soft dough. Toss on a lightly-floured board, quickly form into a ball and knead 4 or 5 times by pressing and folding dough. Roll out to about ¾ inch thickness. With floured cutter cut into 2½" biscuits. Pour meat mixture into an 11-cup casserole (8½ x 10½ x 2") and top with biscuits. Bake at 425 deg. F. for 25 minutes. Makes 6 servings.

SWEDISH MEAT BALLS (may be mixed the night before):

Meat Mixture: 1 lb. finely ground hamburg (or chuck beef), 2 slices white bread, ¼ cup milk, 1 small onion, grated, 1 egg, 1 tablespoon parsely flakes, ¼ teaspoon cloves, ¼ teaspoon allspice, ¼ cup margarine or butter.

Sauce: 2 tablespoons flour, 1 can consomme, undiluted, ¼ cup water, ½ to ½ teaspoon soy sauce, ½ teaspoon Worcestershire sauce, ½ teaspoon salt, ⅛ teaspoon pepper.

In a big bowl soak the bread in the milk while you measure and add all remaining meat mixture ingredients except margarine. Mix well by hand and shape into tiny ¾" balls. Sauté in margarine (or butter) on all sides until golden brown. Remove from pan. Make Sauce: To margarine in pan add flour, stir and add remaining ingredients, stirring until thick. Add browned meat balls. (Note: If you are making these in advance cool, cover and chill in refrigerator at this stage.) Heat through and simmer for 10 minutes just before serving.

Dutch Girl Soloist in Ballet Co.

MONTREAL (CP) — Martina Van Hamel, daughter of the Dutch consul-general in Toronto, is the youngest soloist with the National Ballet Company.

The brown - eyed 18-year-old was among the first pupils to join the National Ballet School when it opened five years ago in Toronto and upon graduation became the first to join the National Ballet Company as a soloist.

Her story may sound like "instant success," but 16 years of study preceded her debut and she still practises daily with the company.

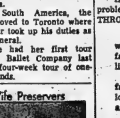
"Some day I hope I am a great, well - known ballerina," she said in Montreal where the company had a five-day booking at Place des Arts.

Martine speaks fluent English, French and manages very well in Spanish as well as her native language.

Her ballet training spanned four continents as her father was moved around.

BEGAN AT FOUR

She was born in Brussels and moved to Denmark where her ballet training began at the age of four.



From there her family moved to Indonesia where the dance, mostly hand movements, "was rather static compared to ballet."

They returned to The Hague for a short time then moved to Venezuela.

From South America, the family moved to Toronto where her father took up his duties as consul-general.

Martine had her first tour with the Ballet Company last year—a four-week tour of one-night stands.

The April meeting of the Belleville Y's Menettes was held Tuesday evening at the YMCA.

The members decided to hold a rummage sale at the Y building on May 22, this will be the last sale in the old building and it is hoped everything comes down, as summer articles will be for sale.

Discussion was held on the mother and daughter banquet, May 1st, when the speaker of the evening will be Major Homewood of The Salvation Army.

A report on the Golden Book for Charity project was given by Mrs. Doris Pearson.

The hostess was then turned over to the election of new officers, who were acclaimed as follows:

President, Hazel Watson; vice-president and projects, Elsie Hiscutt; secretary and bulletin editor, Nel Lockyer; treasurer, Helen Diamantides.

The hostesses for the evening, Mrs. JoAnne Wadley and Mrs. Jill Boehm, served lunch and the meeting adjourned.

Successful Living

Niece Willing to Care For Failing, Aged Aunt

DEAR DORIS — I have a dear aunt; she is more like a mother to me. Three years ago she had a stroke that paralyzed her right side and she lost her speech. She is now in a nursing home.

I love her very dearly and would look after her myself. At the time she took sick I was very ill, or she would never have been sent there. I want to know if I can bring her home, since her time is short in this world; she is not happy where she is. This place is not of her faith. — HEART BROKEN.

DEAR HEART BROKEN — If you are the closest relative, you have a case. Seek a private consultation with your family doctor. There will be ways of determining her wishes, with or without her being able to speak. DORIS CLARK

It is highly probable that her present nurses are just as anxious that she be happily settled as you are.

DEAR DORIS — My two children and I are staying with my parents for a while as my husband got into trouble and is serving time.

Before moving here we lived near my husband's family and they really made a fuss over our two children. My husband too spoiled them, and I was the one who tried to discipline them. Am afraid we often disagreed over how to raise them and often in front of them.

We have just come back from a two weeks' visit with his folks and the little girl is making quite a fuss, whining and also complaining of a stomach-ache. She sleeps good, eats and plays but the minute she comes in, she whines. I think she just wants attention, and I do spread my attention between the two of them equally.

If you can give me some advice on how to handle this problem I would certainly appreciate it. — MUDDLING THROUGH.

DEAR MUDDLING — Your suspicions are right. She wants attention; and it's understandable. She misses her father; and her grandparents have reminded her of what it is like to be fussed over.

Too much attention is not good. She needs control and fair discipline. But if she is missing what she identifies as love, some extra affection from you is going to be needed for a while. Play with her, laugh with her, like a companion.

She needs to be challenged to constructive activities. Resorting to illness for attention won't make for happiness.

Confidential to PLEASE ANSWER ME — No. A kiss is not an appropriate "thank-you" to a casual male acquaintance for a favor done, especially if the girl is taking the initiative. I'm sorry, but I cannot answer your other question in the column.

(Doris is a graduate social worker. Let her give you a new slant on your dilemma. Enclose a five-cent-stamped, self-addressed envelope for private reply.)

The Experts Say
Handicrafts Industry Holds Rich Prospects

By JEAN SHARP

TORONTO (CP)—A merchant with a sharp eye out for Made in Canada labels believes a thriving cottage industry in handicrafts is one of Canada's untapped native resources.

Margaret MacLean, owner of a Canadian crafts shop in midtown Toronto, says she has not had to go on a buying trip since she opened the shop a year ago.

"I've been deluged by letters and samples, by people coming in off the street to sell me things.

"A cottage industry is just sitting there waiting for someone to do something about it. It is part of Canada's unexploited wealth."

The work she sees ranges from knitting to carpentry and highly skilled pottery and sculpture. The craftsmen tell her they don't know where to turn to try to sell their work.

Potential purchasers often express surprise at the variety and quality of craft works available.

CANADIANS LACK INTEREST

"Customers say they didn't know pottery was made in Canada," Mrs. MacLean says. "Or they think if it isn't Indian or Eskimo work it must be made in Quebec.

"To some, it seems quite a new idea that there is anything produced here at all."

Mrs. MacLean says the majority of her customers are new Canadians or visitors who want to take home something from Canada.

"They aren't Canadians buying Canadian things to put in their houses here. Is this part of the general downgrading of Canadians by Canadians?"

The relatively higher price of home-made hand-crafted work probably helps explain why there is little Canadian handicraft work for sale in established outlets in tourist centres.

"There is an awful price difference between the quality we can produce and the stuff that's made in Japan. As long as the price situation exists what can we do?"

NO MOUNTIE DOLLS

Mrs. MacLean is interested in mass - produced Canadiana as well as hand-made works but finds a vacuum there.

"There isn't a good Canadian Mountie souvenir. It just doesn't exist. When I ask the manufacturers why, everybody just looks helpless and tells me they don't know why."

She has found a manufacturer who makes cheerfully realistic plush bears, beavers and bison.

Any work made in another country is supposed to be identified as such, but there are only a few positive identifiers of authentic Canadiana.

Eskimo or Indian work carries a government label or the label of the co-operative through which it is sold.

Weaving is usually labelled as Canadian made. If a sterling silver item is completely made in Canada it carries a Canadian hallmark.

Outside these categories, authenticity is not easy to osterm-line unless the artist or his guild has marked an item.

"I have a terrible time getting artists to put their names and 'Made in Ontario' or something on their work," says Mrs. MacLean.

U.C.W. Meeting
STONE CHURCH

The April meeting of Stone Church U.C.W. was held at the home of Mrs. Everett Phillips, College Street, Belleville, with a good attendance. The president, Mrs. E. Demorest, after welcoming all and thanking Mrs. Phillips for being hostess for this meeting, chose as her theme "Family Life." She gave a most interesting talk, leaving many fine thoughts with her listeners, on the foundation of forming a Christian home, which is the oldest institution in the world, a home where God is head, with morning devotion and the prayer circle and is recognized as such, thus forming a happy home for both parents and children.

Mrs. G. Evans read the minutes, reminding all that the supply for Deer Lake asked for blankets and soap. Christmas gifts and clothing are needed for mothers and children from one year to 15 years of age.

This was followed by the appointed Bible study for the year with Mrs. Gray, Mrs. Versilyea and Mrs. Benedict taking part. Men are hungry for the word of life, qoa with a message always commands an audience. Mrs. Chisholm and Mrs. Moore brought the message of Jesus teaching in the synagogue. Mrs. Cooper led the discussion with each present taking a part.

During the social half hour refreshments were served by the hostess, Mrs. Phillips, assisted by Mrs. M. Bendiet and Mrs. C. Vermilyea.

New Pension Plan Contains Best Features of 2 Programs Dr. Jewett Tells Liberals

Team Welcomed Home by Big Street Parade

PICTON (Staff) — Picton had a parade on Sunday afternoon.

This was not the usual run of parades that has had everything arranged weeks in advance. This was very impromptu, and was arranged in a matter of hours.

It all started when the Picton team was the Ontario Hockey Association Intermediate "B" Championship at Lucan on Saturday night.

Dr. Lionel Dockrill received a call from Lucan, advising him that the trophy was coming to Picton, (the first time any such trophy has ever been won by a Picton team). That was all the Doctor needed. Starting at a very early hour, he started making phone calls. The first thing he needed was a lot of convertibles to carry the members of the team in the parade. He found ten.

Then he needed a lot of help in getting the rest of the things under control. He called Dr. Leroy Hall, president of Kiwanis, and "operation parade" was put into action.

Mayor H. J. McFarland arranged a coffee hour at the Royal Hotel, where he tendered a semi-official welcome to the players and staff and fans.

But back to the parade. The Provincial Police, under Cpl. Charles Fletcher, co-operated and traffic was handled at the intersection of Highway 33 and the Scenic Road, where the returning players were met. The parade started and gathering momentum, paraded the streets of Picton, where a crowd estimated at about 8,000 people gave them resounding cheers as the mile long cavalcade toured several downtown streets before stopping at the Royal Hotel.

Mayor McFarland welcomed the players on behalf of the town, praising the great job they had all done.

Manager Walter Fraser, playing coach Davy Jones, Captain Lionel Solly and Keith Macdonald all spoke briefly on behalf of the team.

The entire team were visibly pleased with the huge reception accorded them by their fans, and all the people who came to see the parade.

Liberal Lashes Out at Policy Of Patronage

PICTON (Special) — Lashing out at the policy of patronage Saturday night was Lloyd Woolsey, defeated Liberal candidate in the riding of Prince Edward-Lennox in the last federal election.

Mr. Woolsey was among the head table guests at the annual buffet supper sponsored by the Prince Edward Liberal Club. In recent weeks, Mr. Woolsey's name has been linked with several local developments, some of which have resulted in clashes with Douglas Alkenbrack MP for the riding. He was hoping to make "a little" election.

Mr. Woolsey said he disagrees with the practice of political patronage, and stated this is what hinders good government in Canada. He strongly denied being "patronage official" for this area because the party under which he campaigned is in power.

He said politics affects all our lives and all should take an interest in it. He prefers to be called "Liberal consultant" in that he will watch closely developments in this riding, and the actions of the present member of parliament. "Wherever it is felt the moves of the member of parliament are not right, or a waste of money is involved, then I'll step in and action will be taken," he said.

As an example he gave the proposed development of Soup Harbor, "a forsaken windswept bay," he termed it. Other sites where harbors were already established but need development, and were suitable, were overlooked. (Strong representation by local residents has resulted in the possibility of this development being re-located.) "These are the type of cases where I will step in to see the country gets value for its money," he said.

Mr. Woolsey's efforts were lauded by Dr. Pauline Jewett, guest speaker for the evening, who said she heard more about Mr. Woolsey in the House of Commons then she does about Mr. Alkenbrack.

Railway officials said they used radio-telephone to notify Engineer Woods of the diesel moving on a collision course with his train, which was travelling 45 to 50 miles an hour.

Officials said just moments after Mr. Woods hung up, the light of the train picked up the oncoming diesel. Mr. Woods shouted at Mr. Manthieu and Mr. Carney to jump, pulled the emergency brake and jumped himself.

The train's lead diesel burst into flames on impact and about 300 yards of track were ripped up.

Railway officials said two men had been seen in the vicinity of the Foleyet yards shortly before the diesel locomotive had been left standing with its engine running.

Toronto-Born Beverley Baxter Dies in England

By ALAN HARVEY

LONDON (CP) — Death has brought to Fleet Street by a one-time piano salesman named Arthur Beverley Baxter.

"Bax," as newspaper men called him, died just before midnight Sunday night at his home in Haslemere, Surrey, near London. He was 72.

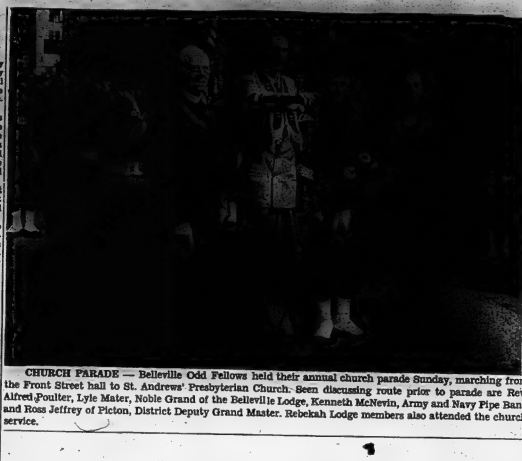
Created a knight in 1954, an honor he cherished above all else, Sir Beverley came to London after serving with the Royal Canadian Engineers during the First World War. He joined The Daily Express in 1920 and quickly rose to fame on newspaper row as the protege of his fellow Canadian, Lord Beaverbrook.

All through a career freely splashed with printer's ink and brightened by the company of famous names in British politics, Baxter remained close to Beaverbrook, becoming editor of The Sunday Express and then editor-in-chief of The Daily Express.

He left the Beaverbrook papers in 1933 but came back to write theatre reviews. At a luncheon in May, 1963, Lord Beaverbrook told a reporter that Baxter—just out of earshot at the time—had brought the "Toronto touch" to the Beaverbrook papers.

ELECTED IN 1935

Sir Beverley was elected to Parliament in 1935 to represent the London constituency of Wood Green, later moving to Southgate, also in London. He did not plan to stand for re-election, having been in failing health for a year or so.



He was born in Toronto in 1891. His name Beverley came from the street of that name in his native city. He became well known to Canadians through his column in Maclean's Magazine, a chatty, controversial "London Letter" that also appeared in Indian, Australian and Pakistani papers.

Selected to Lead Research Expeditions

R. 'RED' HERRING

Responsible for the study of fish life and habits in Canadian waters, Mr. Herring commented on his promotion as Chief of Research: "Our expeditions take teams the length and breadth of Canada. There's no doubt that Canadian Nationals is best for our needs. The low fares we enjoy with CN's Group Travel Plans are a whale of a bargain. Teams of between 10 and 22 persons can save as much as 20% with CN's Party Fares . . . over and above the big savings on Red 'Bargain' and White 'Economy' Days. He added "For larger projects, involving all our 83 scientists, we charter a CN coach or sleeping car. We have the exclusive use of a roomy, air-conditioned coach for the entire trip at ocean-bed prices... up to 25% savings! For large groups it's cheaper to charter — and smarter by far. This is one bargain we won't let get away!"

CHURCH PARADE — Belleville Odd Fellows held their annual church parade Sunday, marching from the Front Street hall to St. Andrews' Presbyterian Church. Seen discussing route prior to parade are Rev. Alfred Poulter, Lyle Mater, Noble Grand of the Belleville Lodge, Kenneth McNevin, Army and Navy Pipe Band and Ross Jeffrey of Picton, District Deputy Grand Master. Rebekah Lodge members also attended the church service.

Nineteen Cuban Refugees Arrive In Panama

PANAMA (AP) — Nineteen Cuban refugees arrived aboard an American freighter Saturday night after their dramatic flight from Cuba in a captured fishing boat Monday.

They were found adrift in the Caribbean by the freighter William Lykes on Thursday after the fishing boat's engine failed and their water and food supplies had run short. They disembarked at Cristobal in the Canal Zone.

The refugees said several men in the group armed with a machine-gun and knives had put to sea in a small boat and overpowered the crew of the 50-foot fishing boat. The fishing crew was left ashore unmjured and the boat was used for the mass escape.

DANGER TO PLANES

TOKYO (Reuters) — Millions of birds, most of them migratory, have been a costly hazard at Tokyo International Airport. The birds, sometimes numbering more than 100 at a time, gather in puddles near runways and take to the air every time an aircraft comes in or takes off. So far, accidents caused by the birds have not resulted in fatalities.

The Ontario Intelligencer

Pages 13 to 24

BELLEVILLE, ONTARIO, MONDAY, APRIL 27, 1964

ON PARADE through Belleville streets Saturday is local Corps headed by Toronto band — contrasted to the suspicion with which its appearance here was greeted in 1883.

Salvation Army in City Year Older Than Birthday Celebrated Over Weekend

If it's true an organization is as old as it feels the claim speaks well for Belleville's Salvation Army Corps.

The group Saturday marked what it first believed was its 80th anniversary. Actually, it's almost a year older than that.

The discovery was made by Captain J. Tuckaberry as he prepared exhibit of local memorabilia for anniversary celebrations at the corps' Pinnacle Street citadel.

An enthusiastic amateur historian, the captain has researched his topic with an admirably detached eye and result is a serious, often amusing, social sidelight of years gone, but not completely forgotten.

It shows the Army from small beginnings viewed with suspicions, at best condescension by Belleville's social establishment, flourishing in an incredibly short period — to such extremes that it brought resentment.

A brief comment in The Intelligencer of September 13, 1883, was the prelude for what was to come:

"Captain Wass, chief officer of the Canadian Division of the Salvation Army arrived in this city by afternoon express from Kingston on Tuesday — in quest of suitable buildings wherein to hold the services of the Salvation Army. After a thorough inspection of the Metropolitan Hall Capt. Wass arranged with the proprietors to lease these rooms for a year."

NEW INNOVATION

And so the work of organization commenced in Belleville and a two-dollar announcement was placed in the Intelligencer.

Not only was it something new for the bustling Victorian town, the Salvation Army as such was a fairly new innovation. It had been given its name only five years before — on Christmas 1878 - - growing out of the aggressive mission band founded in London's notorious east end in 1865. Its growth throughout the world was phenomenal, having started from what, in its time, was regarded as unpromising material.

The phenomena was repeated on a local level in Belleville apparently.

The Intelligencer of September 27, 1883 commented on the first service held at Metropolitan Hall:

"The streets were thronged and in the Metropolitan Hall there was no standing room left; so great was the crowd that gathered from curiosity to witness the form of procedure of this kind of revivalists. Lining out the parades in uniform and the music, there was nothing in the procedure yesterday that differs materially from the old form of Methodist protracted meetings."

However, a concluding paragraph gives some hint of the attitude felt generally toward the corps.

"...So long as their efforts tend to morality and no one will say that their procedure on Sunday will tend to make drunkards, thieves or gamblers — although many of their forms may seem absurd as measured by the orthodox religions' standards of the present day, should not expose them to adverse criticism."

Yet, criticism there was, for apparently some citizens were disgruntled by the salvationists and their proceedings.

WROTE TO EDITOR

By January 1884, it had seemingly grown to a point where one doughty Victorian — who signed himself "Methodist" — took up his pen to inform the Intelligencer editor and his readers:

"It seems to be forgotten that the ministers preached to empty pews for a long time before the Army came to Belleville. Whose fault was that? Does not the fault lie in the church itself? If we had a working ministry and kind sociable members in the church as we had years ago, then there would be more of the spirit of God at work in the church and consequently fewer empty pews, for the Salvation Army could not affect the churches.

"It is most unjust to condemn them because a few discordant sounds and strange phrases do not please refined ears."

That same January the fledgling corps was being backed by its Toronto headquarters for selling 700 copies weekly of the Army's "War Cry" newspaper — ranking fourth in circulation for all Canada!

Some comments reported by Sally Anne lassies a year later as they staged a blitz of Belleville bars with the three-cent-a-copy "War Cry" gives an indication of how the city's working population had taken to the new religious group in their midst.

Only one man was reported throwing a paper to the floor after discovering the girls he belonged "to that gang that walks up and down the streets."

DISRUPT TRAFFIC

The rest were in jocular, liberal vein.

"Come girls, come in and close the door," was the greeting at one saloon.

"Help yourselves to a glass of gin, girls," was the invitation at another.

"Have you got the Globe?" was the good-natured greeting from a third.

While not always downing demons those first Salvationists parading Belleville streets could sometimes unwittingly raise the devil with horse-drawn traffic.

Reported the Intelligencer of March 1, 1884: "Another runaway occurred on Front Street which was occasioned by the Salvation Army band."

That year too, the Salvationists were responsible for one of the greatest social events on the calendar — a Hallelujah wedding, contracted between Captain Nellie Syerson and a Captain Ludgate of Hamilton.

The Intelligencer called it the "greatest attraction of the season" with the streets lined by crowds, people forced into the church by hundreds "the fifteen cents admission having no effect in suppressing the rush."

IN CITY TO STAY

Nothing could better demonstrate the fact the Salvation Army was in Belleville to stay than it has, and never looked back.

Except this past weekend when, amid the bustle of special services, a street parade Saturday with the Army's Toronto Temple Band, and other observances hailing the anniversary, the Salvationists gathered around Captain Tuckaberry's display.

There, they saw for the first time, from whence they had come.

Rudolf Hess Howls Like Wolf in Cell

BERLIN (AP)—Rudolf Hess, once Adolf Hitler's deputy, has become so eccentric that he sometimes howls like a wolf in his prison cell, says a man in a position to know.

Hess was 70 Sunday. He has been behind bars 23 years.

First he was in British captivity after flying to England on a "peace mission" in 1941. Then he was sentenced to life by the Nuernberg international tribunal for war crimes.

For 17½ years he has been in the Allied War Crimes Prison in the Berlin suburb of Spandau.

An officer who saw him recently says:

"Hess looks every day of his age.

"His skin is deeply wrinkled. His dark, glaring eyes are deeply sunken.

"His thick eyebrows are bushier then ever, but now grey.

IS STRANGE SIGHT

"He looks a strange sight as he shambles around in an old German army ski-cap and a long military overcoat that flaps around his ankles.

"His mental state has not improved with the years.

"Some nights he howls like a wolf in his cell.

"The soldiers on guard can hear him. Sometimes several times they get so fed up with it that they howl back at him."

Hess and two other convicted war criminals are the only occupants of the prison built to hold 600 prisoners. They are watched by an international force of British soldiers.

In a remnant of four-power co-operation in Germany, the prison is guarded in rotation by American, Russian, British and French troops. This month it is the Americans' turn to have a company of military police at the jail.

TO HALT RESCUE

The military guard was originally posted to prevent any attempt by Germans to rescue their fallen leader.

The other prisoners are Baldur von Schirach, the former leader of the Hitler Youth, 57, and Albert Speer, Nazi munitions minister, 59. Both completed their terms in 1966.

Hess is in for life. Nuernberg rules require sentences to be reviewed although other persons have been prematurely released from Spandau because of their age.

Hess astounded the world by parachuting out of a fighter plane over Scotland May 10, 1941.

The British said Hess announced he had come on a "mission of humanity." He wanted to persuade the British they had lost the Second World War and should make peace with Nazi Germany.

At Nuernberg, Hess was convicted of plotting against peace and planning, inciting and carrying through aggressive war.

Erhard Scores Victory in First Test

CP from AP-Reuters

STUTTGART—West German Chancellor Ludwig Erhard recorded a prestige-boosting victory Sunday in his first test of the polls since taking over from Konrad Adenauer six months ago.

Complete official returns from the Baden-Wuerttemberg state election showed his Christian Democratic party gained heavily, capturing almost half the total votes and increasing its share of the poll by nearly seven per cent. It was the last major vote before next year's general election.

The campaign was fought almost exclusively on domestic issues: Bonn foreign policy has bipartisan support.

The Christian Democrats polled 46.2 per cent of the 3,500,000 votes cast. The Socialists polled 37.3 per cent. The Free Democrats had 13.1 per cent and the All - German party slumped to 1.8 per cent.

British Jews Are Divided Over Doctrine

By ROD CURRIE

LONDON (CP)—A long-simmering and agonizing dispute that threatens to split British Jewry has broken into a public quarrel with the formation during the weekend of a "break-away" group to defy the chief rabbi.

The dispute centres around the decision of Dr. Israel Brodie Chief Rabbi of the British Commonwealth, to veto the appointment of Dr. Louis Jacobs, a so-called "modernist," to the fashionable New West End Synagogue.

Although these two men are the chief players in the present drama the main split runs much deeper than a personal conflict and is caused by a counter-revolution of the traditionally orthodox against the new liberalism of modern Jewish thinkers.

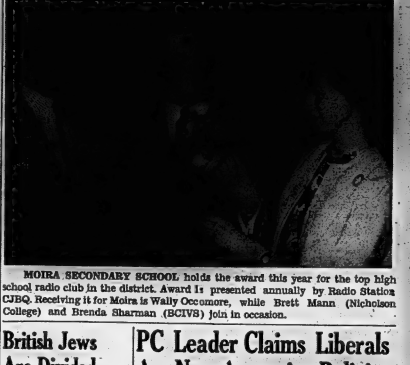
Traditionally all synagogues are separate entities and equal and elect their own rabbis — who are teachers, not priests. But in Britain the Jews, back in the 1870s formed the United Synagogue, thus modifying themselves on the local pattern of religious life. It is this body, covering about 100,000 of British's estimated 450,000 adult Jews, that now supports the chief rabbi.

The controversy centres around the dogma observed by the orthodox synagogues — that the Lord revealed the truth to Moses on Mount Sinai, that the truth is literally the word of God and that it is heresy to criticise it.

Jacobs, however, while advocating traditional Judaism, also attempts to make it acceptable to people with a modern academic discipline. He even suggests that some of the books of Judaism has on some occasions taken contemporary myths and sanctified them.

On Sunday night the breakaway group announced they intended to install Jacobs in a new place of worship.

They predicted they would carry with them half the congregation and are preparing 700 letters appealing for the support of "all in sympathy with this aim."



Independent Elected Mayor Of Taipei

TAIPEI (AP) — Nationalist Chinese President Chiang Kai-shek's ruling Kuomintang party took a beating Sunday as Henry Yu-shu Kao, an independent, was elected mayor of Taipei, Formosa.

Country - wide, the Kuomintang won two out of the five contests for mayor but achieved victory in 15 out of 16 races for county magistrate.

Kao made clear his victory had no great international significance. In a statement he expressed hope people in all walks of life would unite under Chiang's leadership to fight back nor recovery of the Communist-held China mainland.

The election was considered a test of the ruling party's popularity with the masses of the capital's more than 1,000,000 inhabitants.

PC Leader Claims Liberals Are Now Accepting Policies Advanced by Conservatives

LONDON, Ont. (CP)—Opposition Leader Diefenbaker has called for income tax deductions for householders equivalent to the municipal taxes they pay on their homes. Speaking at the annual meeting Saturday of the Western Ontario Progressive Conservative Association, Mr. Diefenbaker received frequent applause as he charged the federal government with accepting Conservative policies they previously condemned.

Premier Roberts, to whom Mr. Diefenbaker paid tribute to for leadership unequalled "in building not only a strong Ontario but a strong Canada," arrived as Mr. Diefenbaker finished his address. In a gesture of federal-provincial unity, Mr. Roberts approached the platform and the two leaders shook hands.

At an earlier press conference, the former Conservative prime minister said there could be serious repercussions from the royal commission on banking and finance recommendation Friday to withdraw small loan support of businessmen and farmers.

There were a number of other recommendations from the commission which he disagreed with but he was not prepared to specify them.

WAKES PENSION PROPOSAL

Mr. Diefenbaker suggested in his address that consideration should be given to raising the basic old age pension — now $75 a month at age 70 — and relating it to further increases in the cost of living.

Consideration of tax relief for home owners, he said, in an element in the urban polley being developed by the Progressive Conservatives. The party suffered heavy losses in urban ridings in the last federal election.

He observed that the tax relief he mentioned is offered in the United States as are deductions for interest payments on home mortgages.

Establishment of a federal department of urban affairs also will be considered by party planners, he said. It could incorporate the activities of Central Mortgage and Housing Corporation and other agencies dealing with urban matters such as housing and the financing of industrial development.

Premier Roberts called for more frequent meetings between federal and provincial leaders.

In a brief reference to pensions, Mr. Roberts said he made it plain both inside and outside the legislature he favors a pension plan with common contributions and benefits for all Canadians.

The premier predicted the tax structure committee, which developed out of the two federal-provincial conferences, will play a leading role in strengthening national unity.

UN Army in the Congo Will Be Gone by June 30

LEOPOLDVILLE (AP) — On June 30, The Congo's fourth anniversary of independence from Belgium, this vast local point of Africa will become independent in fact as well as in name. The last foreign soldier of the blue-helmeted United Nations army will be gone.

What happens then?

The Congolese themselves say this is a country of surprises, and they are right. Uneasiness is an emotional disease of Congo residents.

In July, 1960, Congolese soldiers, drunk on looted beer, raped and killed. Tens of thousands of terrified Belgians fled, and The Congo shattered itself into warring factions. That brought the UN here.

It's been a long, hard haul back to something vaguely resembling normal. The Congo today is one nation again. Granted peace, the economy will soon be on the road to recovery.

UNITY FRAGILE

Yet unity is fragile. Revolts threaten, flare up or smolder. Government stability often hangs by a thread of conflicting tribal loyalties. And predictions of disaster in The Congo have an encouraging habit of not coming true.

Most UN soldiers will be happy to clamber aboard home-ward-bound planes.

The world organization is worried that former Katanga president Moise Tshombe is unreconciled to copper-rich Katanga's shotgun remarriage with the rest of The Congo. They fear he may try another break for independence.

UN soldiers fought Tshombe three times, stirring up international controversy. He now is in Europe.

The UN's forces totalled more than 20,000 at one point, including 300 soldiers and 22 airmen from Canada.

One official sums up:

"Because we were here, a number of things didn't happen."

SAVED HUNDREDS

Certainly the presence of UN soldiers undoubtedly saved hundreds of lives. Unarmed Nigerian and British officers flew with Swedish pilots on long solo missions into strife-torn Kasai, Kivu and North Katanga, bringing death to pacify regions where all semblance of law had vanished.

Recently, UN soldiers and helicopter pilots flew into rebel-infested Kwilu province to rescue more than 100 white missionaries, teachers and traders.

The last soldiers leave behind a Congolese army of more than 25,000 men already stretched to the limit to keep the lid on the country.

Many units are of poor quality and poorly led.

There are still outbreaks of burning, looting, raping, killing.

Consumer Should Be Told Interest Rate He Is Paying On Loans Says Commission

OTTAWA (CP)—A major assurance of federal control over consumer lending, to control interest charges and tell the consumer the rate he's paying is urged by the royal commission on banking and finance.

Stiff penalties for excessive charges and failure to disclose effective interest rates are proposed in the commission's report tabled Friday in the Commons.

Its recommendations are aimed generally at opening up competition and giving the borrower a better break in the huge field of consumer credit, where some $4,540,000,000 was owing at the end of 1962.

The commission said existing interest-rate controls on personal cash loans, now limited to loans up to $1,500, should apply up to at least $5,000. The regulations should apply to all cash lenders not just small loan companies and licensed money-lenders.

It also outlined proposed new interest-rate ceiling on personal cash loans which would boost the rate on loans between $1,000 and $1,500 but reduce it on loans over $1,500.

It proposed no change in the present maximum interest rate on debts up to $300—two per cent a month—or on amounts owed between $300 and $1,000—one per cent a month.

But it said the rate of one-half per cent monthly on debts in the $1,000-$1,500 range simply prevents most companies from lending that amount. The rate on unregulated loans over $1,500 was around 1½ per cent.

FLAT RATE PROPOSED

The commission proposed a flat monthly charge of one per cent on all personal loans from $300 to $5,000.

Its proposal to extend these regulations to banks and all other personal cash lenders is linked to the commission's key recommendation — removal of the six-per-cent interest ceiling on bank loans.

It said the banks are already in the personal loan field "because the authorities have accepted what some might argue is a breach of the spirit of the six-per-cent law." But the result had been improved facilities and a lower average cost to borrowers.

Imposition of unduly-low interest ceilings, it said, "only results in the discouragement of credit flows and drives those borrowers to unregulated and often extremely high-cost lenders."

The commission said it was not prepared to recommend that interest controls be applied to the big field of sales finance credit—the purchase of consumer goods such as cars through conditional sales contracts. But there are "strong arguments" for such a move.

However, it said all consumer loans—both cash loans and sales finance deals—should be required to show the effective annual rate of interest the borrower would pay.

The effective rates of 17 sales finance companies on a standard new-car contract in 1961 aried from 12.5 per cent to 18.8 per cent a year, the report said Rates on a smaller consumer goods contract ranged from 16 to 25 per cent.

STIFF PENALTY URGED

Suggesting penalties for excessive charges or failure to disclose rates, the commission said that "at the least, the lender should forfeit all principal and interest on the illegal transactions."

There should be fines as well, with license suspensions for flagrant violations.

The commission said there should be restrictions to prevent a merchant from using an inflated cash price on a credit sale in order to show an unrealistically - low interest rate.

Supervision of small loan companies and money-lenders, it said, should be transferred to the chief inspector - general of banks from the superintendent of insurance.

The report underlined the "dramatic" rise in volume of personal loans by banks — to $1,182,000,000 in 1963 from $75,000 000 in 1945. The 1962 figure was one-quarter of all consumer credit inspector - general of banks from the superintendent of insurance.

It said total consumer credit now amounts to about 16 per cent of personal disposable income of all Canadians, compared with 12 to 13 per cent before the war.

It forecast that despite an increased consumer willingness to go into debt, consumer debts "may have reached a level which they will expand only gradually in relation to income."

Higher Interest Rate for Farm Credit Corp. Recommended

OTTAWA (CP)—A higher interest rate for the Farm Credit Corporation, which extended a record $104,000,000 in federal funds last year, is recommended in the royal commission on banking and finance.

The interest rate of five per cent "involves an unjustified element of subsidy which habits private long - term farm lending," says the report.

Its general tone concerning farming is that direct or guaranteed lending by governments now a major element in credit facilities for agriculture, should be readjusted to widen the role of private money sources.

Specifically, it recommends a higher interest rate for the Farm Credit Corporation and an expansion of the maximum loans to $40,000 from $27,500.

The royal commission suggests as a general practice that government - guaranteed financing programs—offering bank loans such as those under the Farm Improvement Loans Act —should seek mainly to attract private lenders.

Higher interest rates and permission to replace government guaranteed mortgages with security might well encourage banks to step up their activities.

If the Farm Improvement Loans Service should remain as a federal agency, however, with current interest rates of five per cent, the maximum loan should be increased to $10,000 from $7,500.

Repayment and down - payment schedules also should be adjusted. The Farm Improvement Loans Service covers short-term credit and the Farm Credit Corporation is a steadily growing source of long-term mortgage credit.

In arguing that the FCC interest rate at five per cent should be raised closer to market levels, the report says:

"While there are admittedly farm needs for which the government wishes to provide special assistance, as general rule we believe that efficiency in both agriculture and the financial system is fostered by the normal play of market forces.

"In our view, any assistance to farm borrowers should be explicit and not the result of inadvertence, and should be given in ways which do not discourage reasonably efficient private lenders.

"If it is thought desirable to make farm mortgage credit available more cheaply than market forces dictate, the government should subsidize it openly."

QUEEN'S FARM UPSURGE

The report briefly reviews the "dramatic" transition in farming since the Second World War and says the fact that governments have had to supply credit indicates that deficiencies existed. A contributing factor was the growth in size, productivity and cost of operation for farms.

Federal and provincial government lending accounted for about one-third of all mortgage lending and Quebec handled about two-thirds of the provincial slice of 40 per cent.

While provisions seem adequate for short- and medium-term credit, "there may well be more serious deficiencies in the provision of certain types of long - term credit to agriculture."

In the longer - term field, private financial institutions had dwindled as suppliers since the depression of the 1930s, partly from lossses then and partly because of subsequent lower-interest government credit.

Larger - type farms might have to take a fee from industry's book by public debt or equity issues. But the problems should be marginal farms, not the number one - quarter of the 481,000 farms in the 1961 census, assessed as outside the help of more capital.

QUESTIONS AND ANSWERS

QUESTION: We had made plans to drive to Alaska for a holiday in early summer. Because of the recent earthquake, it is advisable to still think of going? Your comments would be much appreciated. — J. C., Trenton.

ANSWER: Alaska's tourist industry has emerged virtually unharmed by the recent earthquake which shook the 49th State, according to a special report received by the American Automobile Association. The report from the Alaskan capital, Juneau, noted that all travellers' accommodation in Fairbanks, Juneau, Ketchikan, Skagway, Sitka and Haines is intact. "It is too early to assess the damage at Anchorage, Valdez and Seward" where the earthquake struck, where, the report continued. Domestic airlines are operating normally; international flights have been suspended temporarily. The Alaska Highway through Canada and the interior of Alaska was not affected by the quake, Alaska ranks fourteen as the third industry in its economy.

QUESTION: When is the Kentucky Derby held and what is the shortest and best route there from Belleville? How long does it take? What is the average double rate in the American Automobile Association approved motels? Miss M. H., Belleville.

ANSWER: Churchill Downs, the Downs track where the Kentucky Derby is run each year, has spring and fall racing meets. Derby Day is the first Saturday in May. Free tour of the grounds and gardens June 8 through September 2. The best and shortest route to Louisville, recommended by the Ontario Motor League, is the following: Hwy. 2 to Toronto and Windsor, then Route 75 to Toledo, Dayton and Cincinnati, and then No. 42 to Louisville. You would need a Northeastern map. Hotel and motel rates in Louisville average about $10, double (two persons, one bed). Rates soar on Derby weekend, though.

QUESTION: Is Highway No. 401 finished between London and Windsor? — J. L. C., Belleville.

ANSWER: Yes, it is now completed.

QUESTION: Could you please give me the mileages to the following places as we are anticipating visits to these places this summer. This would be from Belleville to Albany, Boston, New York and Washington. — G. R., Belleville.

ANSWER: Albany, 315 miles; Boston, 600 miles; New York, 465 miles; Washington, 606 miles.

QUESTION: We plan to go on a camping trip this summer and would like to know where we can obtain a camping book or guide for Ontario which will show us the various camping spots and what they have to offer. — M. E., Peterboro.

ANSWER: These booklets are obtained by writing directly to the Department of Travel and Publicity and Government Reception Centre placed at strategic points along the Canadian-American border, or may be obtained at any branch or division of the Ontario Motor League in every principal city in Ontario.

CORRECTION: Two weeks ago, we published in this column that the Mid Island Ferry started operation April 1. We had been informed that it still on bank holiday so would like to give away, particularly to schools or children's classes.

Four Roosevelt Brothers Putting Name Back on Ballot

By WALTER R. MEARS

WASHINGTON (AP) — Two heirs to the political legacy of the late president Franklin D. Roosevelt are putting the name back on the ballot, another is working for President Johnson and the fourth is ready to vote again for a Republican for the office his Democratic father once held.

That's an election-year political capsule on the four Roosevelt brothers—a congressman, an aspirant to the Democratic party's national committee, a sub-cabinet officer and a Republican businessman.

John Roosevelt is the Republican member of the Roosevelt family. He is backing New York Governor Nelson Rockefeller for the Republican presidential nomination to contest the November U.S. election.

James is United States congressman, a Democrat and an odds-on favorite to win his sixth term representing California's 26th congressional district.

Elliott is stumping Florida, seeking to become Democratic national committeeman. He is one of 13 candidates for the post in a May 26 election.

RACES JOHNSON

Franklin Jr. is No. 2 man in the U.S. commerce department. He could be headed from President Johnson's administration into a new political career—and there's even been a little talk of him as a possible vice-presidential running mate for John son in the November presidential election.

That's a long shot, but men who know Roosevelt say he may have his eye on a bid for the New York governorship two years from now.

Elected to Congress three times, Roosevelt turned from his House of Representatives seat in 1954 for an attempt to become governor. He wound up with the Democratic nomination for state attorney-general and lost to Republican Jacob Javits.

"I have the feeling that if I do this job, day-by-day, the future will take care of itself," says Franklin Jr.—at 50 a man who looks and sounds strikingly like his late father.

VICTORY CERTAIN

James Roosevelt, 57, unopposed for renomination in his Los Angeles area district, is rated virtually certain to win another term.

Elliott Roosevelt, 53, moved to Florida 15 months ago and quickly jumped into Democratic politics.

"I've been a life-long Democrat and I want to serve the party in the best way I can," he said in declaring his candidacy for national committeeman.

Brother John, who has backed Republican presidential candidates since 1952, indicates he will do the same thing this year, no matter who is nominated.

John, 48, once stumped for his father, but joined the Republican camp to support former president Eisenhower.

As a working partner in a Wall Street investment firm, John says he is too busy now for any active politicking.

Canada's Best Known Poet, E. Pratt, Dies

TORONTO (CP)—E. J. (Ned) Pratt, Canada's best known poet, died Sunday at the age of 81.

The Newfoundland - born writer tried a variety of careers before he turned to poetry. It was 40 before he published a book but fame came fast as his powerful poems of the sea struck sparks on men's souls throughout the world.

He produced 18 volumes of poetry, the last work, Landfall Ahead, was commissioned by the CBC and written in 1959 to honor Queen Elizabeth's trip to Canada to open the St. Lawrence Seaway.

A hardening of the arteries and Glaucoma troubled him in his last days but his mind remained clear as he lay in his central Toronto apartment and listened to his wife Viola as she read to him.

Funeral services for Mr. Pratt will be held Tuesday at Convocation Hall, University of Toronto.

His own writing ranged from brief lyrics to long, eloquent sea epics. The shorter poems are strong and finely chiselled, but his reputation and his following rest on the storypoems, such as The Roosevelt and the Antelope, based on an incident of Canadian heroism; which brought him international attention in 1930, The Witches' Brew, The Titanic and Brebeuf.

FOLKSINGER ON THE MOVE — A familiar figure in Toronto clubs, footloose folksinger Dave Campbell, considered a major talent by producers and fellow entertainers, is thinking of establishing himself in the U.S., where he'll cut a few records this year, or England. A native of a primitive British Guiana jungle region, he currently is concentrating more on writing songs. (CP Photo)

Dave Campbell, Folksinger, One to Keep an Eye On

By DAVE PIKE

TORONTO (CP)—"I've been been around here long enough," says footloose folksinger Dave Campbell, a native of British Guiana's primitive Pomeroon jungle region who figures his most natural talent is burning his bridges behind him.

"I'm reaching the stage where I would much rather write songs than sing them," adds Campbell, considered a major talent in folk circles—a young man to keep an eye on in future.

"He's one of the most exciting talents I've encountered in a long time," says Syd Banks, producer of CTV's Let's Sing Out folksong series, on which Campbell has appeared a number of times. "His stature as a composer is going to be very high."

Campbell, who is as casual about money as he claims to be, currently is trying to make up his mind whether to cross the border, where the big money is, or the Atlantic.

Even if he doesn't base himself in the U.S., he plans to cut a few records there this year. But the overseas lure is strong because although "the money may not be as good no one in Britain ever asked me how many records I had out or whether I had ever appeared in Carnegie Hall. They accept you for what you are when you sing there."

Campbell has written about 40 songs and perhaps 200 melodies since a trip to Europe last year.

HIS OWN MAN

Now nearing 30 but looking five years younger, Campbell has lived his own sauve philosophy since he was a youngster paddling the Pomeroon 24½ miles to school every day: "If you're passive, man, you can't create. If you copy others, you're phony.

"My guitar style may not be revolutionary, but it can't be mistaken for anybody else's. I don't pay much attention to who's who in my style and I go my own way regardless of what the latest folk wave may be. I wouldn't even reject even the way the other boys did when I was a kid."

Campbell, who derives his handsome South American Indian features from his father, is almost as individualistic on stage as in private life. He has a direct, uncluttered, albeit somewhat abrupt, approach and, since visiting Europe, has been drawing heavily on his own repertoire of songs.

His father was a rubber farmer, his mother a teacher. The family—he has eight sisters—worked tirelessly to keep up with nature in the supertitious, lonely Pomeroon region. When he left the jaguars behind to enter high school in Georgetown, he was the "boy from the bush" to fellow students.

Campbell burned his first bridge at 20 when he gave up a safe career in the civil service after six months because he couldn't stomach the "British colonial master-servant way of life." He'd always sensed a pull northward, so he moved to Toronto, where he burned his second bridge after working three months in an insurance office, an interlude he'd rather forget.

Four months before he was to write examinations in Ryerson Institute of Technology's radio and television arts course, he decided to make his living singing. He'd started singing in clubs only to help pay his way through the course, which he concluded was more "farcically artistic. I didn't want to go into industry."

ISSUES CLARIFIED

When the calypso rage erupted, he started to jump on the bandwagon, instead picked up a few gigs singing authentic West Indian tunings. "I didn't want to become a Calypso Joe."

Campbell worked a few gigs in the U.S., but sang mostly in Toronto, Montreal, Ottawa and Hamilton. He went home for a visit and rediscovered many songs he'd sung as a boy but hadn't realized were folk - oriented.

Then last summer he took off on a 2½-month tour of France and the U.K. This marked the turning point in a life of uncertainty.

In Glasgow, he met Matt McGinn, a singer and composer. Campbell had been writing songs for some time, but had never taken them too seriously until McGinn exclaimed: "Write. You can. You have a soul that feels things."

"He was the catalyst, man," says Campbell. "He made me understand things, social issues, that I'd been foggy about."

Coming back on the plane, Campbell wrote five songs, beautiful songs bearing out McGinn's judgement.

Rahman Back In Power In Malaysia

KUALA LUMPUR (Reuters) Malaysian Prime Minister Tunku Abdul Rahman was returned to power Sunday in a sweeping victory at the polls.

He campaigned almost exclusively on a platform of defiance of Indonesia and won 89 of the 104 Malaysian seats in the 159-member Malaysian federal Parliament, smashing the opposition in Malaya—most powerful state in the union.

Only Malayan seats were at stake.

Observers said Rahman's victory might mean an even harder line on Indonesia's "confrontation" policy against the Malaysia Federation linking the former British territories of Malaya, Singapore, Sarawak and Sabah (formerly North Borneo).

With 36 seats already in his possession in the Borneo states of Sabah and Sarawak, Raman now has 125 seats in the federal house. His personal majority increased from 7,490 to 11,647 in his own constituency.

Rahman, who said in a victory statement "to hell with Indonesia," told reporters the two problems to be dealt with immediately are terrorists on Malaysian soil and the menace of subversion.

RARE, MEDIUM, WELL-DONE

By GEO. H. CARTER, Sports Editor

(With apologies to Ernest Thayer and "Casey at the Bat", and others.)

The outlook wasn't brilliant for the Red Wings team that night.

The series stood at three-to-three; this was the final fight.

From 14,000 Leafian throats there rose a lusty yell:
"Tonight is Hogtown's night to howl; go out and give 'em hell."

There was ease in Imlach's manner though he quickly choked a "Bosch."

There was pride in Clancy's bearing as he fondly looked at "Punch."

"We took the Habs in seven—(in his voice unbridled glee),
"So hist'ry will repeat itself—we'll 'cup' 'em four to three."

Then up spake brave Sid Abel from his space inside the gate,
"To every club within the league, it cometh soon or late,
"And how can we win better than facing Leafian odds,
The Stanley's waiting for us—and for our Olympia's gods."

"We beat Chicago's finest—took their golden boys in stride,
"And upon the Red Wings banner did we nail their playdown hide.
"There is room to hang another, and despite this crowd's hatred,
"It will bear the proud insignia of the mighty Maple Leafs!

But the well-laid plans of mice and men see often gang agley,
You can call it luck, ability, the breaks or what you may,
For victory's writing on the wall came early in the game
When Bathgate broke the scoring ice—and Imlach scented fame.

From the pew seats, black with people, there arose a gladsome roar,
Like the beating of the storm-waves on a stern and distant shore,
Then it echoed and re-echoed like the thunder rolls at nightfall
When the globe at Terry Sawchuk's rear became a Keon flight.

With desperation fuelling the motors on their heels,
The Red Wings, led by doughty Howe, heard Abel's grim appeals,
"Two thousand going down the drain—go get it, if you will,"
But crippled Kelly heard it too—and made it three to nil.

From 14,000 throats and more there rose a mighty yell,
It echoed in Don Valley and Etobicoke as well,
And city slickers cross the land—as well as rural "rubes",
Looked on in awe as "private eyes" near blew their picture tubes.

Then Armstrong, wily chieftain, who to misers is a god,
Apparently does not believe in numbers that are odd,
Or mayhap through some extra sense had learned that this poor fool
Had drawn the current Number Three in the daily office pool,
So perhaps to keep my record clean or once more hear the roar,
Without pelo, or by-your-leave he drilled home Number Four.

From end to end the Red Wings flow, not far the fateful hour
That spelled defeat, but honor-bound to get a puck past Bower,
They threw their shock troops at the Leafs, from hither and from yon,
By Imlach's win-crazed Blue-and-Whites preserved their aging John.

The band is playing somewhere, and somewhere hearts are light,
And somewhere men are laughing and somewhere children shout,
But there is no joy in far Detroit since the Red Wings were shut out.

Leafs' Depth Gave Wings Death-Blow

By DAVE BETTS

TORONTO (CP) — Toronto Maple Leafs, crowned champions of professional hockey, silenced a lot of critics Saturday night and finally proved what their supporters had been saying all winter.

If any die-hard Leaf fan had been cornered back in mid-season are forced to explain the reasons for his loyalty, chances are he would have extolled his favorites something like this:

"They may lose a lot of games, but they win the big ones. They'll win their third straight Stanley Cup because of their depth, versatility, guts, great defensive work and solid training program—and no one can stop big Frank Mahovlich when he feels like moving."

In their 4-0 cup victory over Detroit Red Wings Saturday, the Leafs demonstrated all their virtues—and their big frailty of waiting until the last round to deliver the big punch.

The league-champion Montreal Canadiens and the lowly Wings forced the Leafs to 16 playoff games and extended the series to April 25, the latest date in history.

But the Leafs proved their depth when four different forwards—Andy Bathgate, Dave Keon, Red Kelly and George Armstrong — shared the final scoring of the year.

DISPLAY VERSATILITY

They proved their versatility by scoring on Terry Sawchuk on four different types of play —a breakaway, a long shot, a backhander and a close-in forehander.

Johnny Bower's 33-shot shutout was an exhibit A for their defensive ability, and Kelly, Bob Baun and Carl Brewer, who all played with severe leg injuries, demonstrated their courage.

Few can argue now with manager - coach Punch Imlach's training methods which call for between-game practices.

And as for Mahovlich . . . he almost left a jet stream behind him Saturday night as he sped all over the rink, stole pucks, set up the plays, did his share of back-checking and fed Kelly and Armstrong for their goals.

The injury-riddled Wings, reigned by preseason experts to the far reaches of the National Hockey League, wrote their own chapter to the Cinderella story by refusing to capitulate when the odds were against them.

The motley collection of canny veterans and unbridled youngsters struggled from fifth place at Christmas, gained a fourth - place toe - hold in the playoffs, fought from behind twice to defeat the powerful Chicago Black Hawks in the semi - finals, and pushed the world-champion Leafs to the last period of the seventh game of the final.

KEON FINISHES WINGS

"That second goal by Keon in the final period finished us," said Sid Abel, Red Wing manager-coach, after the game. "We had a few chances in the second to tie it, but once they got in front everything seemed to go right for them."

The champagne - filled Leaf dressing room was a scene of triumph but not really of jubilation.

After the titanic struggle of the 16 playoff games, many of the players could hardly believe it was all over.

"When's the next practice, Punch?" asked several of the Leafs in a peculiar tone that had a half-serious ring.

To win their 10th cup in club history and the third straight, the Leafs had to overcome 3-to-2 game deficits with both the Canadiens and the Wings. In the final they won one game with two seconds remaining, another late in the third period, another in overtime and then Saturday's decisive victory.

The Wings won a game in overtime after the Leafs had tied it with 43 seconds left, scored the winning goal in another game with 17 seconds remaining and had to hang on by their finger nails to win the third game 3-2.

NHL statistician Ron Andrews said it was the closest final series in the history of the league.

While they quaffed one form of pain-killer after the game, three of the Leafs felt the effects as another kind—more calm—wore off.

TAKEN TO HOSPITAL

Kelly was taken to hospital in a wheelchair and spent the night there. Sunday he was resting at home under sedation, his knee throbbing from the effects of a double check by Gordie Howe and Bill Gadsoy in the sixth game.

Baun was scheduled to enter hospital today for x-rays of a possible fracture above his ankle where he stopped a puck in the same game and his defence partner, Brewer, played the last five games after receiving shots to deaden the pain of a leg injury received in the last game against Montreal.

The tough series also took its toll with Detroit defenceman Doug Barkley, who played a stout - hearted game Saturday despite a painful groin injury, and Leaf left-winger Don McKenney, knocked out of action in the fifth game with torn knee ligaments.

In his record 142nd playoff game, Kelly, a 36 - year - old member of Parliament, not only scored but kept the mighty Howe from getting into the game one dangerous shot on Bower. This was Kelly's seventh Stanley Cup triumph, four with the Wings and three straight with the Leafs.

Ed Litzenberger, who was used on a few shifts after McKenney's injury, earned the distinction of playing on four straight Stanley Cup winners. He was Chicago's captain when the Hawks won in 1961.

The Leafs Saturday did what they have seldom been able to do in the last few weeks—start with a rush, keep up the pace and finish with speed and aplomb.

BATHGATE GETS WINNER

Bathgate, an ex-New York Ranger obtained late in the season, gave his new team all the edge it needed at 3:04 of the first period when the puck hopped over Terry Sawchuk at the Toronto blueline. Handy Andy streaked in on Sawchuk and overpowered him with a fast shot to the near corner.

The Wings, who have often been on the floor but always refuse to be swept under the rug, kept pressing and kept 14,571 Maple Leaf Gardens customers on the edge of their seats until Keon's swift shot at 4:26 of the last period. Keon used Armstrong as a decoy on his right, faked a pass and then whistled home a 35-footer over Sawchuk's arm.

With the Wings starting to go into shock for the first time in the series, Mahovlich set up Kelly's backhander less than two minutes later, and then with five minutes to go the Big M removed all lingering doubts by recovering his own rebound in the far corner and laying a pass back to Armstrong on the right side.

Howe won the series scoring championship with nine goals and 10 assists, two points ahead of team-mate Norm Ullman. Mahovlich was third with four goals and 11 assists.

The Leafs are $2,000-a-man richer for their cup win, and each fullshare Wing—among the 39 players used in the season and playoffs—received $1,000.

Fails In Hour Of Need

Lucky Octopus Deserts Red Wings

TORONTO (CP) — Even Pete Cusimano's octopus deserted Detroit Red Wings Saturday night in their fruitless quest of the Stanley Cup.

Cusimano, a 37-year-old Detroit fan, habitually throws an octopus on the ice at Olympia stadium every hear when the Wings score their first playoff goal. According to tradition, victory is assured as soon as his missile lands.

In the Wing's hour of need, Cusimano took his show on the road to Maple Leaf Gardens for the seventh and deciding game of the series.

But deceased octopi do not travel well. By the time Toronto's Andy Bathgate scored the game's opening goal, Cusimano and his companion had kept company long enough. Pete cocked his right arm and the octopus sailed straight and true over the Toronto blue lines, to be reverently retrieved by linesman George Hayes.

The salute backfired. The Wings never did get around to scoring. The Leafs won 4-0.

Yesterday's Stars

Batting—Tim Harkness, Mets, had five hits in eight times at bat in a double-header split with Pittsburgh Pirates to raise his average to .654, driving in two runs in New York's 3-2 second-game victory after scoring twice and knocking in the tying run before the Pirates won the opener 4-3.

Dodgers Get New Life From Ortega

May Replace Podres

By MURRAY CHASS
Associated Press Sports Writer

After pitching himself out of a permanent job with Los Angeles Dodgers for four years, Phil Ortega has hurdled himself into manager Walter Alston's heart in about two hours.

The 34-year-old right-hander, starting in place of the injured Sandy Koufax, stymied Milwaukee Braves on four hits Sunday as the depleted Dodgers won only their third game in 12 starts. The victory, Ortega's first in the major leagues, came at a most propitious time.

Starters Koufax and Johnny Podres are sidelined with elbow injuries while relief ace Ron Perranoski can barely walk because of a thigh injury. The trio won 35 games among them last season.

"Phil may take Podres' place if Johnny doesn't come out of it," Alston said.

This is the fifth season Ortega has had a trial with the Dodgers. Even in the minors he hasn't risen to the expectations others had for him when Los Angeles signed him out of a Mesa, Ariz., high school for a reported $60,000 bonus in 1959.

TOPS DODGER STAFF

But now his 1.20 earned run average is the best the Dodgers have. Before his shutout, he had pitched 8 2-3 innings in relief.

Elsewhere in the National League Sunday, Philadelphia Phillies whipped Chicago Cubs 5-1, Houston Colts swept past St. Louis Cardinals 6-4 and Pittsburgh and New York Mets split a double header, the Pirates winning the first 4-3 and losing the nightcap 3-2. San Francisco Giants and Cincinnati Reds were rained out of a doubleheader.

On Saturday the Reds downed the Giants 3 - 1, Milwaukee whipped the Dodgers 5-1, the Cubs topped the Phillies 4-1, Houston defeated the Cardinals 4-2 and the Pirates shaded the Mets 5-4.

Ortega struck out three and walked only one after the Dodgers gave him a run in the first inning. He was in trouble just once, when Lee Maye tripled in the fourth. However, third baseman John Werhas grabbed Joe Torre's grounder and nailed Maye at the plate.

Los Angeles scored on Maury Wills' single, a walk, a sacrifice and Frank Howard's sacrifice fly.

USE HOME RUNS

Philadelphia got three home runs plus seven innings of tight pitching from Ray Culp before he tired. Tony Taylor and Gus Triandos socked solo homers while Bobby Wine unloaded a three run blast in the sixth.

St. Louis played its game with Houston under protest after an unusual inning-ending double play in the eighth when the Colts scored two runs.

Mike White scored on Rusty Staub's fly ball, but Bob Aspromonte was ruled out for leaving second before the catch. Manager Johnny Keane contended White's run shouldn't count. Aspromonte had singled home what turned out to be the winning run earlier in the inning.

Ron Hunt and Tim Harkness rallied the Mets after they threw away the first game. Hunt scored all three runs after he singled, doubled and tripled. Harkness, the first baseman from Lachine, Que., sent him home two of those times with singles.

The pirates won the opener on Roberto Clemente's bases-loaded single in the ninth. Errors by Al Moran and John Stephenson and a walk to Bill Virdon had filled the bases.

'Moe' Leads Toledo To Title

FORT WAYNE, Ind. (CP) — Toledo Blades shaded Fort Wayne Komets 3-3 in the second overtime period Sunday to capture the International Hockey League best-of-seven final series 4-2.

Komets, topped by Toledo in the race for the league pennant, held a 2-0 lead going into the second period. However, the Blades tied it up in the second and there was no more scoring until 3:23 of the second overtime session.

Fort Wayne Marksmen were Bob Rivard and Reg Primeau.

Eastern Finals Opener

Marlies Drub Montreal 7-2

MONTREAL (CP) — Toronto Marlboros go into Tuesday's second game of their five-game Eastern Canada Memorial Cup final series against Montreal's NDG Monarchs looking like champs after drubbing the Monarchs 7-2 Sunday.

Marlies' coach Jim Gregory was complaining after Sunday's game that his club was weakening for lack of strong opposition and not getting into condition for their likely series with the Western champs.

These are Edmonton Oil Kings, who took the Western crown by beating Estevan, Sask., Bruins 8-0 in Estevan the night before.

"We're getting worse instead of better," said Gregory. Another problem is that "we haven't had a line intact for 5 weeks."

Grant Moore, Nick Harbaruk and Paul Laurent were out to write school exams Sunday.

GILBERT TOPS IN CPHL

DETROIT (CP)—Jeannot Gilbert, 23-year-old centre with Minneapolis Bruins, has been named the most valuable player in the Central Professional Hockey League, league president Jack Adams announced Saturday. Gilbert scored 50 goal and had the same number of assists for 100 points.

Defeats Lucan 7-5 In Final Thriller

The 1963-64 OHA Intermediate "B" champions are pictured above, some five minutes after they were presented with the trophy, at Lucan. Picton Wins OHA Intermediate B Title

By JACK FAWKES

PICTON (Staff) — Picton, and Prince Edward County, have a brand new championship.

The Picton Intermediates, by defeating the Lucan Langfords by a close 7-5 score in a game played at Lucan on Saturday night, brought back a huge cup, emblematic of supremacy in OHA Intermediate "B" hockey. Picton won the best of five final, three games to one.

Lucan came to Picton a week ago for the first two games, and Picton won both by a 6-3 and 4-2 score.

Picton went into Lucan this last Friday, and were beaten in a game that saw them blow a second period three goal lead.

Saturday night, after the first period was over, the Picton team had a 3-0 lead, on goals by Shaker Baker, Ron Weese, and Ronnie Hull.

They increased this lead to 4-0 before Max O'Neill was able to dump one behind Tom O'Halloran in the Picton nets. Ron Ryan made it 4-2 midway through the middle frame, before playing coach Davy Jones and captain Lionel Botly each fired one to give the Picton team a 6-2 edge going into the last period.

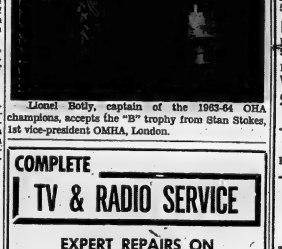
Lucan came back with three goals, Ron Ryan his second at 9:01, and a pair by Jack McLlvane at 15:47 and at 16:31.

Trailing by a single goal, and with visions of a fifth and deciding game on Sunday, Lucan pounced on the coal, and gave O'Halloran a very rough time of it, until Davy Jones picking up the puck at his own blue line, fired the insurance marker at the 16:43 mark, to make it 7-5.

For the last three and a half minutes the Lucan team threw everything at O'Halloran, and how he stopped some of them will always remain a mystery.

To make matters worse, at the 17:40 mark Jones was banished for tripping, Lucan pulled their net minder for an extra forward, and he fat was in the fire.

Picton kept the Lucan team at bay and with 20 seconds left in the game Jones came back. The seconds ticked off to the final gun, and the roof "fell in" at Lucan.



To name a star on the Picton team is very easy — take the entire line-up and place a star at every name. They were all stars in the night.

Davy Jones was 40 after the game, "This was a 100 percent team effort, without which we could not have won. I have never coached a club that had so much going for it. These fellows were wonderful, and of course, when you get a team like that, they make any coach look good."

Oddly enough in the game, Lucan outshot Picton 44 to 32. Penalties were even at four each.

AGAINST-RETURN BOUT

ROCHELLE PARK, N.J. (AP)—John J. Greene, commissioner of the World Boxing Association, said Sunday he is strongly opposed to a return bout between world heavyweight boxing champion Cassius Clay and Sonny Liston.

Lionel Botly, captain of the 1963-64 OHA champions, accepts the "B" trophy from Stan Stokes, 1st vice-president OMHA, London.

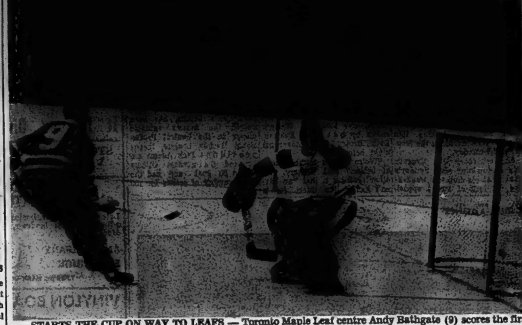
Leafs Hop From 7th To Second

By THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

First baseman Larry Osborne struck two blows Sunday that pulled Toronto from seventh place in the International League standings to a tie for second.

His 10th inning double and a first inning home run gave Toronto a 5-4 and 3-0 sweep of a doubleheader with Richmond, leaving the Virginians into seventh place.

Columbus also swept a doubleheader 12-6 and 7-4 from Buffalo to move into the tie with The Leafs for second. Front-running Syracuse won a single game from Jacksonville 2-0. Rain washed out a Rochester-Atlanta doubleheader.



Jim McKnight saved the first game for Toronto with a three-run homer in the sixth to tie the score at 4-4. A single by third baseman Ozzie Virgil preceded Osborne's game-winning double.

Virgil singled again in the first inning of the nightcap before Osborne drove in the only two runs of the game.

Ted Savage lined the first pitch of Buffalo left-hander Will Hunter into the stands in the seventh inning to score three runs for Columbus' nightcap decision over the Bisons. The Jets had wrapped up the first game with a five-run eighth inning.

Syracuse batters struck out 15 times and got only four hits off two Jacksonville pitchers. But righthander Jack Hamilton ran the Suns' string of scoreless innings to 24 as he gave up only five hits, struck out seven and walked none.

In Saturday's games, the Leafs walloped Richmond 13-5, while Buffalo downed Columbus 5-1. Rochester edged Atlanta 7-6 and Syracuse split a double-header with Jacksonville, winning the nightcap 4-0 after dropping a 4-2 verdict in the first game.

But It Wasn't Easy

Minors Approve Constitution

A number of threatened bombshells failed to explode at a general meeting of the Belleville Minor Sports Association held at the Recreation Centre last Friday night.

While no one lit the fuse, most of those present were aware of the strong differences of opinions existing between the various groups in attendance. The Minor Hockey Association, Minor Baseball Association, Minor Soccer Association, Minor Softball Association, the Recreation Committee and the Minor Sports Association executive were represented as well as several "just interested" supporters.

B.M.S.A. president Tom Neill turned the chair over to Al Sills for the meeting, seeking Neill to "voice his opinion" on matters up for discussion.

The new constitution was brought up for approval and secretary Drury Denyes pointed out that everyone present had a right to vote "since you turned it down at last week's meeting and thus have none (constitution) at the present time".

Few changes were made and with the exception of "article 10," which turned out to be reason for the more or less emergency meeting, the new constitution was passed quickly.

"Article 10" was a different matter. It took up the better part of the two hour and 40 minute meeting. "Article 10" dealt with the finance committee and the chief bone of contention was a clause stating that no organization, team, association or individual could initiate a fund-raising campaign without the consent of the B.M.S.A. president or its executive. Also in the lengthy complicated "Article 10" it was stated that any excess money from these fund-raising projects must go back to the B.M.S.A. for its placing and if the necessary total was not reached, the B.M.S.A. would be obligated to contribute the remainder of the amount. There was more but that was the meat of it. Persons in on the original wording of "Article 10" claimed much had been lost in the typing somewhere along the line.

Pros and cons were tossed back and forth and finally, when it was apparent that "no one was getting somewhere fast," the matter was brought to a very abrupt ending.

A motion wiped out many of the whys and wherefores and stated simply that any association in the B.M.S.A. may conduct fund-raising campaigns once they are approved by the B.M.S.A. executive.

Words to this effect were passed with ease and knocked out at least five sub paragraphs in "Article 10."

Prior to the meeting there had been hints that some of the Belleville Minor Sports Association's affiliates would likely drop completely out of the parent body. Other rumors of "blowups" and "explosions" also failed to materialize.

Lloyd "Red" Doran did jolt the gathering following the completion of official business. Doran, Recreational Director, said he would be placing a recommendation before his committee parks and recreation that registration fees for children using the city's recreation facilities be raised to $2.50; that the Minor Hockey Association be required to pay for ice time; and that small admission charges be made for adults attending games at the arena.

He said that money acquired would naturally be put back into maintaining and improving facilities, more ice rental time, etc., and felt that the idea would benefit all parties involved in the longrun.

Reaction against the move was strong. The B.M.S.A., after quite a discussion on the matter, voted to officially oppose the motion if and when it reaches city council level.

Sweep Quebec Series 4-0

Barons Win Calder Cup

CLEVELAND (AP) — Cleveland Barons won the American Hockey League's Calder Cup by defeating Quebec Aces 5-2 Saturday to sweep the best-of-seven series 4-0.

The Barons were unbeaten in nine straight playoff games, having swept their earlier series with Rochester Americans and Hershey Bears to reach the final.

It was the first time any AHL team ever won nine straight in Calder Cup playoffs, although two other teams had swept through with eight straight victories before the playoff setup was changed two years ago.

The Barons had finished the regular schedule in third place in the Western Division. Aces coasted to a first-place finish in the Eastern Division.

Aces took an early lead on a first - period goal by Wayne Hicks, but Les Ronson tied it at 10:49 of the second.

Fred Glover gave Cleveland the lead late in the period.

Barons took a 3-1 lead in the third period on a goal by Guy Ronsseau.

Barons put the game on ice with two goals within nine seconds, at 17:31 and 17:40. After a faceoff Dick Mattiussi fired a long shot and Coc Hoekstra, deflected the puck into the net. Bob Ellett scored the final goal on a pass play from Ronsseau and Hoekstra.

Twins Nip Tigers In Eleven

Yanks Reach .500; Tribe String Clipped

By HAL BOCK
Associated Press Sports Writer

Manager Al Lopez picked quite a spot for rookie lefthander Frank Kreutzer Sunday in Chicago's 3-1 win over Boston. The Red Sox were leading the White Sox 1-0 in the second inning and the bases were loaded with one out.

All Kreutzer had to worry about was the defending American League batting champ, Carl Yastrzemski, who was the next batter, and the league's leading hitter, Frank Malzone, who was on deck.

But the youngster didn't cringe. He fanned Yastrzemski and Malzone on a grounder. End of threat and start of a 5 2-3 innings of airtight relief.

As if he hadn't already won his spurs with that performance Kreutzer really scored with his manager when he doubled home what proved to be the winning run in the fifth.

Kreutzer, who won his first big league game, allowed just three hits before leaving for a pinch hitter in the seventh. He fanned four.

YANKEES REACH .500

Elsewhere in the American League, the struggling New York Yankees finally reached the .500 level with a 5-4 victory over Baltimore Orioles, Minnesota topped Detroit 7-3, Chicago 3-2 in 11 innings, Los Angeles Angels snapped a five-game losing streak to Washington 4-3 and Cleveland halted a winning streak 7-0 and Washington Senators downed Kansas City Athletics 5-3.

On Saturday the Yankees whipped Baltimore 4-1, Detroit topped Boston 4-2, the Athletics defeated Washington 3-1 and the Indians outlasted the Angels 2-1 in 11 innings.

The Red Sox pushed across the first inning run against starter Frits Ackley Sunday on two hits and two walks. Joel Gardner put one run in with a fielder's choice and Bob Tillman was tagged out at the plate in the second.

Boston turned four straight hits but Boston didn't score because Bob Tillman was picked off second in the midst of the rally. Then Kreutzer came on.

Ted Kluszewski's clutch double in the fifth delivered Joe Cunningham with the winning run.

RUNS UNEARNED

The Yankees evened their record on three unearned runs. The first one scored when catcher John Orsino let a Harvey Haddix knuckler get by for a passed ball in the third inning. Hal Reniff was the winner in relief of Whitey Ford.

PRIZE-WINNING "DAVID AND LISA" TO OPEN

"David and Lisa," the independently produced American awards this year, will begin a return engagement at the Park Theatre tonight for a three day engagement.

The Continental Distributing, Inc. release, starring Keir Dullea, Janet Margolin and Howard Da Silva, tells the sensitive and unusual love story of two adolescents, who while searching for themselves, find each other.

When the film was shown at the San Francisco Film Festival, Keir Dullea and Janet Margolin were awarded the Best Actor and Actress Awards. Earlier in 1962, the film made its debut at the Venice Film Festival and won the award for Best Film by a New Director. Also popular was the motion picture, that it had to be shown three times to meet the demand for tickets.

"David and Lisa" is the first film venture of director Frank Perry and producer Paul Heller. They decided to make this film because they felt the medium is an interesting form of artistic expression. "We are not interested in producing the standard 'message' film, or imitating any new conception in film; our action stems simply from our urge to express an honest and well-told story."

The screenplay, written by Eleanor Perry was based on a novel by Theodore Isaac Rubin, M.D. The film was made in Philadelphia and the sets were designed by Gene Callahan, who won an Oscar for "The Hustler." The original musical score was written by Mark Lawrence and conducted by Norman Paris.

On the same program to perfect your evening see the ridiculous comedy "Mrs. Gibbons' Boys" starring Kathleen Harrison, Lionel Jeffries and Diana Dors at 7.00 and 8.45 p.m.

AT THE PARK — "David and Lisa," which opens here tonight, has Keir Dullea as David in the role he played to perfection when the film was shown at the Park Theatre. The talented young actor proves to be the best of the actor prize at the San Francisco Film Festival for his performances in the film which was produced by Paul Heller and directed by Frank Perry. The screenplay was written by Eleanor Perry based on a novel by Theodore Isaac Rubin. The Continental Distributing, Inc. release won three major awards this year at the Venice and San Francisco Festivals and has place on the N.Y. Film Critics Top Ten Poll for 1962. Also in the cast are Janet Margolin as Lisa, Gibbon's Boys", starring Kathleen Harrison, Lionel Jeffries and Ernest Thesiger and Diana Dors! Complete show 7.00 and 8.45 p.m.

ELIZABETH TAYLOR

CLEOPATRA

Academy Award winner, Elizabeth Taylor, is considered to be one of the world's finest motion picture actresses.

Although she has always been regarded as an American star, Miss Taylor was born in London on February 27, 1932. She attended Byron House School there and traveled with her parents every year to visit her grandparents in the United States.

When war seemed inevitable in 1939, the family came to California and later established a permanent home in Beverly Hills.

A few years after America entered the war, her father discovered, by chance, that MGM was looking for a British girl to appear with Roddy McDowall in "Lassie Come Home." On the basis of an existing screen test, she not only won the role but a long-term contract with the studio.

Following a loan-out to 20th Century-Fox for "Jane Eyre," her next screen role brought her stardom and fame. It was the part for which she had undergone years of training, however. A talented equestrienne from the age of five, she played the girl rider in the popular "National Velvet" when she was twelve.

From then on, her career soared as she appeared in "Courage Of Lassie," "Life With Father," "Cynthia" and "A Date With Judy." Her first adult role, filmed when she was only 13, was opposite Robert Taylor in "Conspirator." She followed this with roles in "Father of the Bride," "Big Hangover," "Father's Little Dividend," "Love Is Better Than Ever," "A Place in the Sun," "Ivanhoe," "Rhapsody," "Elephant Walk," "Beau Brummell" and "The Last Time I Saw Paris." The Critics and audiences first became aware of her dramatic abilities in "A Place in the Sun." She has since rendered outstanding portrayals in all of her recent films.

Among these are "Giant," "Raintree County," "Cat on a Hot Tin Roof," "Suddenly Last Summer" and "Butterfield 8." She received Academy Award nominations for the last four mentioned by the Award itself for "Butterfield 8".

The most challenging characterization of her career is the DeLuxe Color romantic spectacle role in "Cleopatra," the lavish setting of which Tuesday matinee daily. She subsequently appeared in "The VIP's."

Cartwrights Leave Ranch To Stage Morality Tale

By CYNTHIA LOWRY

NEW YORK (AP)—The Cartwright rode off into Ponderosa ranch into new territory Sunday night. NBC's Bonanza told a story about racial discrimination.

The Ladies' Culture Society of Virginia City planned a charity concert to help the starving Piutes, and hired the world-famous singer, Thomas Bowers, to perform. Bowers turns out to be a Negro.

Bowers sings at the concert despite the bad treatment and receives a standing ovation from all present—including the society president—as the bully and his followers slink off.

The uncomplicated nature of the classic western makes it a most effective vehicle for a morality tale. The Bonanza episode made just one point: That a man should not be judged by the color of his skin.

The program would have been more interesting if it had not been told entirely in terms of clichés. Despite the timeworn material, William Marshall played the put-upon basso with an angry dignity that was most effective.

Time for Elizabeth, a comedy that Cricicho Harry conquered around 1948, turned up Friday night on NBC's Bob Hope Theatre looking at least its age and perhaps, a couple of decades older.

This little thing should have been permitted to remain decently interred.

East Side, West Side, CBS, 9-10 EDT—Drama involving two rival newspaper publishers.

Sport Snapshots

Canadian Press Sports Editor

Clarence Campbell says any statement or question about the proposed trophy to be awarded the outstanding player in the Stanley Cup final series is "entirely premature." Nothing about his answer, he adds, will be considered until the National Hockey League annual meeting in Montreal June 8-11.

Officially, this is true.

But anyone making book on it undoubtedly would give odds saying it will be named after Conn Smythe, the one-time Toronto Maple Leaf boss and, for 30 years or more, one of the most explosive personalities in Canadian sport.

Smythe's name was tossed out a few days ago and Campbell, NHL president, readily admitted that the idea had the trophy be named after the 69-year-old Smythe had been "well received."

Smythe has gone on record as saying he would like to have the trophy named after him. Most of the NHL board of governors have indicated they will be a good idea and this straw-board has the final say.

FILLED BOSTON ARENA

There might be one or two other names tossed in before the final decision is made, but many connected with Smythe has the inside track on him, along with such men as Art Ross of Boston and Jack Adams of Detroit Red Wings, formed the NHL's original triumvirate.

They have all left their mark of the big league picture but, as executives, they were never in the background in the late 1920s and 1930s when the NHL was populated with colorful, rambunctious players and there was little attention to the rule book. They spelled box — arena and Smythe packed the arena at night when his lnarsted an advertisement in all Boston newspapers that said:

"If you're tired of what you have been looking at, come out tonight and see a decent team play hockey."

Boston Garden was sold out. The Leafs lost 4-0 and Smythe was escorted from the rink by police after he attempted to start a fight with the referee.

Officially, this is true.

The Tracks

LOUISVILLE, Ky. (AP)—Hill Rise, the $4-favorite in the 90th Kentucky Derby, never has had a race in the mud, but it looks as if he will get his chance at it when he can do on an off track in Tuesday's Derby Trial Stakes.

The colt is expected to meet six or seven other Derby hopefuls in the one-mile test. He last prep for Saturday's $125,000-added Run for the Roses.

The way it's been — rain and showers which began falling in Louisville Sunday would continue.

The 14-mile Derby will be the first showdown between Hill Rise and Northern Dancer, the Canadian comet who ruled the eastern U.S. with as much authority as Hill Rise ruled the west.

Northern Dancer won't compete again until the Derby Saturday, but another Taylor-bred horse will go in the Derby trial. He is Grand Canyon, owned by Frank Sherman of Hamilton.

AGUA CALIENTE (AP)—Hill Rise remained the favorite at 8 to 5 to take Saturday's Kentucky Derby in the final betting book odds posted Sunday in Mexico.

Taylor's Northern Dancer was quoted at 2 to 1 with The Scoundrel the third choice at 6 to 1.

In The Dressing Rooms

By DAVE BETTS

TORONTO (CP) — Dodging champagne corks, shuffling around on broken glass and shouting above the voices of well - wishers, Punch Imlach tipped his hat back and bellylaked praise on his Toronto Maple Leafs.

"They acted like champions and they played like champions. Three of them went out there with their legs frozen. What more can I say—what more could I ask?"

The jag was unconfined in the Leaf dressing room after Saturday's 4-0 blasting of Detroit Red Wings for Toronto's third straight Stanley Cup.

Captain George Armstrong tipped the big cup time and again to quaff champagne as new waves of photographers made their demands.

Defenceman Carl Brewer slumped against the wall with a smile on his face and sang The Maple Leafs Forever.

Ed Litzenberger opened beer bottles on his skates.

Several players heaved Leaf president Stafford Smythe into the showers.

PM ON HAND

Prime Minister Pearson shook hands all around and had a few special words for Red Kelly, scorer of Toronto's first goal and member of Parliament for York West.

Kelly suffered damaged knee ligaments when checked by two Red Wings in the sixth game in Detroit Thursday, was taken to hospital in a wheelchair after Saturday's victory.

A spokesman said Kelly apparently aggravated the injury late in the game.

Management Sid Abel of Detroit, almost unrecognized in the throng, fought his way to Imlach and offered smiles as he posed for pictures.

Close behind was Gordie Howe, Detroit's all-time great, who gave a big handshake and a friendly hug to Toronto goalie Johnny Bower, a summertime friend of Howe's.

Imlach continued his praise. Perhaps never since the night of last year's Stanley Cup victory had he been so free with unfriendly words for his minions.

"They showed all the signs of true champions. Bob Baun, Carl Brewer and Red Kelly all had needles to deaden the pain of their leg injuries, and then they told me they all wanted to play.

"That's the difference between a hockey team and a baseball team. Did you ever hear of baseball guys going like that?

'UP' FOR GAME

"I've seen them up as high as they were before to-night's game. They clomped around and their skates made a hollered. Usually, you know, they just sit around and act casual. But tonight, boy, they were really going."

Andy Bathgate, who scored the first winning goal, was almost mobbed by reporters, photographers, players, politicians, officials and team officials.

"I've been around a long time waiting for something like this," said the former New York Ranger. "I didn't know it would take a trade to get me to the cup celebration, but I couldn't be happier. This is a great club to play with and they've been great to me."

Body Won't Suspend Ted Power

WOODSTOCK (CP)—The Canadian Amateur Hockey Association has decided not to suspend Ted Power, player-coach of Woodstock Athletics, who drew a match penalty April 15 in the final game of their Eastern Canada Allan Cup final series against Ottawa.

A match penalty usually means a suspension. But Stanley Grover McArdle, manager of Woodstock, announced the CAHA "after reviewing reports from game officials," had informed the club that Power will no be suspended.

Power drew the penalty for hitting Ottawa player Ian Anderson with his stick.

Woodstock won the series 4-0 and meets the West, either Winnipeg or Saskatoon, in a best-of-seven final for the Allan Cup. Winnipeg leads 3-1 with the fifth game tonight.

PRESERVE RELICS

LONDON (CP) — The name plate and bell from HMS Goldenlion, believed the first British warship to fire a shot in the First World War when it captured the German gunboat Hermann von Wissmann, are to be placed in the Imperial War Museum here.

Crothers Fourth In Mile Run

WALNUT, Calif. (CP-AP)—Olympian Al Carter of New York, fighting a cranky back and a stiff wind, twice broke his own world record in the discus throw at the Mount San Antonio Relays Saturday.

The 27-year-old two - time Olympic champion hurled the discus 206 feet six inches on his first trip into the ring, breaking a record of 205-5½ he set here a year ago, and wound up his performance with a heave of 206-4.

Bill Crothers, a Markham, Ont., pharmacist whose specialty is the half-mile, took part this time in the mile, and finished fourth.

The mile race developed into a bitter two-man duel between Jim Grelle of Los Angeles and Archie San Romani of Oregon. Grelle won in 4:01.1. San Romani was clocked in 4:01.2.

Crothers was fourth in 4:10.5. He offered one strong challenge on the third lap, then faded.

DES MOINES, Iowa (AP)—Miler Tom O'Hara of Chicago Loyola and Gayle Hopkins of Arizona led a record-smashing attack in the 55th Drake relays Saturday.

O'Hara, making his first outdoor start after a sensational indoor campaign won the mile in 4:01, slashing more than four seconds from the meet record.

Hopkins, a skinny-legged Arizona senior, got into the U.S. Olympic picture with a remarkable 6-foot-8½ inches in the triple jump, missing the U.S. hop - step - and - jump mark by only 1¼ inches.

Give Referees Pay Hike

OHA Vetoes Icing Change

By ALLAN BAILEY

TORONTO (CP) — Ontario's hockey brass turned thumbs down Saturday to a proposal to change the rules governing icing the puck.

Delegates to the annual Ontario Hockey Association convention voted against a proposal by St. Mary's Junior B hockey club that would have resulted in a centre-line ice cut immediately after the puck crossed the goal line.

H. W. Mansell, of St. Marys, told the convention: "We had two serious injuries last year with players racing to see who touched the puck first—whether it is right or not—and adoption of this rule would speed up the game and make it better for a spectator point of view."

Jimmy Skinner, chief scout of Detroit Red Wings of the National Hockey League, denounced the rule change saying it would take away "one of the most exciting plays in hockey."

"Saying a player could be injured is a poor excuse," said Skinner. "A player could be hurt tripping over the blue line."

Wren Blair, general manager of Oshawa Generals, OHA Junior A club and a scout for Boston Bruins of the NHL, backed his overseas visit to Oslow, Norway in 1958, when Whitby Dunlops won the world championship and his discussions with Bunny Ahearne, president of the International Ice Hockey Federation.

He said Ahearne told him "eventually, Canadian hockey players will conform to those in the IIHF.

"For that reason alone, I'm opposed to the motion," said Blair, "if only so he couldn't say 'I told you so.' The Russians would be the last ones to change their style."

The convention voted referees will pay raise for OHA Junior A games and playoffs next season. Referees will receive a $5 increase to $15 for regular season games and $20 for playoffs.

Delegates also threw down a proposal to have all-star games played in every league to raise money for the OHA emergency fund and instead adopted an amendment assessing each club $1 for every home game during the regular schedule.

Frank Buckland, treasurer of the OHA, said there is more than $5,600 in the fund now, "but one disaster would make this amount look small."

Elected to the OHA executive committee were Jim Crombie, Bowmanville; Frank Shrubsey, Thorold; Don Hughes, Stratford; Jack Oakes, Strathroy; and Clarence Schmalz, Walkerton.

Eddie Bush, coach of Hamilton Red Wings of the OHA Junior A, and Mike Welchel, of Fenelon Falls, were presented with the association's gold stick award for outstanding service to hockey.

The OHA and its affiliates—the Northern Ontario Hockey Association, Ontario Minor Hockey Association, Toronto Hockey League and Western Ontario Athletic Association—had a total of 74,000 hockey players registered last season, representing more than half of all hockey players registered in Canada.

'Mr Brick' Takes Derby Prep

'Saidam' Wins Rich Handicap

NEW YORK (AP)—Saidam, making his first start this year, grew the championship hopes of Mongo and Gun Bow in a seven-furlong romp in the $82,350 Grey Lag Handicap at Aqueduct.

He was timed in 1:42 2-5, one-fifth second off the track record.

Mongo came up from fourth place in the field of seven for second money, one-half length in front of Bonjour. Gun Bow, who went off the favorite of the crowd at $2.15, weakened and dropped back to fifth after battling the winner and Red Gar for the early lead.

Saidam paid $8.40, $4.80 and $3.70 and picked up the largest purse of his career, $33,527. Mongo, the second choice, returned $5.10 and $3.90 and Bonjour $5.10.

The winner carried only 114 pounds, compared with 128 each for Mongo and Gun Bow and he made the most of the advantage.

Construction Roundup

By ANDY TURNBULL

SIX-PLEXES

Another six-plex has been started on Sidney St., in the area that already has seven of them built or under construction. Howard Thompson, builder of the first one in the north block north of Wilson Avenue, has foundations in for his second now, just north of the one he built a couple of years ago. Framing of the new building will start this week, and it should be ready for the brick veneer in four or five months. If the demand continues Mr. Thompson has plans and a site for a third six-plex between the first two and the Sidney Court development of Wm. Carsen and Lawrence Lambert. First two buildings of Sidney Court are completed and occupied; the second two are now being plastered and are ready for bricking. Trim of these two buildings will start this week.

Leo Bockley, building two six-plexes and with plans for two more immediately north of Sidney Court, has named his development Idlewood Manor. The first building of the development is almost complete now, and four of the six units are rented. Plastering of the second building is planned for this week-end and there is a chance that work on the third building may start the first of next month.

APARTMENTS

Work on Belleville Towers apartment on Victoria Ave. at George Street is going fast now. The fourth floor was poured last week which leaves one floor and a roof to go. Frames are in for the partitions in most apartments below, and windows are in place on the first and second floors.

Albert Bayne, foreman on the job for Bernard Frotter of Toronto, says the latter and the building closed in by mid-May.

The roof will go on next week, at Lambert and Carsen's 21-suite apartment on John St. There are no stairs in the building as yet for three floors and the basement are rough finished. The roof will be roofing composition over a wooden deck.

SEWERS AND WATER

Norman Lightfoot of Lightfoot Construction is running three crews now, soil, just-in Northern Electric plant now, laying a 21-inch water main for the city. They are blasting all the way, with no problems. Another crew, working in rock but soil, hoping to get it worked south from Dundas St. toward the filter plant.

Robert Lightfoot began April 16 in West Park Village, still working on some contracts left over from last year. The crew have laid a few hundred feet of storm and sanitary sewer on Jim Thye Drive and 600 feet each of storm and sanitary sewer and about 600 feet of water line still to lay. It will take about a month to do it, because the lines are going in about 14 feet below the surface.

HAGGARTY TRANSPORT

Albert (Bud) Parsons of Rozon Contracting, Rexdale, (Toronto) is putting up a Stran-Steel building for Haggarty Transport, on a site north of Highway 401, near Dicken's Motel. He's been working on the erection part of the job for about a week and a half now and has another week and a half to go. Three men are putting up the frame, but it will take about ten men to put on the sheathing. Roxon Contracting is also a dealer for the Stran-Steel buildings, made by Central Bridge in Trenton.

Miron Wiggers dug and poured the foundations for the building last year, and last week foreman John Laymes, of Miron Wiggers, built a loading dock at the site. When the building is closed in, Miron Wiggers' men will return to pour the floor. The building is 70 by 120 feet and will contain office space, warehouse and a truck garage with three big doors for the trucks. Provision has been made for five more doors, to be added later.

SMITH TRANSPORT

The Smith Transport terminal, being built by the Tatham Co. at the end of Adam St. is nearly finished, except the warehouse floor. That floor won't be poured for a while yet though, because the yard is too soft now to get heavy equipment in. Foreman on the job, Howard Lewis, was shifted down to the Stephens-Adamson plant for a few days, to pour a floor in one of the storage sheds there.

ELLIOTT MOTORS

Part of the new Elliott Motors building went into service last week. One corner of the main service area is now being used to wash used cars for the Elliott Motors lot next door. In the quick-service area, a double-post hydraulic hoist is being installed. The only one in the area, the hoist will be able to lift a 60-passenger bus for a grease job.

RAY HEDGER MOTORS

Steel for the roof was delivered to the Ray Hedger Motors site last week, and Foley Foundry men will erect it this week. Foundations of the building were filled in last week, by Douglas Hodson of Brighton.

BELL TELEPHONE

Bell Telephone is removing its poles and lines from the North Front St. bridge and the surrounding area and calls that would normally have gone over these lines will be routed through new lines, passing through conduits built into the bridge. The lines were strung through the bridge last week. H. C. McGee, Bell's line foreman, is in charge of the work. Belleville Utilities Commission men, meanwhile, are re-routing their lines that were once carried on Bell's poles.

Another Bell crew started last week to bury phone lines along the Redcomville road. Working under Foreman Donald Larson, the men started the other side of Redcomville and buried lines almost up to Rossmore last week. This week, they started from the same place again and began working toward Albury. About 75,000 feet of cable is in-lved, each cable carrying 300 to 400 pairs of lines. A large lead grader, converted to a cable-laying unit, is being used to speed the work. The same machine is used continuously for such projects throughout Ontario and Quebec.

BAY BRIDGE

A Department of Highways crew went to work last week, painting the new sections of the Bay Bridge. Work is concentrated on the north portal of the most northerly section of the bridge, replaced last year by the Central Bridge crew working under foreman Ken Fox. A 14-foot-high truck had tried to go through the 13-foot, nine-inch arch.

TRENTON ROAD WORK

Rayner Construction and its subcontractors have about 100 men working on Trenton roads and sewers now, using local labor almost exclusively. Some skilled men have been brought in from outside, when no skilled help was available in town. In the east end, all the underground work is finished on Dundas Street from Campbell to Sidney Street, and crews are starting to fill the roadbed. When the filling is finished, underground work will be started from Sidney Street west to Bay Street, at the bottom of the hill. The two sections will be paved at the same time, sometime during the summer.

On the north end of Sidney St., Carr's Electric, subcontracting for Rayner, is working between the two railway underpasses, just north of North Murray Street. They're doing underground work only up there.

On Dufferin St., underground work is about half finished from Coulter St. north to Dundas and one catch basin is being put in on Coulter Street. No start has been made as yet on repaving the street.

PUTTING IN SEWER and water lines at West Park Village, a Lightfoot Construction crew working under Robert Lightfoot has about a month's work left to do on one of last year's contracts. The work is going slowly, because the lines are buried about 14 feet below ground level.

Hoffa Again Facing Court, Fraud Charges

CHICAGO (AP) — James R. Hoffa, president of the Teamsters' Union, was called to trial on criminal charges today for the third time since taking over leadership of the largest union in the U.S.

Already under conviction for attempting to rig a jury in another case, Hoffa and seven co-defendants are charged with fraudulently obtaining $20,000,000 in loans from Teamsters' pension funds.

A special venire of 100 prospective jurors was on hand for the trial before Judge Richard B. Austin of U.S. District Court. Another 200 have been directed to appear later, if needed.

Lawyers for the government and the defendants have said they expect the trial to last three to five months. It is the second trial this year for Hoffa.

The Teamsters' president and three others were convicted March 4 in Chattanooga, Tenn., of tampering with a jury during Hoffa's 1962 conspiracy trial in Nashville, Tenn. The Nashville trial ended, when the jury was unable to agree on a verdict.

BAIL APPEALED

Hoffa has appealed the conviction and is free on $75,000 bond.

The present trial revolves around a 36-count indictment returned last year against the 51-year-old labor leader and seven others. Conviction on all counts could result in penalties totalling 140 years imprisonment and $37,000 in fines for each of the accused men.

Meanwhile Hoffa and the union's general counsel, Edward Bennett Williams, were reported to be at loggerheads over use of union funds to pay Hoffa's legal expenses.

A union spokesman has denied there is any dispute on the question, but Williams is reliably reported to have advised that use of Teamster funds to defend Hoffa in the trial beginning today would be illegal.

PSYCHOLOGIST DIES

ORILLIA (CP)—Robert D. L. Goodfellow, 54, chief psychologist and director of education at the Ontario hospital school here since 1934, died Saturday after collapsing while working in his yard. Mr. Goodfellow was born at Westport and graduated from Queens University. He interned at the Ontario hospital at Penetanguishene before coming to Orillia.

Cheese Nibbler In London Store Dies

LONDON (AP)—Sir Michael, the mouse that nibbled at the cheeses in a London store that supplies groceries to the elite, is dead.

Michael is the mouse that cavorted in the window of Fortnum and Masons, grocers by appointment to the Queen.

Mike's obituary appears in The Sunday Mirror:

"Sir Michael, the mouse in the window at Fortnum and Masons is dead.

"Poison ended his brief run of nightly frolics at the queen's grocers in Piccadilly.

"Commissionaire for the Top People's store said: "We have a contract with a pesticide firm to keep us free from such things.

"Sir Michael intrigued theatre-goers and night clubbers who watched his caperings among window-display fruit."

Sir Michael's downfall apparently was over-exposure. But he should rest easy. Who else rates four paragraphs in The Mirror?

Woman Pours Gasoline Over Sister Superior

TORONTO (CP) — A woman poured gasoline over the sister superior of a Roman Catholic orphanage Saturday night and then tried to set the sister ablaze. When that failed she stabbed Sister Monica in the back.

Police said a woman entered the Carmelite Sisters orphanage about 8:30 p.m. and started arguing with Sister Monica. Then she poured the gasoline over her and started fumbling with a cigarette lighter.

Sister Monica got the lighter away from the woman and then suffered a stab wound in the back.

The intruder left begging forgiveness, and was later arrested.

Mrs. Francis Sousa, 35, was charged with wounding.

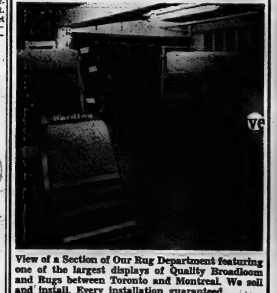
Bayfair First Vessel to Dock Here This Year

Master of the first ship in Belleville this year, John B. Pollard of Kincardine, Sunday received the traditional silk hat from harbormaster Malcolm Smith. He didn't get to keep the hat though — in Belleville the presentation is symbolic only, and the hat is returned to the harbormaster before the ship leaves. In return for the old hat, the captain is given the money to buy a new one.

Sunday was the fourth time Capt. Pollard won the silk in Belleville. Master of the Bayfair Shipping Co. ship Bayfair, he was first in harbor twice with that ship and once each with the Bayquinte and the Bayanna. The Bayquinte has for two years now been moored at the government dock in Belleville, awaiting a purchaser or the scrap heap, the Bayanna ran aground in Deseronto Harbor last year.

Cargo of the 253 - foot Bayfair was 1,440 tons of coal being delivered to Harry Smith Fuels Ltd. The ship arrived about one in the afternoon, discharged her cargo with an English - built self unloading system similar to those produced by Stephens - Adamson of Belleville, and sailed about 5 p.m. for Rochester.

$10,000 Damage To Transport, Driver Hurt



BROCKVILLE (CP) — Damage estimated at $10,000 was caused and one man was hurt in a spectacular transport crash on Highway 401 19 miles east of Brockville just before midnight Sunday.
